This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

THE present volume contains the Calendar of Treasury Papers extending from the accession of Queen Anne (8 March 1702) to the end of the year 1707. The documents to which this and the two previous volumes refer are bound in 104 volumes.

The department of the Treasury remained but for a short time in commission after the accession of Her Majesty, for on May the 6th, 1702, Sidney, Lord Godolphin was made Lord High Treasurer, and did not resign that office until August 1710. He played no unimportant part in the history of this country for a long series of years in the reigns of four successive sovereigns, and occupies a most prominent position in this volume. The large number of the papers minuted under his directions are undeniable evidence of his attention to his duties, as well as of his administrative capacity.* He certainly does not appear to have dealt out the public money with a lavish hand, or without ample inquiry. When vague proposals were made to him, as they often were, he generally required the applicants to state their case more specifically. His frequent personal communication with the Queen is very observable, as well as the number of papers read to her, and her orders thereon. An instance or two of his shrewdness may be given. A petitioner complains that his employment is "much diminished this war," and his Lordship reminds him "that the war will not continue always," which if not satisfactory to the applicant was unanswerable. (See Vol. XCV., No. 18.) To another petitioner he remarks that he did not "think "it reasonable to encourage officers to keep public money "in their hands in order to ask it as a reward for that "which was the duty of their offices" (Vol. XCIX., No. 9). When a warrant was issued for a new silver trumpet for the Duke of Marlborough's trumpeter, a query is put on the back (no doubt by his Lordship's direction), as to what was become of the old one (Vol. XCVII., No. 95).

* Lord Macaulay speaking of him under date 1689, when Lord Godolphin was one of the Commissioners at the Treasury, says:—"This man, "taciturn, clear-minded, laborious, inoffensive, zealous for no government "and useful to every government, had gradually become an almost indis-"pensable part of the machinery of the state."—History of England, Vol. III., p. 21.

A very large proportion of the papers are minuted, and the Minute Books are on the contrary very scanty in their entries. Whilst on the subject of the papers of this period, attention should be drawn to four volumes of a series of Alphabetical Registers forming part of the Treasury Records. In these volumes the minutes indorsed on the papers will be found recorded, except such as are entered in the Minute Books. The following are the dates of the volumes, viz. :—

May to July 1702.
March 1705 to September 1706.
June 1709 to August 1710.
August 1710 to June 1711.

They precede those mentioned in the Seventh Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. App. II. p. 62.

It would seem that Lord Godolphin originated these volumes, for the first of them commences a few days after his appointment, and his administration ceases with the third.

Perhaps some of the most important and interesting papers in this collection will be found amongst those relating to the union of Scotland with England, which took place in the year 1707. This union was a work of so much difficulty and nicety that until that time all attempts which had been made towards it for above a hundred years had proved ineffectual.* And when the union was actually accomplished, the changes introduced met with no little opposition, even resulting in the rising of mobs at Edinburgh and Leith, whilst at Glasgow they more quietly acquiesced in the new order of things. (Vol. CII., No. 84.) The papers give a great many details of the measures taken to assimilate the administration of the affairs of Scotland with those of England. The excise, the customs, the mint, had to be remodelled, and the weights and measures required a considerable amount of readjustment. Twelve gallons Scots were rated at 34 gallons English; but according to the English standards sent to Scotland, the 12 gallons nearly made 37 gallons Scotch, and to add to their difficulty, "the English quart did not agree to the English gallon."† As the result of the union, a series of volumes called North Britain Books came into existence. In them are enrolled a large collection of memorials, reports, warrants, &c. connected with Scotch affairs. They are preserved with the Treasury Records, and are described in the Seventh Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, App. II., pp. 17 and 47.

* See Annals of the Reign of Queen Anne, 1707, p. 211; and Tindal's History of England, Vol. IV., p. 354.

† See Vols. CI., Nos. 65, 66, 68, 78, 97, 103; CII. 1, 40, 57, 64, 71 74, 75, 80; CIII. 3, 20, 53, 56.

Many of the papers, as will be seen by the Index, contain notices of our transactions in and with Portugal, with which country England was then allied against France and Spain; and the papers as to prize money, booty, &c., testify to our successes at Vigo Bay.

The principle that "the King never dies" does not appear to have applied to the debts of the kingly office, for many claims left unpaid by King William the Third were declined to be liquidated in Her Majesty's time. And if the arrears due to the Crown were not paid up, there appears to have been small chance of petitioners ever getting what was due to them. (See Vol. LXXXV., 49, 67, 74; XC. 11, 54, 57.) The minute "no fund for this" was but a poor answer to a legitimate claim on the Government.

In accordance with the plan pursued in the preceding volumes, the Editor would now draw attention to some of the more noticeable documents hereafter described.

Fine Arts.

Sir Godfrey Kneller was allowed for drawing full-length portraits of Her Majesty 50*l.* each by order of the Council, to be presented to ambassadors, and to be sent to the plantations. (See Vol. XCIV., No. 26.)

Seignior Verrio, who was much employed in artistically decorating the palace of Hampton Court, had the same difficulty in obtaining payment for his labour as so many public servants employed in those times experienced. In July 1702, 1,190*l.* were due to him, which did not include the work he had done at Windsor. He complains that his necessities were very pressing, and 600*l.* were ordered for him. (See Vol. LXXXI., No. 22.) He was complaining again in February 1703–4. (See Vol. LXXXIX., No. 41.)

A merchant of London who had contracted for 600*l.* to supply several marble statues from Italy to decorate the same palace by the late King's order, instead of being paid his bill was generously informed that he might have the statues again. (See Vol. LXXXVI., No. 76.)

Biography.

The Archbishop of Armagh.

In a former volume a letter is calendared of Narcissus, Archbishop of Dublin, of 6th May 1701 (Vol. LXXIV., No. 7), in which he unfolds a scheme that was very dear to him, for erecting a public library at Dublin, and for giving part of his books and leaving the remainder thereto after his death. In this volume good testimony is borne to his generous open-handed liberality by the Bishop of London. He says that the Archbishop (then translated to Armagh) had become so cast down with his difficulties occasioned by his generosity, that he contemplated retiring from the archbishopric and setting up a private school for his livelihood. In this Calendar will be found a good part of the Archbishop's interesting letter, in which he relates that he had been three times one of the Lords Justices of Ireland, and had supported the charges of the Government (about 1,500*l.*) out of his own pocket. The library was nearly finished, and would cost him about 1,800*l.* besides books. (See Vol. LXXXVI., No. 107.)

In 1707 an Act of the Irish Parliament was obtained for settling and preserving this library, the particulars of which are set out in the Liber Hiberniæ, Vol. II., Part VI. p. 31.

Dr. Stillingfleet's library formed part of the above collection, and there is the following postscript to a letter which throws some light on its purchase: "Pray let me "desire you to further the Primate's request about getting

" ye 500li in order for buying Dr. Stillingfleet's library, " unless you are afraid we should grow too learned." (See Vol. XCIII., No. 134.) For the better preservation of the larger books the Lord Archbishop had provided iron chains, rods, and clasps, with close lattices, &c. See Liber Hiberniæ, ut supra.

Bishop Kenn.

The following interesting letter of Bishop Kenn (one of the seven bishops sent to the Tower by King James II. for refusing to read the Declaration of Indulgence) is found as an enclosure to a letter of George, Bishop of Bath and Wells, who was the second in succession to Bishop Kenn:—

" All glory be to God.

" My very good Lord,

" Before your Lordshippe leaveng ye towne, I suppose yt you will wait on my Lord Treasurere, it being too much presumption to write to him my selfe, I entreat you to present my most humble acknowledgments to his Lordshippe for procuring me Her Majesty's royal bounty ye last yeare, wch came to me by your hand. I have no title to ye continuance of it, but his Lordshipp's unmerited goodnesse to me, wch I beseech God plentifully to reward, & if his Lordshippe should forbeare to continue it ye discontinuance shall not obliterate my gratefull sense of his favour past. I pray God to send you a prosperous iourney to your diocese, where your presence is generally much desired.

" God keep us in his most holy feare.

" My good Lord,

" Your Lordshipp's most affect. freind & br

" Feb. 27th. Tho. Kenn."

[Addressed]

" To ye Right Reverend Fathere in God,

" George, Lord Bishoppe of Bath & Wells

" present."

(See Vol. XCVII. No. 98.)

Sir Isaac Newton.

This volume, like its predecessors, produces several papers in which Mr., afterwards Sir, Isaac Newton as an officer of the Mint was more or less concerned, and it may be observed that when he was one of the persons signing the papers, they were generally written by his own hand. Perhaps it need hardly be said that they bear the impress of his lucid mind, and show how carefully he went into the minutiæ of all that he had to attend to. The elaborate paper of 7th July 1702 on the value of foreign gold coins in proportion to silver will bear out this remark. (See Vol. LXXX., No. 105.) Another paper also, on a proposal to raise the price of tin, further confirms this observation. (See Vol. XCIX., No. 97.)

Daniel de Foe.

There are two notices of the talented popular writer De Foe, or Fooe as he is thrice written, viz., first under 25 Jan. 1702–3, where his name occurs in a list of persons to be prosecuted by the Treasury solicitor for the libel entitled, "The shortest way with Dissenters" (Vol. LXXXIV., No. 41); the second is as to 50*l.* reward claimed for apprehending him by one who did "not care to appear himself." The Earl of Nottingham managed the business for this shy individual, and the 50*l.* found its way to him out of secret service money. (See Vol. LXXXV., No. 154.)

Common Rights.

Permission to grub up a coppice in Epping Forest was refused by the Lord High Treasurer, as it was contrary to the opinion of the lieutenant of the forest, who did not think the verderers would join in a certificate as usual if it were desired of them. (See Vol. LXXXV., No. 70.)

The Attorney General gives his opinion on the making of new copyholds out of wastes, Oct. 30th, 1705. (See Vol. XCV., No. 120.) Also as to certain derelict land on which common rights were claimed. (Vol. XCVII., No. 79.)

Claims to estovers or fuel wood in the New Forest are made by various freeholders and others on the borders of the New Forest. (See Vol. XCVII., Nos. 49 and 52.)

An important report on the rights of the islanders of Portland to certain dues for stone quarried in that island is calendared in Vol. CI., No. 83. The paper is, however, wrongly dated by Mr. James Mountague, the Solicitor General, and should have been 31 March 1708 instead of 1707. It touches on the rights of the Crown (the Queen being lady of the manor) and the rights of the commoners there. The stone for Greenwich Hospital, St. Paul's Cathedral, Chelsea College, and several churches, was obtained from thence.

Historical Notices.

A copy of a letter of 2/13 August 1703 gives some details of the plans for the investment of the town of Huy in Germany, under the command of the Duke of Marlborough. (See Vol. LXXXVII., No. 2.)

The copy of another letter, from the Earl of Peterborough, gives an account of the successes in Catalonia in 1705. (See Vol. XCVI., No. 51.)

The autumn of the year 1703 was memorable for a fearful storm in and around England, and there is frequent mention in these papers of the havoc caused by it. The Bishop of Oxford craved successfully the indulgence of the Lord High Treasurer for time to pay his first fruits, as, besides other things, he had to repair the "hurt done by the late great storm." (See Vol. LXXXIX., No. 22.) Another bishop, viz., Dr. Kidder, Bishop of Bath and

Wells, as is well known, lost his life by the fall of a stack of chimneys blown down by the same storm. His successor also wanted consideration for his first fruits, and mentions that one part of the dilapidations produced by the storm was the cause of his predecessor's death; and another part of them was hurled down so shortly after, that it could not be distinguished whether it was before or after his death. This seems to have made it a difficult matter as to who was answerable to make good the dilapidations. He obtained a respite. (See Vol. LXXXIX., No. 85.)

Another sufferer by this storm was the widow of the ill-fated Henry Winstanley, who built the Edystone, or Eddystone lighthouse, and was swept away in it, having expended about 5,000*l.* in the erection. She supplicated the royal bounty, and obtained 200*l.* at the end of the year 1707, and 100*l.* per annum from Lady-day 1708. (See Vol. XCIII., No. 30.)

The widow of the gallant Micaiah Browning, the captain of the ship which brought relief to the famishing inhabitants of Londonderry, when so sorely besieged in 1689, seeks payment of nine years' arrears of her pension of 60*l.* a year, settled on her by King William III. The response to this relict of as brave a man as Ireland ever produced, who volunteered to risk his life, and lost it, for the succour of his fellow citizens, will hardly be considered generous. Its terms are :—"To be paid so much as is due in ye Queen's time." (See Vol. LXXXV., No. 74.)

Law.

One of the many attempts at law amendment was proposed by John Cresset, Esq. He asked to be allowed to employ himself wholly in inspecting, reviewing, and separating the most excellent common and statute laws from the rubbish they almost lay buried under, and to lay the same before learned judicious persons, that they might amend them. An undated paper. (See Vol. LXXXIII., No. 116.)

On the right to repair certain bridges, see the Attorney General's Report, Vol. XCV., No. 3.

Lighthouses in Ireland.

A full abstract of some interesting papers on certain lighthouses in Ireland is given under date 1st August 1704. There had been six lighthouses in Ireland, but they were then reduced to two, and those were insufficiently maintained. Coals, burnt in a grate, were used to produce the light. The fires from these were occasionally put out by the rain, or the smoke arising from them obscured the light, so that they were at times of little use. They had to be blown up by a smith's bellows. At one lighthouse it was proposed to place large lamps, 36 in number, as the light would be more steady and constant. The Earl of Abercorn had a grant which was dependant upon these lighthouses. It was quite inadequate, and if the lights were kept up, his lordship would have been a great loser. He surrendered the grant, and received 1,000*l.* a year for three years. (See Vol. XCI., No. 71; Vol. XCII., No. 58; and Vol. XCIII., No. 57.)

Records at the Tower of London.

Much information as to the state of the public records preserved at the Tower of London, and the calendars to the same, as well as to the steps taken to reduce the records to order, will be found hereafter set out. In the Cæsar's Chapel they were lying in confused heaps, and were in danger of perishing. (See Vol. LXXXIX., No. 147.) A committee was appointed to report on them, and on the place wherein they were kept. (See Vol. XC., No. 64.)

They made their report on 6th September 1704, and recommended that such as were written on one side should be fixed into books with paste prepared with "colliquintida," to secure it against worms. The records of each reign should be "glued" on indiscriminately as they were cleaned, and when a book was finished and bound it should be indexed. Abstracts of the records, and not mere names of persons and places, were to be given. (See Vol. XCI., No. 117.) The details of what the Lord High Treasurer ordered to be done to preserve these records, and make them accessible, are referred to in Vol. XCII., No. 32. Quarterly reports were afterwards made by the keeper, showing the progress of the sortation and calendaring, the first being rendered on 25th December 1704. (See XCII., No. 82.) In that of 25th March 1705 specimens of the paper proposed for the calendar are enclosed. (See Vol. XCIII., No. 115.)

Statistics.

The agents for taxes state that the taxes of the "cities of London, Middlesex, and Westminster" amounted to 430,000*l.* yearly, being more than a sixth of the taxes of the whole kingdom. (See August 5, 1703, Vol. LXXXVII., No. 15.)

Topography.

St. James's Park.

In the methods proposed to improve St. James's Park, the doors and passages through the same were recommended to be only so many as Her Majesty thought fit. There are also other proposed regulations, amongst which no dogs or rude people were to be admitted, and a servant was to be kept, to wear the Queen's badge or coat, to look after the sentries, as there was no dependence on them. (See Vol. LXXXII., No. 80.)

Cotton House.

A proposal to remove the library of Cotton House to a depository over the usher's room in the House of Lords, is made by Sir Christopher Wren in his report upon the room it then occupied in Cotton House, which he says could not be repaired without pulling down a good part of the dwelling house. The room proposed would be more capacious, and only two fifths of the expense. (See Vol. LXXXVII., No. 126.)

His scheme did not find favour, and this rare collection remained in Cotton House, and for better accommodation 27 presses were fitted up and ordered to be paid for. (See July 29, 1704, Vol. XCI., No. 66.)

The papers which detail the negotiations for the sale of Cotton House to preserve this collection are hereafter calendared. The House of Lords recommended the purchase to Her Majesty, that this treasure of books and MSS. so generously given for the public service should not remain any longer useless and in danger of perishing. In Sir John Cotton's estimate of the premises, he says the ground was capable of great improvement by its near situation to the two Houses of Parliament, where convenience might be made for the accommodation of members of Parliament by building a square which might contain 24 houses. The members might go directly out of "Parliament House" into their lodgings. (See 15 May 1706, Vol. XCVIII., No. 51.) Some particulars of the derivation of title to the premises are given under June 17, 1706. (See Vol. XCVIII., No. 102.) Several years elapsed from the time the collection was secured to the nation before proper provision was made for its preservation; but at last, after some bargaining between the Government, who wanted the house for 4,000*l.*, and

Sir John Cotton, who wanted 5,000*l.* for it, the property was finally bought for 4,500*l.* (See Vol. C., No. 45, and Minute Book, Vol. XIV., No. 136.)

New Palace Yard.

The clock tower and clock having been demolished, efforts were made to get a good large sundial set up, that the members of Parliament, the courts at Westminster Hall, the officers of the Exchequer, and others might thus have the "great convenience" of knowing the time, and the Lord High Treasurer was willing to pay the charge if it did not exceed 20*l.* (See Vol. XCVII., No. 36.)

The Old Gate House.

The keeper of the Gate House prison claimed 2*s.* 6*d.* a week each for the accommodation of certain French gentlemen who were prisoners of war. The accommodation was of the scantiest description, as some of them had to lie on the boards. The keeper was, however, ordered to find beds for them fit for their condition. (See Vol. XCII., No. 17.)

Some other particulars of the Old Gate House occur under date 16 Feb. 1705–6. It was then in contemplation to pull the building down. (See Vol. XCVII. No. 70.)

Dover Harbour.

A scheme for cleansing and scouring Dover Harbour by building a wall across it, with sluices, through which the back water was allowed to rush at low water, is said to have answered well. There are also notices of works required for repair of the pier and harbour. (See June 1, 1706, Vol. XCVIII., No. 75.) Exceptions were taken against the scheme, and other papers are described relating thereto, in Vol. XCIX., No. 82, and Vol. CI., No. 37.

The Excise Office.

Information as to the old Excise Office may be gathered from papers described in Vol. LXXXVI., Nos. 17 and 57.

Trade and Manufactures.

The Linen Manfuacture in Ireland.

As the Treasury Papers contain so much information in regard to the setting up of the linen manufacture in Ireland, and the difficulties it had to contend with before it became established, some little account of its rise and progress, drawn from these papers and from some other sources, may not be out of place here.

Anderson in his "Origin of Commerce" (Vol. I., p. 451), quoting from Hakluyt (Vol. I., p. 187), says, that as early as the year 1430, linen was manufactured in Ireland. The manufacture had, however, come to little or nothing, for the Lords Justices observe on 1 Feb. 1706 (Treasury Papers, Vol. XCVII., No. 51), that seven years before, i.e. 1699, it was of no manner of consequence. What there was manufactured of it was in the north, and the people were entirely ignorant of the art of managing and working flax, spinning the yarn, and whitening the cloth, and they were absolutely strangers to the looms and other utensils necessary for the work. The finest they could make was worth but 12 or 15 pence a yard, but it had then (1706) risen to be worth 8*s.* and 9*s.* an English yard. An Act of Parliament for its encouragement, in 7 & 8 Will. III. (cap. 39), was obtained, and Anderson says, "This law was wisely framed for the "encouragement particularly of French Protestant " refugees to settle in Ireland, many of whom were well " skilled in the once noble linen manufacture of France, " since sunk almost to nothing; and late experience has " shown that this law laid the foundation of Ireland's " present* most flourishing and almost immense manu- " facture of linens and cambricks." (See Ib., Vol. II, p. 626.) And again, at p. 642, he says, A.D. 1698, " In " the same year the English House of Peers addressed " King William in order to his discouraging the woollen " manufactures of Ireland, the increase of which had " given umbrage to the people of England, and that His " Majesty would, on the contrary, encourage the linen " manufacture of the said kingdom of Ireland, pursuant " to an Act of Parliament in the year 1696, already men- " tioned, which manufacture has since been brought to " great perfection in that kingdom. The English House " of Commons likewise addressed the King to induce the " people of Ireland to cultivate the joint interests of both " kingdoms, and that as Ireland is dependent on and " protected by England in the enjoyment of all they have, " they would be content to apply themselves to the linen " manufacture; whereby they would enrich themselves " and be beneficial to England at the same time, both " which points have since been successfully effected."

An Order in Council dated 1 Feb. 1699, for setting up the manufacture, is described in the Calendar of Treasury Papers, Vol. LXVII., No. 24, and there is a warrant to the Lords Justices of Ireland, dated 14 Feb. $\frac{1699}{1700}$ in the Irish Book (Treasury), Vol. V., p. 56, granted on the advice of the Commissioners of Trade, directing letters patent to be passed in Ireland to appoint trustees for the establishment of a linen manufacture in Ireland, to take charge of an allowance of 800*l.* per annum for 10 years to pay the interest of 10,000*l.* at 8 per cent., or any part thereof, which should be advanced by Lewis Crommelin or Crummelin, merchant,* or by his procurement. He was to make a bleaching yard and a folding or pressing house, to sow, cultivate, and prepare hemp and flax, and to provide all necessary tools and utensils, looms and spinning wheels for the persons employed. This advance was to be repaid by them in such small payments as they were able to make. He was also to advance the necessary sums for subsistence of such workmen and their families as should come from abroad, as well as for the persons in Ireland who should be employed. The trustees were to see that 200*l.* per annum were allowed to Mr. Crommelin during pleasure, and 120*l.* per annum to three assistants, and a pension of 60*l.* per annum to a French minister.

* The volume was printed in 1787.

* Louis Crommelin was a native of St. Quintin in Picardy. As there was no part of this manufacture that he could not work with his own hands, he was encouraged to come over to England by King William III. to further that object. He says in his essay on "The Improving of Hempen and Flaxen Manufactures in the Kingdom of Ireland," printed at Dublin, 1705 (British Museum, $\frac{1029\ e\ 11}{6}$), that he had more than one interview on these subjects with His Majesty. His essay is elaborately reviewed in "An Inquiry into the State and Progress of the Linen Mannfacture of Ireland, by Robert Stephenson," printed at Dublin, 1757, where much may be learnt on this subject. The author has evidently a strong prejudice against foreigners, and on several points he takes Mr. Crommelin to task for his ignorance of what was done in countries beyond his native place.

Smiles, in his volume on the Huguenots, says Crommelin belonged to a family who had carried on the linen manufacture in the various branches in France for upwards of 400 years, and that he was singularly well fitted for the office to which the King called him, being a person of admirable business qualties, of excellent good sense, and of remarkable energy and perseverance (p. 360). And again, that the Irish Parliament voted him the public thanks for his patriotic efforts towards the establishment of the linen trade in Ireland, of which he was unquestionably the founder. Crommelin died in 1727, and was buried beside other members of his family in the churchyard of Lisburn. Ib., p. 364.

In furtherance of the above warrant, King William III., by his letters patent dated 17th August 1700, constituted the chief governor or governors of Ireland and several other persons trustees for erecting a linen manufacture in that country, allowing for the same 1,180*l.* a year for 10 years. No part of the sum of 10,000*l.*, previously named, had been advanced by Mr. Crommelin, but several plain looms had been erected of the value of 30*l.* each, as well as other looms called "Estilles,"* for making fine linen in imitation of that of France and Holland, of the value of 50*l.* each. The patent had determined by the death of the King; and Queen Anne, by warrant dated 4th December 1702, authorised the trustees to accept these looms as stock, and 8 per cent. to be allowed to such owners as had advanced the money. She also authorised letters patent to be passed under the great seal of Ireland, appointing other trustees for a similar purpose for 10 years. (See Irish Book (Treasury), Vol. V., p. 266.) By a further warrant of 12th June 1704, the Queen appointed some of the same and other trustees to manage the payment of the 1,180*l.* a year for 10 years. (See Ib., p. 319.)

An interesting document on the subject of this manufacture (previously slightly noticed) will be found under date 1st February 1705–6 (Vol. XCVII.; No. 51). The manufacture had then made a wonderful advance, under the care of Mr. Lewis Crommelin, and the Lords Justices were very anxious that the art and mystery should be extended from the north to the south of Ireland, for the people to whom it had been already communicated were generally Scotch, and of that extraction, who would most certainly engross that manufacture to themselves, and "never suffer it to come out of that country." The Lords Justices therefore press it upon the Duke of Ormonde to take measures to induce Mr. Crommelin to remove himself and family to some part of the centre of the kingdom, in order to settle a colony there and establish this manufacture, that it might soon diffuse itself into the other three parts of the kingdom, "which is now generally inhabited by English, and those of that extraction." Kilkenny was the place recommended by Mr. Crommelin for the goodness of the air, water, and soil. He demanded 2,500*l. to remove himself, family, and looms, to build a bleaching yard there, and an addition to his patent of four years. The revenue would not allow this, and he made a further proposal for 12 years addition to his patent, giving up the ready money.

The Commissioners of Trade concurred in the desirability of the removal suggested, and saw no objection to the additional term to the patent. (See 17th June 1706, Vol. XCVIII., No. 101.)

The Lord High Treasurer, by a minute on the dorse, says "that when Her Maj^ty^ shall think fit to inlarge "this term, my lord thinks it should be under ye restric-"tion to make only coarse linens."

The considerable merchants in the city of London, and the importers of foreign linens, looked upon this scheme of the further extension of the linen manufacture in Ireland with anything but favour. The Commissioners of Customs in England having called upon them for their opinion, they, as might be supposed, expressed it pretty strongly. They said that it would entirely hinder the importation of all broad

Germany linen, "damas," diaper, &c., from Hamburgh, as also of all low-priced linen from Flanders and Holland, the duties on them being so great. If it were further encouraged they would lose the export of woollen manufactures; for if we did not take their linen, they on the continent would fall to making woollen manufactures. They (the merchants) proposed a duty on certain of the linens imported from Ireland.

These views the Commissioners of Customs approved, and strongly advised against the scheme. (See Vol. XCIX., No. 85.)

The Lords Justices, urged by the trustees for the linen manufacture to recommend this matter to the Duke of Ormonde, that he might use his interposition with Her Majesty for its effectual encouragement, write on the 21st of January 1707 to the Duke, concurring entirely with the trustees, that the promotion thereof, under the present decay of trade, would be the only means of recovering the poor sinking country from its miserable poverty. (See Vol. CI., No. 18.)

Notwithstanding the objections raised against this extension of the manufacture, the Duke of Ormonde (who had steadily advocated the matter all through) was successful to the extent of getting a promising minute put on his application of 25th March 1707 (Vol. CI., No. 72) to the Lord High Treasurer. The Duke says the people on that side (Ireland) were very intent upon it,* and that the Commissioners of Customs had only consulted the merchants concerned in the Hamburgh trade, who were against all manner of encouragement of the linen manufacture in Ireland; but he hoped that would have no effect in opposing a national interest and concern, wherein both Houses of Parliament on this side (i.e., England) had so heartily concurred. The minute above referred to was:—"Read "26 March 1707. A w[t] to be prepared, but to express "therein that 'tis consented to, in consideration of the "loss that k[ingdom] susteyns by the prohibic̃on of the "exportac̃on of y[e] woollen manufactures from thence, & "y[e] encouragem[t] that was intended by y[e] English parl[t] at "that time to be given to the linen manufacture in "Ireland."

It seems that at this stage some of the trustees had a mind to oppose the removing of the manufacture to Kilkenny. (See 13 May 1707, Vol. CII., No. 18.) They wanted it to be set up at Cootehill. (See 23 May 1707, Vol. CII., No. 29.) However, to give effect to the above minute, a draft of the letters patent was sent over from Ireland for the Lord High Treasurer's approval, in June 1707, in which it was proposed that seven years should be added to Mr. Crommelin's patent, and for his charges in removing into the south, he promising to set up 40 looms the first year, and to increase them to 60 in two years more, and to keep them constantly employed in making such sort of foreign cloths as he should think fit. (See Vol. CII., 55.) Many exceptions were taken to this draft of patent, and although they had been fully answered from Ireland on 23 May 1707 (see Vol. CII., No. 29), yet even then the grant of the extension of Mr. Crommelin's patent was not obtained, for the Earl of Pembroke, the successor of the Duke of Ormonde, writes to the Lord High Treasurer on 6 August 1707 (Vol. CII., 83) that no further progress had been made, though it would be for the general good of the kingdom. There was a further reason to induce Her Majesty to grant what was desired, viz., that the whole town of Lisburn, where the French colony was settled for carrying on that manufacture, was lately destroyed by an accidental fire, and they had not provided themselves with habitations, in expectation of Her Majesty's pleasure for their removal to Kilkenny.

This paper is minuted: — "Read 10 Aug. 1707. Orderd."

Subsequently another board of trustees for the linen and hempen manufactures was established in the ninth year of Queen Anne, by an Act of the Irish Parliament. It consisted of 72 members, appointed for life. (See Liber Hiberniæ, Vol. II., Part VII., p. 226.)

The facts here brought together will make it apparent that the sister country had been hardly dealt with, for she had been induced to give up the manufacture of wool with the understanding that the linen manufacture should be encouraged, and then experienced all these obstacles to its establishment. (See Vol. CI., No. 18.) But the justice of the case was too strong to be resisted, and the success of the manufacture in Ireland was more remarkable than the difficulties with which it had to contend. To prove this it need only be said that in 1689 Ireland did not export linen to the value of 6,000*l.* per annum, but in 1741 its exports had increased to 600,000*l.* (See Anderson's Origin of Commerce, Vol. III., p. 230.)

Tapestry.

A notice of another manufacture, which was as much upon the decline as the last was upon the rise, is contained in a report of the Surveyor General of 11 January 1702–3. This manufacture was carried on at the Tapestry House at Mortlake, which was very old and ruinous, where there were 16 looms comprised in two work-houses. There were also certain garrets, an old chapel, &c. Some additional topographical and other particulars are given. It is added that the commodity did not vend as formerly, and so there had been but little work of late years. (See Vol. LXXXIV., No. 22.)

Stationery Contracts.

A tender for the supply of stationery for the use of the Commissioners of Customs, at 20 per cent. lower than it was supplied, was accepted, but one Mr. Sharpe was to continue to supply it jointly with the contractor. The prices proposed by the latter were not to be exceeded, and the articles were to be as good as those supplied by Mr. Sharpe. (See Vol. C., No. 13.)

Miscellaneous.

The Commissioners of Customs discourage the transfer of offices on payment of part of the salaries from the incoming to the outgoing occupants of offices, as the purchasers would be apt to make up their salaries by defrauding the Crown, or by exacting from the subject, and "my Lord" agreed with the Commissioners. (See Vol. LXXXIV., No. 21.)

The sureties for a Customs' officer consisted, amongst others, of a poor fellow who was a prisoner in the Queen's Bench, a poor barber in Finch Lane whose goods were seized, and a journeyman cooper, a poor man who had absconded. (See Vol. LXXXV., No. 26.)

Twenty pounds were paid out of secret service money as compensation for the bite of a great dog which went mad, belonging to the receipt of the Exchequer. (See Vol. LXXXVI., No. 113.)

The Master of the Rolls, in order that he might take the air, was allowed the privilege of having a gap left in the wall which was being built opposite his house in

Knightsbridge, for enclosing Hyde Park. (See Vol. XCII., No. 115.)

A royal present of hawks to the Queen from the King of Denmark did not appear to have been very acceptable, for the hawks were bestowed by Her Majesty on the keeper, together with 60*l.* for his trouble in looking after them. Whether he was gratified does not appear. It would seem that hawks were no greater favourites with Her Majesty than the ducks in St. James's Park were with her royal brother-in-law. (See Vol. LXXXVII., No. 105; XCIV., No. 86.)

Medals of the value of 55*l.* were distributed to the master of a vessel, three mariners, and a boy, for their extraordinary courage in having set upon 13 Frenchmen in whose charge the vessel then was, and recapturing it. (See Vol. LXXXVII., No. 133.)

Certain Greek youths were decoyed away from Oxford, and a narrative of what happened to them is given. (See Vol. LXXXVII., No. 142.) Dr. Woodroffe, who superintended their instruction and maintenance at Oxford, had considerable difficulty in obtaining the means necessary to meet the expense. (See Vol. XCVI., No. 104.)

There is mention of an engine of the diving-bell species, whereby work could be done for several hours under water. James Trefusis was endeavouring to get permission to have for seven years the treasure he should recover by it out of the sea. (See Vol. LXXXIX., No. 111.)

Interesting particulars are afforded as to the hospital of St. Thomas's, Southwark, and the care of sick and wounded seamen, during the reign of King William the Third and the beginning of that of Anne; the allowance for diet, care, surgeons, &c. The governors, in their petition, remark that it seemed reasonable that those who were wounded in the public service should be repaired at the public charge. Two of the medical officers had obtained a large payment for the same in a clandestine manner. (See Vol. XC., No. 55.) There is also the report of the Commissioners for sick and wounded seamen in answer thereto. (See Vol. XCV., No. 28.) In their view sending the sick to St. Thomas's and St. Bartholomew's hospitals, was only to ease the Government of the charge, and they never heard of the payment of such allowances.

Philip Raleigh, Esq., a grandson of Sir Walter Raleigh, who had been brought up to accounts, is an applicant for employment, and the Lord High Treasurer was willing to recommend him for anything for which he was qualified. (See Vol. XC., No. 58.)

The widow of Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Bart., of Islet Hall, Cumberland, whose husband had left to the Queen 600*l.* as conscience money to satisfy taxes he ought to have paid to the Crown, made it a point of conscience to oppose the payment of that legacy, and the plea of six small children induced Her Majesty to give up her claim. (See Vol. XCIII., No. 109, and XCIV., No. 57.)

One who says that he had lived almost "25 years under the shadow of the sunbeams of" the Lord High Treasurer's favour, adds that if his lordship would not do him good he must prepare for sudden death, which he prophesies must be in a few days, except a miracle should happen. His petition is probably a good index to himself, as he appears by the Commissioners of Customs' account of him to have muddled his intellect by drunkenness and debauchery, so that he must have required his lordship's sunshine on his merits and his shadow over his faults. (See Vol. XCIV., No. 53.)

Another says that his lordship was now in such a station that his countenance might be like rain upon the mown grass to him and his family. (See Vol. LXXIX., No. 102.)

The family of Killigrew made several successful applications to the Lord High Treasurer. Mr. Henry Killigrew claims to be a near kinsman to his lordship. Mr. William, however, was the most importunate. He describes himself as a poor relation, and reminds his lordship that "qui cito dat, bis dat." (See Index.)

Dr. Charles Morley claims to have been a medical reformer in the navy, having so controlled the surgeons' chests, and brought them to be furnished with good medicines by the Apothecaries' Company, that they were no longer stuffed with unwholesome and improper medicines, resulting in the loss of many seamen's lives. (See Vol. XCVIII., No. 100.)

Her Majesty acted as her own surveyor, or rather inspector of nuisances, when a complaint was made by Lady Diana Howard about a house and kennel which had originally been built for King Charles the Second's spaniels, near her ladyship's dwelling in Duke Street, Westminster. (See Vol. XCIX., No. 76.)

A ready means was then found for raising money for the poor, or for charitable objects, by cutting down the trees in the royal forests, and Lord Ranelagh sends up a pathetic appeal to the Lord High Treasurer to have the fine old trees in Cranbourne Chace spared. He implores his lordship's pity for his afflicted neighbours in their anticipated loss, "and for his devoted servant old Ranelagh." Even the heart of the surveyor is touched with pity at his lordship's appeal; but from his reply, as the woodman's axe was not to come within a mile of Cranbourne, the old trees probably survived their old friend. (See Vol. CI., No. 69.)

The Index has been prepared by Mr. R. A. Roberts, a gentleman on this establishment, to whom the Editor is indebted for various suggestions during the passing of the volume through the press, and which he is glad to have the opportunity of acknowledging.

[About 31 March.] 37. A paper docquetted:—" Mem[ll] for the Marq[uis] D'Arzeliers." There were due up to the last day of March 1702, 500*l.* He afterwards went to Genoa, where the 100*l.* per annum was continued, and 30*l.* for the carriage of letters; 260*l.* were due for the same, and 297*l.* were further due; the whole claim was for 1,057*l.* 10*s.* He also begged for a continuation of the 100*l.* per ann. since the accession. A recommendation of him to the King, signed by a great number of bishops, members of parliament, &c., setting forth his services and sufferings, from which it would appear that if news had not arrived of the King's coming " to free us from Popery, slavery, and arbitrary power," he " most certainly would have been executed;" praying for the King's favour and consideration to him.

The petition is also accompanied by number 2,318 of the London Gazette. 4 pages.

[Early in April.] 40. Letter from Mr. Isaac Newton to the Lords of the Treasury, praying orders as to the coronation medals, the time being short. The silver medals might be 22 and the gold 20 in the pound weight troy. If a pound weight were divided into 18 medals they would take the impression better, for the former gold medals were too thin. The coinage duty, in the opinion of the Attorney General, was inapplicable to this service, and other money would be requisite. ½ page.

10 April. 47. Letter from Charles Hore to the Lords of the Treasury. Had waited a long time by direction of Mr. Edward Harley, Chairman to the Committee of Parliament appointed to examine into his complaint against the Queen's brewhouse at S[t] Katherine's. His complaint had saved the Government (as it appeared to the House of Commons) between 4,000*l.* and 5,000*l.* per ann.; if their Lordships thought that service and 12 months spent in the discovery deserved no reward, he should content himself in having so far served his country. He knew some who had received a sum from their Lordships to the value of what they discovered. He desired to know if their Lordships would reward him or no, that he might pursue other methods and no longer neglect his business in fruitless attendance at the board. Dated April 10, 1702.

been so long out of possession of their lands, had been at considerable charges to perfect the agreement, which had passed through all the forms of the Treasury, and as the bill had been read twice and the sessions drew to an end, Her Majesty would give directions to the Lords of the Treasury thereon.

Out of this remainder several sums had been paid on account of the country mints, other sums due exceeded the remainder If these were placed on the coinage duty the remainder would be clear except his Lordship allowed out of it for rebuilding the press house and paying Mr. Weddell a salary of 60*l.* per ann. 24 April. 63. Presentment of the Com^rs^ of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury. They learnt that a charter was being prepared by the Attorney General for the royal signet, to unite the two East India Companies, and that a clause was to be inserted, that the common seal of the company should be taken as a security for the duties of goods imported, instead of the particular securities which had for many years been taken. They moved their L^ps^ that no such clause should pass. If it had not been for the advantage the crown had of late years, by taking particular sureties, the duties payable by the old company would have come very slowly out of their hands. By the charters to the old company, they ought to give good and sufficient bond, with sureties, to the use of the crown, and by the Lord Chief Baron and his brethren this had been construed to intend special and particular security, and they saw no reason why the two companies, when united, should be under fringes for their partizans, crape bonnet-bands, black swords, gloves, &c., with other things not thought of; the estimate amounted to 6,268*l.* 7*s.* 6½*d.*

The coronation estimate was about 10,000*l.*, but there being several tradesmen in the office put in by Lord Preston, who had great sums due to them, and had put down the prices higher, they were discontinued and it then amounted to 7,439*l.* 8*s.* 5½*d.* Dated 22 May 1702. 1 page.

May 22. 102. Letter from John Key to the L^d^ High Treasurer. Mr. Lowndes had told him that his Lordship spoke very kindly of him when his petition was read. He was still unprovided for. His Lordship was now in such a station that his countenance might be like rain upon the mown grass to him and his family; praying his Lordship to bestow on him what he thought fit.

May 24. 104. Letter of Capt. G. Delavale to William Lowndes, Esq. He was suffering violently from the scurvy. Would Mr. Lowndes inform his Lordship that at the Committee of Council there was no mention of his maintaining the Moors, but the 500*l.* was ordered for the support of himself and family. It seemed to him that he should have been entitled to the 500*l.* whether he had succeeded in redeeming the captives or no. The bill of charges was not barely for their maintenance in their passage, but during the time of the treaty, which was spent chiefly on board for five months. His Majesty allowed for their coming over and maintained them here, and it was probable would have sent them back at his own charge. He ran the hazard of being made a slave himself to make his countrymen free. They were most of them in Her Majesty's ships, and he believed Her Majesty since the fitting of the grand fleet, had not got so many seamen at so small a charge as those he had delivered in.

On the back are memoranda of his claims and there are three minutes, the last of which is:—"Read to y^e^ Queen 8 July 1702. 500*l.* to be allow'd instead of 671*l.* 3/ 10." 1⅓ pages.

[Before May 26.] 108. Report of Sir Edw. Northey, Attorney General, to the Lords of the Treasury, giving his opinion on the points raised in an extract from the surveyor general's report made upon the petition of John Peters, gent., touching the [grant of the] manor or lordship of Epworth, in the county of Lincoln, the manors or lordships of Wyberton and Langton, near Horncastle, in the same county, and the manor of Stapleford-Abbots alias Stapleford-Regis, in the county of Essex, mortgaged to Sir George de Carteret, knt. and bart., Lieut.-Governor of the Island of Jersey. Also as to a lease of certain lead mines in Yorkshire, excepted out of a grant made to Lofthouse and Beck by King Philip and Queen Mary; again as to a place called Hand Alley, in the parish of St. Botolph without Bishopsgate, with the houses thereon; and the ground adjoining to Still Alley in Houndsditch; and further the estate of Thomas White alias Whitebread, convicted of high treason in the reign of Charles II., viz., the site of the dissolved monastery of Newnham alias Newenham in the county of Bedford. These last premises were found in 1689 to have been held by the Lord Petre for the use of an English nunnery in Normandy.

The report gives some account of the history of these properties and touches upon the Queen's title to them.

Minuted:—"26 May 1702. To be laid before ye Queen. Read to ye Queen 9th June 1702. The Queen thinks ye grant desired will be vexatious."

He found, however, that his brother pensioners had received their pay until within four or five years past; but he, being 100 miles from London, and never having any notice thereof, had not received one penny, and now came to London to petition Her Majesty for his arrears.
Minuted:—"29 May 1702. There is no provision made for these arrears." 1 page.

Sir Robert Howard was afterwards admitted auditor of the receipt of the Exchequer. King Charles II. in the 26th year of his reign granted to the Marquis of Carmarthen the same offices and the annual fee of 316*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, the aforesaid house, &c. On the death of Sir Robert Howard three of the Lords of the Treasury admitted Christopher Mountague, Esq., in trust for Lord Hallifax, and soon after the then Lords of the Treasury admitted Lord Hallifax to those offices without any right so to do: praying to be admitted to those offices.

May. 121. Memorial of the officers of the marine regiments. The marine regiments were in a deplorable condition during the last war for want of a particular paymaster, multitudes of them having starved through the neglect of those under whose government they were at that time. Being apprehensive they should fall under the like misfortune, they had petitioned for and obtained Walter Whitfeild, Esq., as their paymaster, and had subscribed out of their own pay for an allowance to him. They desire his L^ps^ directions that he might enter on his business speedily. They were no part of the 40,000 men granted by Parliament for the land service, but a separate body under the L^d^ High Admiral, and paid out of the money appropriated to the navy, wherefore they conceived that the paymaster general of the land forces had no manner of right nor pretence to pay them, and they requested that they might have no concern with him.

The officers of ordnance thought the request reasonable, but the petitioners had not ordnance or stores from the government during the last war, and to gratify them would encourage many more to desire the same and bring an extraordinary charge on the office. Dated 2 June 1702.

Also the petition. 2½ pages.

June 2. 7. Presentment by the Postmasters to the Lord High Treasurer, advising an increase of wages as in the late war to the commander and seamen of the packet boats employed in carrying the mails between England and Holland. June 5. 15. Report of the Earl of Rochester, Lord Lieut. of Ireland, on two petitions of the Duke of Ormond to the Queen. He had seen a representation that if the duties of prizage and butlerage of wines, (belonging to the Duke) were collected by the royal officers, it would advance the revenue. He did not doubt that the advantage to the crown by the lease from the Duke of Ormond in seven years was 5864*l.* He hoped to be excused from giving an opinion on the prayer of the petition as to the overplus above 1,500*l.* per ann., as he conceived it could only fitly be determined by the Queen whether the petitioner should be gratified. His services were very eminent and his estate suffered very considerably at the Revolution. As for the memorial for the Queen to take a new lease for three years of the prizage at a rent of 2,500*l.* a year, if there were a prospect of peace and plenty, it might not be an unequal bargain, but as probably the war would not determine during the term of the lease, it might not be advisable. It might be more proper that the Queen should appoint her own officers to collect the duties and that accounts should be kept for the benefit of the Duke. Dated 5 June 1702.

One of the petitions and the account of prizage.

Minuted:—"Read to y^e Queen 9th June 1702. As to the overplus of the profits during the last term, if it had made less, the crown must have paid. [About June 5.] 16. Address or letter of John Peters, gent., to the L^d High Treasurer as to four "articles" which had been recommended by the Attorney-General to be laid before Her Majesty, apparently as to recovery of certain of his property; asking his Lordship's mediation for the grant of a lease.

The particulars in this paper are all entered in the Minute Book, Vol. II. p. 184, on 9 June 1702, and in addition the minutes of what was done in each case. 1 large page.

[About June 9.] 20. Petition of Maynhard, Duke of Schonburg and Leinster. Soon after the late King's arrival in England the House of Commons voted 100,000*l.* for the support of his father and family, and Sir Henry Capell was named trustee to lay it out in England, and to take care that his father had 5,000*l.* a year. On the death of his father, his brother Charles and himself had a privy seal for payment of the principal, and afterwards had 4 and 5 per cent. out of the Post Office, until the principal could be paid; but as the petitioner could not jointure a wife, nor provide for younger children, he prayed for the acceptance of the surrender of his patent, and a grant in lieu thereof of a patent for himself and his heirs in general terms, for the 5,000*l.* out of the Post Office, subject to the redemption of the principal.

June 12. 23. Memorial from the trustees appointed for exchanging Exchequer Bills. On the 1st of June they opened new rolls for taking subscriptions for 500,000*l.* for circulating Exchequer bills, and 497,000*l.* were subscribed, 3,000*l.* being reserved, viz., 1,500*l.* for Thomas Nix, Esq., and 1,500*l.* for Brian Levens, Esq. Upwards of 500 persons, most of them substantial men, attended to subscribe, besides those admitted; and the crowd was so great that the trustees could not keep to any steady method in taking the subscriptions, &c. Dated 12 June 1702. 1 page.

June 12. 24. Letter signed "Ja: Isaacson," addressed to the Lord High Treasurer, sending copy of a presentment sent to their Lordships in August last by the Comrs for stamps, to which they made no reply. The three last clauses mention how necessary it was to appoint a commissioner to inspect the country. Prays to be appointed riding commissioner. Dated 12 June 1702.

Minuted:—"To be carryed in on Tuesday 23 June." 3 pages.

[About June 12.] 25. "Sir Wm Blacketts case in relacõn to the debt due to him from the Crown of Denmark."

The debt was occasioned by the taking of a cargo of cloth by Fredrick the Third, King of Denmark, he having occasion for the same in the year 1658. The cargo belonged to Sir William Blackett, father of the then Sir William. The various means used to obtain the payment of the debt are specified, all which had failed through the want of means of the Danish Government.

a cost of 300*l.*, and he had no allowance as governor. Not to be burthensome to the Civil List, as he was informed there were considerable arrears of rent during the vacancy of the Mastership of the Savoy, he prayed that the 300*l.* might be paid him out of those rents, and for an annual allowance during the vacancy of the mastership.

Minuted:—"14 June 1702. The revenues of y^e^ hospitall must be applyd to ye charitable use intended by y^e^ Founder." 1 page.

June 15. 28. Report of the Com^rs^ of Customs to the Lord [High Treasurer], on the petition of Samuel Dale, landwaiter in the port of London, praying leave to surrender his place to John Digby, deputy patent waiter in the same port, reserving an allowance of 40*l.* per ann. out of the salary during life. They had nothing to object to the fitness of the said Digby. In the last instance, which was the surrender of Gauden to Whaples, the present landwaiter, they had reported that although there had been some few instances where deserving officers had been superannuated, having grown infirm, and younger officers of inferior rank had been admitted to execute those employments (reserving a moiety of the salary to the superannuated officers), yet they conceived it was a practice by no means to be encouraged, &c. When their L^ps^ agreed to that petition, they declared it should not be made a precedent. The charges on Whaples' salary of 80*l.* reduced it to 20*l.*, and it would be the same with Digby. They were of opinion that all surrenders of this kind would be a great damage and very inconvenient. Dated 15 June 1702.

June 17. 33. Letter signed S. P. to the Lord High Treasurer. He was an Enlishman and lover of his country. Sir Thomas Frankland, by his artifices and tricks about two years since, got an ill man, Mr. Castleton, to be controller of the penny Post Office, and now (he could disguise his evil practices no longer), was soliciting for this very infamous man Brocket, another fool of his, to supply his place, which would much diminish the revenues, &c. None would be more willing than he (the writer) to do Her Majesty service. Dated 17 June 1702. 1 page.

[About June 17.] 34. Petition of Simon Harcourt, Esq., Secondary of the Crown Office, in the Queen's Bench, to the Lord High Treasurer. His office in the reign of King James II., and for the first six years of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, was to prosecute on their Majestys' behalf all causes in the Crown Office of the King's Bench, for which he had a salary of 50*l.* per ann. After the death of the King the Attorney General had appointed him clerk in the Crown Office of the Queen's Bench; praying for the same salary to be paid him.

[About June 17.] 35. The case of W^m Dockwra, of London, merchant. In 1680 he had set up the penny post, which proved a most beneficial service to the public. He had no sooner brought it to perfection than the late King James (when Duke of York), at the instigation of some evil men in the ministry, caused 20 actions to be brought at one time, and two of 10,000*l.* apiece at another, pretending that the setting up the penny post was a breach of the Act for settling the Post Office on him. The law was wrested, and a special verdict was denied, and so he was deprived of the benefit of his invention, the statute law 22 J. I., which gives to every subject who is author of a new invention for the common good the sole benefit and profit thereof for 14 years, not being regarded. Mr. Dockwra and his family of nine children remained sufferers for many years until the revolution, at which time he printed his case. The King at the recommendation of the House of Commons granted him a pension of 500*l.* per ann. for a term which expired at Midsummer 1700, out of the profits of the penny post. The King had promised him employment. He had received nothing for a year and a quarter, and had no other dependence than the pension, having sunk most of his children's fortunes in the undertaking, and notwithstanding the pension, he was many thousand pounds the worse for setting up the penny post. He (Mr. Dockwra) hoped His Majesty would appoint the payment of the 625*l.* to Michaelmas last, and continue the pension till he was settled in some good office, and not suffer his wife and children to be forgotten or want. And he hoped that his three sons, qualified for public service, would find a generous preferment, as a mark of reward for the memorable service their father had done for the King and kingdom, which would last for ever.

This case, although drawn up in the autumn of 1701, does not appear to have been then dealt with, but was brought forward again in the following year, for on the back is this Minute:—"17 June 1702. When any imploym^{t} fals y^{t} is proper for him my Ld is willing to move ye Queen in his behalf." 2 pages.

He came into the English service at the command of Queen Mary, on the promise that he should receive 10*s.* a day besides his pay as an engineer (as appears by certificate of the Duke of Schonberg), until he should be made a lieutenant-colonel, but he had not yet any such commission, and had received only 75*l.* from the 10*s.* a day. There were 1,184*l.* due. The petitioner was naturalized, but never received any half pay, and was daily troubled for his debts; praying for relief.

The certificate referred to.

Wafered to the foot of the petition is a subsequent request from the petitioner (who is there called major-general of the armies of the King of Poland), that his debt might be paid to him that he might go about the business of his master. (French.)

The names of John Fox the father and John Fox the son were used only as trustees for the petitioner, who was possessed of a

Accompanied by the previous petition referred to, which relates to concealments discovered by the petitioner. He suggests that several millions might be raised by fines. He had expended above 7,000*l.* in preventing the violation of the rights of the crown. He had grown old and infirm, and if the concealments were not discovered by him before his death the crown would be a great loser; prays for the appointment of some persons just and faithful to examine the truth of his assertions.

Minuted:—" 17 June 1702. To be heard when he will attend." 2 pages.

[? About June 17.] 42. Petition of Thomas Rymer to the Queen. [About July 1.] 88. Petition to the Queen, of Ellen de Courcy only daughter of the late Lord Kinsale, "whose ancestors for hundreds of years successively have the great hon^{r} of being the only grandees [? grantees] to yo^{r} maj^{ties} Royal predecessors." The family of the petitioner since the loss of their estates for the Queen's predecessors, had depended on the crown for support. Kings Charles and James allowed them 300*l.* per ann. pension, until 1690. The arrears were due ever since. King James before he left England, granted a lease for 31 years of the ferries and passages of Ireland. The revolution stopped all proceedings and destroyed the petitioner's fortune. Tho' King William had also ordered the grant, the petitioner was wholly deprived of it. She was at 1,000*l.* expense in prosecuting the matter; praying in consideration of her distress and danger of imprisonment during life, to be admitted to the royal bounty.

July 2. 89. Letter of the Earl of Rochester to the Lord High Treasurer. The Judges in Ireland had proposed an allowance to be made to the Marshall of the Four Courts in Dublin. The office was formerly of considerable profit till the fees were reduced by the late Act. It still continued a place of great trust wherein the administration of justice and the security and property of the subject were greatly concerned. The Earl found by experience when he was there, that the then officer being removed by him, upon frequent complaints of the judges of his often and heinous misbehaviour, that the place could not be supplied with a sufficient man for want of a suitable reward for the pains and hazard of it. The judges upon consultation agreed that the charge of the Marshal amounted to 159*l.* per ann., and the fees since they were reduced had not exceeded 120*l.*, which, if made up to 400*l.* per ann., might be a reasonable encouragement to that officer in regard of the very great hazard he ran in the execution of his employment. Recommending the payment of such a salary as Her Majesty thought fit from the establishments of the Civil List. Dated 2 July 1702. 2¼ pages.

July 7. 105. Report of the principal officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer on the value of foreign coins of gold in proportion to silver in several nations, and on the way of preserving the coin. They found that gold was higher in England than in France 9[d] or 10[d] in the guinea, in Holland by 11[d] or 12[d] in the guinea, in Germany and Italy by 12[d] in the guinea or above; in Spain and Portugal gold was higher than in England by about 11[d] in the guinea. The great quantity of silver coming from the West Indies had brought down the price of silver in all Europe in proportion to gold, and principally in Spain, where the bullion first arrived. The low price mended the market, and thereby carried silver from Spain into all Europe, and from all Europe to the East Indies and China, the merchant bidding more for it than it went for among the natives. In Spain the merchants advanced about 6 per cent. or above, for silver; at which rate a guinea was worth about 21[s] 3⅜[d] and sometimes less. In England they advanced 3[d] or 4[d] per ounce, and at the rate of 3[d] per ounce advance a guinea was worth but 20[s] 6⅛[d].

Gold was therefore at too high a rate in England by about 10*d.* or 12[d] in the guinea. And this tended to the decrease of the silver coin. The way of preserving this coin was to lower the price of gold. "Suppose by taking 6[d] 9[d] or 12[d] from the price of the guinea," so that gold might be of the same value in England as in the neighbouring parts of Europe. France had set an example, for in the last war when the louis dor was raised to 14 livres, the ecu was raised only to 72 sols; but it was now raised to 76 sols, tho the louis dor was raised only to 14 livres as before, so that gold in respect of silver was then lower in France than in the last war, in the proportion of 76 to 72, i.e. by above 13½*d.* in the guinea.

The liberty of melting foreign moneys into ingots in private shops and houses, for exportation, gave opportunity for melting down the money of England for the same purpose. A law to restrain the same might be useful, as well as against importing any ingots of silver melted down in England, except in a public office for the purpose.

The law by barring the exportation of foreign silver after it was coined, prevented the coinage and importation thereof, as the merchant could make no use of it as bullion. The bringing of silver to the market of England and turning it into money should be encouraged, silver being more apt to stay with us in the useful form of money, than in the useless form of bullion. If the merchant might export what he coined, some part would be apt to be laid out here, and this might be done as described in the schedule annexed.

The licencing the exportation of bullion, whilst the exportation of money was prohibited, made silver worth more uncoined, stopped the coinage, and caused money to be melted down in private for exportation. It might be better to prohibit the exportation of bullion and licence that of money, and whenever the money was in danger, to licence the exportation of so much money only as should be coined out of foreign bullion.

The safety and increase of the coin depended principally on the balance of trade. If the balance of trade were against us, the money would be melted and exported, to pay debts abroad and carry on trade, in spite of laws to the contrary; and if the balance of trade were for us, such laws were needless, and even hurtful to trade. If trade were so ordered as not to be detrimental to the nation, the money would be safe. For, which end luxury in foreign commodities should be checked, and the exportation of our own commodities encouraged. If a law were made and well executed against trading with more gold and silver by any merchant or company of merchants, than in certain proportions to the value of the goods exported, such an addition to the Act of navigation might put merchants upon searching out sufficient ways of vending our commodities abroad, and would be more effectual for preserving the coin, than the absolute prohibition of the exportation thereof.

As for the alteration of the standard, their opinion was, that if the value of the several species to be coined were diminished, without changing the denomination, it would occasion the melting and recoining the species already coined for the sake of the profit. And if the value were increased, the merchants and people would value their goods by the old money in which they were to be paid, and the new money of greater value (if any were coined) would be picked out for exportation, and the importer who coined it would lose the overvalue, to the discouragement of the coinage, and in payments made by tale to foreigners, the nation would also lose the overvalue. But if it were proposed to retain the value of the several species or quantity of fine silver therein, and only to alter the "allay" they were of opinion, that if small money, (which wears away fast, and is apt to be lost,) were coined, of course "allay" as was done abroad (provided it were well coined to prevent counterfeiting), such money would wear longer and be less apt to be lost than the small money then in use. By small money they understood groats, threepences, twopences, and pence, unless the penny by reason of its smallness should be made of copper. Dated 7 July 1702.

July 9. 119. Letter of Mr John Tutchin to the Ld Treasurer at St James's Palace. He had yesterday entered his appeal to his Lordship in the postmaster's books. It would be much for the public advantage if his Lordship could determine things of that nature by hearing them with his own ears. His opinion on the penny post was that there had been many mismanagements. Every one had done what was right in his own eyes, without control. He could not tell what Mr Castleton's business was in the office, but he was a person of weak parts, easily imposed on, and incapable of judging what was good for the Queen's interest. If such persons deserved anything from a government, a pension would be a more fit reward than an office. Dated 9 July 1702.

Milverton, in Somersetshire, was granted in 1664 to Aldred Leaman, gen., during pleasure, with the yearly fee of 13*s.* 4*d.* In 1684 the office was continued to him, and in 1687 there were four petitioners for it. The whole rents of the manor, which consists not of copyholds but of freeholds, and the jurisdiction of a leet, amounted to but 6*l.* a year. It was then affirmed that many encroachments had been made on the wastes of the manor, which yielded no benefit to the crown, occasioned by the remissness of the stewards, who, living in the place, were unwilling to offend their neighbours. The medium of the "agio" of bank money being 5 per cent. had been 8 or 9 sometimes, which would have been greatly to their advantage, but happened to be only two and three quarters, to which those gentlemen had themselves contributed by offering a glut of bank money to be sold altogether.

Sept. 5. 94. Letter of M^r William Lowndes to the Lord High Treasurer. Encloses a letter from a French sloop, containing a proposition for the fishermen of both nations, which he had last night shown to Mr. Warr (Lord Nottingham being gone out of town). They were both of opinion the design of the French was, to get intelligence, and perhaps to convey wool, especially from parts about Dover. His concern was for the defenceless state of Seaford. The Queen had six or seven large guns at a place called the Gun Garden, about half being on good carriages, but sunk in the ground for want of a platform. The enemy might take these guns away without the knowledge of anybody, or they might turn them on the corporation. With two or three more carriages and a small portion of powder and shot, and a small allowance for one gunner, the country would be secured, and the ships would be protected. In the last war a tin ship, worth 10,000*l.* or 12,000*l.*, was defended by these guns against two large privateers. Hastings to the east was provided. There was a report of Lord Rumny on the petition of the inhabitants of Newhaven to have some guns there. M^r Pelham was much concerned for that place. Encloses the petition and report thereon, desiring his Lordship to speak with Sir Charles Hedges, to receive the Queen's pleasure in these matters, which were of more importance than the accommodation for fishermen; and if the public should suffer any great damage for want of a small matter, it would trouble him more than the loss of his interest amongst the people to whom he had been often beholden. He sent also a paper of the cash in the Exchequer. Sir J. Thorold desired that M^r Sampson might be heard before the stewardship of Kirton was granted again to M^r Sanderson. M^r Green, a receiver in Staffordshire, had a process by mistake directed against him to render account. Dated 5 Sept. 1702. 2 pages.

Sept. 5. 95. Letter signed "M. Biddulph" to the R^t Hon. S^r John Leveson Gower, Bart., at Bath. He did not doubt he should be able to raise the 800*l.* proposed in his petition by the time mentioned in Sir John's letter. States how he proposed to accomplish it. His confinement made him every day more uneasy, and his health was much impaired. Begs his intercession with his Lordship for his release. Dated Stifford, Sep. 5, 1702. 1 page, quarto.

Sept. 9. 96. Letter of the Earl of Rochester to Lord [ ]. Thanks him for the favour to Major Bellew. Sir William Robinson was going to Ireland, and the accounts relating to the five regiments for that kingdom should be settled before he went. There was an article in one of them for 50*l.* foreign to the rest, but he bid Robinson put it in. It was an act of great charity to a deserving officer, then languishing under severe wounds he received some years ago. He had taken care to have the Queen's warrant for [?About Sept. 23.] 100. Petition of Alexander Johnstown, Esq., to the Queen. Sir Roger Strickland being outlawed and attainted of high treason in 1689, and his estate forfeited, it was found on a commission of inquiry that at the time of his treason he was seized of an estate of Thornton Bridge and Cateract in Yorkshire, of the yearly value of 705*l.* 11*s.* 11*d.* In 1691 petitioner caused one Alexander Trissell to be seized for treasonable practices, who was a servant to Sir Roger Strickland, and brought over from Ireland deeds and settlements of Sir Roger's estate in Yorkshire, to protect the estate from forfeiture. He was a witness to the deeds which were perfected at Dublin, about the time of the battle of the Boyne, though they bore date 10 Jan. 1688, being antedated, of which the petitioner informed their Majesties. From the accession of their Majesties to the winter of 1694 he performed many great services to their Majesties, and made an application for a grant of the estate, which was promised by Queen Mary, but her death intervened. The petitioner obtained an "early view" of the assassination plot in the year 1695. In 1696 an annuity of 300*l.* was granted to him for 31 years, and on 25 April 1697 the late King granted that whole estate for 21 years to the petitioner, he having obtained judgments at law, &c. to maintain the King's title. There were 24 suits by a popish and disaffected party concerning the premises, to ruin the petitioner. He refers to a long series of official persons to corroborate his claims, and annexes copies of two other papers for the same purpose. The persons who had opposed the title had confessed that the deed of the "Catteract" was only a redeemable mortgage, and in former suits they swore it was an absolute deed of purchase and no mortgage.

The two documents referred to, viz., a petition and a memorial to the King. The last has this note against it:—"Presented three days before his last fall." It states that the estate consisted partly of leases from the Archbishop of York, and partly from inheritance. The true yearly rent or value was about 800*l.* if free from trouble, out of which was paid yearly to the Archbishop, hospitals, &c., 30*l.* or 40*l.*

At the end is an order signed C. Hedges, by Her Majesty's instructions, referring the matter to the Lord High Treasurer. Dated Bath, 23 Sept. 1702. 4 pages.

Oct. 2. 106. [Lord Bellomont's] "Reasons for suspending of Thomas Weaver, Esq^re, His Majesty's Collector and Receiver General of this province" [New York].

The reasons were, that he appeared to be a mischievous incendiary, stirring up divisions there as well as in the Leeward Islands before coming; he had shown partiality and corruption, which lessened the excise at New York one third; he had not kept any due account of receipts and payments of revenue, nor transmitted duplicates; he brought the public into debt, and caused several good subjects, of plentiful fortunes, to be accused and prosecuted for treasons and other crimes, to pay the debts of the Government; he procured himself to be appointed Solicitor General (the Solicitor General declining to appear in "such prosecutions"); in combination with others, he prosecuted Col. Nicholas Bayard and Alderman John Hutchins, and caused them to be condemned as traitors, for new invented and unheard of treasons, viz.: signing an address to His Majesty, an address to the House of Commons, and another to the writer, and endeavoured to get Bayard put to death for the same; at the arrival of the writer [Lord Bellomont] he denied having any of the public money in his hands, and would not render account; he interrupted and discouraged the lawful trade of the province, by prosecutions and seizures out of revenge. In conjunction with Col. D'Peyster he procured himself to be paymaster of the forces there, and the officers were rudely and scurrilously treated, &c., and the soldiers "unduly' paid, &c., which caused them to desert. D'Peyster and Weaver on the arrival of the writer had misrepresented that the merchants would not supply money to subsist the forces, &c. Oct. 46. Letter of Lord Cornbury to the Lord High Treasurer. He had made enquiry after the bond for 10,000*l.*, which Lord Bellomont obliged Col. Fletcher to give, before he allowed him to go to England; it was in Lady Bellomont's hands, from whom he got it with great difficulty. He enquired into the reasons that induced the exaction of such a bond from Col. Fletcher, there being no complaint against him. By the best information he could get, there was no reason at all, and instead of being in debt to the forces, he found he had subsisted the companies there to 1 May 1697, though Lord Bellomont had actually received the subsistence from 1 Jan. 1696–7; so that Coll. Fletcher was then four months subsistence out of pocket, which he was informed Lord Bellomont had not paid. He did not find that there was any complaint against Col. Fletcher for misapplication of the revenue, nor did he hear of any complaint against him by the people of the province. He held that it was a great hardship to exact the bond, and that it ought to be cancelled and his bondsmen discharged. He had written that he had suspended Mr. Weaver from the Receiver Generalship of the province. He ran away from his bail. After a proclamation for his apprehension he was allowed to return to make up his accounts. He (Lord Cornbury) was obliged to go to Albany to visit the frontiers, and when the accounts were made up Mr. Weaver ran away a second time. Mr. Atwood, who had been chief justice, the gentlemen of the council, and others, pursued him as far as Pennsylvania. They had good security for 2,000*l.* for his appearance, and the bail must pay that amount. He had carried away the books and caused great difficulty. The sickness had raged so furiously at New York that everybody fled into the country who could. By the next conveyance he hoped to send Mr. Weaver's accounts and the accounts of the Com^rs, and after that time the quarterly accounts should not fail. Mr. Heathcote and Mr. Wenham, two of the Com^rs he had appointed to execute the office of Receiver General, were very good and zealous for the service of the crown, and of good substance; the first was brother of Mr. Gilbert Heathcote of London, and the other was one of those who had supplied him (the Governor) with money for the forces, and likewise one of those that were to be prosecuted for addressing the late King and Parliament. He should be glad if one of these gentlemen should be appointed Receiver General for this province. Dated New York, Oct. 1702.

Minuted:—"To be read when Lord Rochester is wth my Lord at y^{e} Treasury." 1 page.

[1702.] 61. Memorial of the Duke of Newcastle, unaddressed. The warrant granted to him by the late King, for ten brace of red deer annually, out of the forest of Sherwood, had expired by the King's death. His Majesty had promised they should be made up to ten brace. The duke begged a grant from her Majesty of 15 or 20 brace during his life. He had the power by grants to disafforest nearly 20 miles of his own ground in that forest, and to cut down all the woods, &c. in which the deer harboured and fed. When he was first made Lord Warden of the forest, there were not above five brace of stags in the forest, but by annually turning out deer from his own parks, &c., there were then near 800 red deer therein. Undated.

Undated, but probably the beginning of the reign of Anne. 1 page.

[?1702.] 67. Letter from Sir S[alathiel] Lovell to William Lownds, Esq. He met with some obstruction in his proceeding upon the grant of Horton's forfeiture, and was of opinion the matter was not fully stated to the Queen and the Lord High Treasurer, wherefore he had sent a breviate of it. No person had done so much for the discovery and conviction "of offenders of this kind," &c. He had long served the public purely at his own charge, to the damage of his fortune.

Also the "breviate" referred to.

In the Minute Book, Vol. XI. p. 126, 11 Feb. 1701-2, is "Sir Salathiel Lovel is to have the forfeited estate of Horton, and to be only at the future charge of recovering the same." 2 pages.

[? About 1702.] 69. Letter signed Robert Leslie, addressed to John Taylor, Esq. [? Second Secondary in the Treasurer's Remembrancer's office. See Money Book, Vol. 14, p. 258], acknowledging the great obligation he had received in procuring a reference of his petition when at "the bath," begging him to peruse [the accompanying paper]. The reward he had received for past services was truly noble, but he had suffered a great deal of hardship, and was looked on as one of the greatest villains on earth. Mr. Gamell, who was not at a penny charge, had the same allowance, but the discovery of the S^{t} Sebastian fraud came by the writer. He seeks for Mr. Taylor's recommendation to the Lord High Treasurer, that he might obtain one of the vacant places at Liverpool or Whitby.

Accompanied by a paper entitled:—"The case of Robert Leslie," wherein he gives the true account of the service he did the nation in discovering the fraud of the Sebastian wine trade in 1699.

This paper contains a very curious account of the artifices resorted to, in order to bring over French wine from S^{t} Sebastian. It was taken there from Bordeaux, a Spanish name given to it, and reshipped in Spanish casks. A sufficient number of hogskins were kept in every cellar, and mules were also kept that it might be supposed the wines were brought from Navarre on mules' backs in hogskins. M^{r} Manly and M^{r} Cooke, who were sent over to inspect the trade were blinded with this device, for in the night the gates were opened, and what was brought into the town by day was sent out in the night to be ready to come in again the next day, and this method was used whilst they stayed. 13 pages.

[? 1702.] 70. Letter of Henry Killigrew to the Lord High Treasurer of England. He hoped his sickness would move that mercy that all the neighbouring nations enjoyed, and that he should not be the only creature which did not share his Lordship's protection. He appeals to his Lordship thus:—"Consider my L^{d} the season of the year, my decaid body, the number of my family, and that everything is worn out that should cover me. If I knew myself guilty of any thing that ought to deter me from this address, I should want confidence to put your Lordship in mind of your usual supply; but God knows my innocence incourages me to presume that I have not forfeited the title of being your near kinsman, and the long service we were together under one master, may plead further in the behalf of him, who is with all submission," &c.

[Compare this with Vol. LXXVII. N^{o} 18, 5 Dec. 1701. He was then not to ask for anything till next Christmas.] 2 pages, quarto.

[? 1702.] 71. "A method for taking & stating the L^{d} Rhanelaugh's accounts," extending from 5 Nov. 1688 to the end of 1701, being various instructions or suggestions for the same. 1½ pages.

It probably only relates to the first item. [Kidd was sent over in the "Advice" frigate in charge of "Lieut." Hunt, as appears by a letter of Lord Bellomont dated 28 Feb. 1699. See the letter in the Board of Trade Collection (New York), Vol. 6, p. 472. There is a letter of 22 Apr. 1700, Vol. LXVIII. 35, among the Treasury Papers, as to what should be done with Kidd's effects. From Her Majesty being named it is probably in 1702.] 1 page.

This includes four lists, one of which is, "Plate lost at the Battle of Landen." 2½ pages.

[? 1702.] 81. Memorial of John, Lord FitzHarding, to the Lord High Treasurer, showing what was due to him as Mall keeper at the late King's death; praying for a renewal of his power, and that the posts and boards of the Mall might be surveyed and renewed.

1702. VOL. LXXXIII.

Minuted:—"His arrears to be paid as far as others, and a sign manuall for renewing his office. Send to officers of ye works to make an estimate of y^e^ charge of new boarding and shelling the Mall, and the proper time for doing the same." 1 page.

[? About 1702.] 82. Petition of Col. John Gibsone, Lieut. Governor of Portsmouth, to the Lord High Treasurer, praying that process issued against him, for 180*l.* received in 1869 and 1690, on account of fire and candle for the garrison there, might be staid, he having expended above 500*l.* more of his own.

Minuted:—"The account to be transmitted to y^e^ Aud^rs^ of Imprest, or either of them, and process to be stayd till next Michaelmas." 1 page.

[? 1702.] 83. List of the names of the officers of the Mint. Sir John Stanley was warden, and Isaac Newton, Esq., master and worker. Undated.

Most of the officers agree with those in Chamberlayne's State of England for 1702, p. 591. 1 page.

[? 1702.] 84. Petition of Mr. Hutton, executor of Dr. Hutton, physician to his late Majesty King William, and Physician General of His Majesty's armies, land forces, and hospitals. He came over with King William from Holland as his domestic physician, was after the revolution made his first physician, and remained so until the king's demise; setting forth the arrears due to him and praying payment. 1 page.

[1702, or later.] 85. Petition of John Pye, gent., to the House of Commons. The petitioner had been collector of customs in the port of Newcastle, and prayed for leave to bring in a bill to compound his debt. 1 page.

[1702, or later.] 86. Petition of Richard Littlehales, one of the footmen to Queen Mary, to the Lord High Treasurer, complaining of arrears due to him, and asking for a tidewaiter's place in fee in the port of London. 1 page.

[1702, or later.] 87. Petition of Mary Morris, widow and relict of Lieut. Col. Redmond Morris, deceased. By articles made on the surrender of Limerick, liberty was given to the Irish army to transport themselves into France, and the generals of the English army, being sensible how great a prejudice it would be to the Grand Alliance to have such a body of excellent troops employed against them, proposed great rewards and encouragements to such as would engage in their late Majesty's service. The petitioner's husband, being a lieut^t^ col. of the regiment of horse commanded by Major General Henry Luttrell, and depending on the assurances so given, brought over the regiment and several other troops, who were afterwards disbanded, and their arms and accoutrements employed in the public service. About 1,500*l.* were due to her husband, for which he never had any satisfaction, although the colonel had received a pension of 500*l.* a year, and the major 6*s.* 8*d.* a day, praying provision to be made for her &c. 1 page.

VOL. LXXXIII.

1702. [1702, or later.] 88. Petition of Philip Bickerstaffe, Esq^re, to the Queen. He was sworn a clerk in the King's household in 1660, which office he then purchased and continued in until it was his right to come to the Board of Green Cloth. He was prevented by the interest of persons who would serve the times, from filling the vacancy. He was also a member of Parliament for many years: praying for the next vacancy at the Board, and in the meantime for such a pension as Mr. Fox received from the royal bounty, &c.

[1702, or later.] 90. Petition of Simon Ogden, mariner, to the R^t Hon. Sidney Lord Godolphin, showing that he had become a pensioner to the Chest at Chatham, at 6*l. per ann.*, for injuries received on board H.M. ship Bredah, on 30 June 1690 [at Beachey Head]; but his pension was only made to commence on 25 March 1700, as appeared by the certificate annexed.

He was sent to S^t Thomas's hospital, Southwark, and all the officers who should have given him a certificate were blown up at Cork, in Ireland, with the said ship the Bredah. Capt. Butler, Captain Paxton, and Lieut. Hamilton, who were on board, had however, given him certificates: praying for his pension from the time he was wounded. Undated, but probably when Godolphin was treasurer.

Certificate as to his being a pensioner. 1½ pages.

[1702, or later.] 91. Certificate that Antonio Verrio, Esq., was paid a salary of 200*l.* per ann. as chief painter to his late Majesty King James the 2d up to Christmas 1688, and that John Ryley and Godfrey Kneller, Esq^res, were sworn and admitted to that employment to their late Majesties King William and Queen Mary, and were paid the like salary of 200*l.* per ann. between them from the day they were sworn to Lady-day 1690. Mr. Ryley dying about that time Sir Godfrey Kneller became sole principal painter, but upon regulating the establishment in 1690 was left out. In 1695 he obtained the King's warrant to be on the establishment with 200*l. per ann.*, and the payments were made him to Christmas, 1700, with the allowance of 50*l.* for every picture drawn at whole length. 1 page.

[1702, or later.] 92. "The case of the late Farmers of y^e revenue of Ireland."

In the year 1675 Sir James Shaen and others undertook to farm the revenue of Ireland for seven years at 240,000*l.* per ann.; they advanced 80,000*l.* as security for payment of their rent; a lease was granted them of the quit rents of Ireland of the value of 70,000*l.* per ann. for seven years after the end of the farm, for security of repayment of their advance. They had paid their rent and advanced the revenue 40,000*l.* per ann. At the end of the farm a false and groundless balance of 307,000*l.* was made out against them, for there were about 70,000*l.* due to the farmers in that country, but upon pretence of that balance, process was issued against them, and they were thereby prevented from recovering their debts. They were also in treaty with King Charles II. to have victualled and paid the garrison of Tangier, and had sent about 20,000 pieces of eight there, but there was a design to suddenly demolish the place and bring away the garrison. The chief commanders demolished their agent's house, and took away 16,490*l.* in pieces of eight, with all their books and papers, and plundered the house as if it had been taken by an enemy. They had not obtained satisfaction, and at their last hearing, in July 1701, they were told that the crown could not pay them. Having nothing left, they had petitioned the Lord High Treasurer for the aid of the crown for recovery of their debts, "because by reason of ye length of time nobody can sue but y^e^ crown," yet they were denied the benefits of their covenants to recover any of their private debts, and they were likely to suffer from their creditors, as they had been answered that his lordship did not "think fit to vex y^e^ country with old pretences." Undated, but query 1702. Their last hearing was in July 1701.

Also a memorial to the L^d^ High Treasurer on the same subject. 3 pages.

[1702, or later.] 93. Petition to the Queen by Sir Gervase Elwes, grandfather, and Sir John Robinson, father of John Robinson, on behalf of John Robinson, eldest son of the said Sir John, who was a volunteer on board the late King's ship Rochester, and quarrelled with one Richard Church (who kept a public-house at Deal, wherein Robinson lodged), and wounded him, whereby he died: praying a pardon for him. 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 94. Memorial of Col. Charles Ross to the Earl of Rochester, Lord Lieut. and Governor Gen^l^ of Ireland, as to arrears due to him.

The second minute on the back is:—"Prepare a warr^t^ for this "as a bounty to be p^d^ in Ireland; say only 500*l.* as of our grace & "favour, w^ch^ bounty was designed him by our dearest bro. the K. "decēd."

Another paper of memoranda about the same. 2 pages.

[? About 1702 or 1703.] 95. Petition (signed) of Col. Hugh Hamill to the Queen for renewal of a warrant, so that he and his estate might be discharged from the debts, judgments, and executions to which he was liable in the reign of King James II. The petitioner and the rest stood out all the siege of Londonderry, for which they had received no reward. His estate was entirely in his creditors' hands, and likely to continue so unless relieved by Her Majesty's bounty and favour.

The copy of the former warrant referred to. Dated 22 July 1691. 2 pages.

[1702, or later.] 96. Petition of Thomas Bell, merchant [Alderman of Dublin], to the House of Commons, shewing that he had been an "antient trader" and paid 4,000*l.* a year to the customs. By the troubles he had lost considerably. In King James' time he was forced to sell

VOL. LXXXIII.

1702. his goods for brass money, and durst not refuse. He then had 500*l.* sterling of what passed current, which was worth little or nothing, besides a greater sum he sold after the victory of the Boyne, at eighteen pence and two shillings a pound sterling. In endeavouring to make his escape into England, in a boat in the harbour, he was shot and lay dangerously ill. Afterwards he suffered imprisonment for a considerable time, and was threatened with death for holding correspondence with Duke Shomberg and giving him intelligence of the Irish army and what was passing in the Irish quarters, as likewise for detecting a person sent by the late King James with commissions to several noblemen and gentlemen in Scotland, to raise an insurrection in that kingdom. He rendered signal services to the late King William, and but for the victory of the Boyne would probably have lost his life. In King James's time petitioner entered into bond for imported excise of wine, amounting to 120*l.* 10*s.*, but being under confinement, was not called upon to pay, and they well knew that they had taken out of the petitioner's cellars to a much greater value, and could be easily paid in their own coin; praying the cancelling the bonds.

Other documents which should accompany, are not now with it. 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 97. Report of B. Bridges and E. Harley, Auditors of Imprests, to the House of Commons, laying before them the total sums upon every head in the Earl of Ranelagh's account, for seven years ended Lady-day 1699, which they have disallowed in the said account, as not being regularly vouched according to the strict rules of the Exchequer. 4½ pages (brief size).

[? 1702 or 1703.] 98. "Petition of John Paschal, Esq., one of the Commissioners for Prizes during the last war," to the Lord High Treasurer, showing that upon the superseding of the commission for prizes, he was constituted by the Lords of the Treasury one of the officers to recover the arrears due to the said office; that at such great expense as ruined him he had discharged the duties (the chief of which had fallen on him) until he was forced to abscond; that he had received no salary for 3½ years except 400*l.*, which he very unwillingly made use of, and without which he must have absconded long before; praying his lordship would order him some part of his salary, wherewithal a little to quiet his creditors.

Without date. Pascall was appointed to recover the arrears of prizes on 21 June 1699, which apparently makes the date 1702 or 1703.

Minuted: "11th Aug^t. He must first come & account before any further paym^t can be made to him." 2 pages.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 99. Memorial of Charles, Lord Mohun, sole executor of Charles, late Earl of Macclesfield, deceased, showing that the Earl was sent by his late Majesty to invest the Elector of Hanover with the Order of the Garter, and to compliment that house upon passing the late Act of Parliament for declaring the succession of the crown, and that the Earl died soon after his return without consideration for his journey; praying the same allowance as was made to others, viz., 1,000*l.* 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 100. Certificate signed S. Godolphin of the fees due and payable to John, Earl of Carbury, viz., as steward of the manor of Mallaine, Talley, Mavon, and others, and Brecon, also as governor of Milford Haven, which fees have usually been paid out of Her Mat^ys^, revenue from the principality of South Wales. 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 101. Petition of William Jones, apothecary to Her Majesty's household. He had a grant from King Charles II. of the office for life, and was allowed 160*l.* per ann. on the establishment, in lieu of bills for physic administered to the household. On Her Majesty's accession it was reduced to 106*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, which for his extraordinary expenses and care was inconsiderable; praying for the re-establishment of the former allowance. 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 102. Petition of Henry Wood to the Queen. He suffered banishment and lost his estate for his service to the Crown soon after the martyrdom of King Charles I., and served King Charles II. and also King James, till by his great age he lost his sight. King James ordered him a dead pay of 2*s.* 6*d.* a day in the Earl of Oxford's regiment for his subsistence, which was confirmed by King William; there were six years of his pension due, "besides 60*l.* more of King James pension, which [he says] hath reduced him to that extremity that he is ready to perish for want, having no longer credit nor anything in the world to subsist on, his landlord being a poor man and almost ruined by keeping him so long," and being fourscore years of age, blind and lame, was a miserable object of pity: praying for relief.

[? 1702.] 103. Petition of Ralph Blackhall, collector of Her Majesty's penny post office, to the Lord High Treasurer. Her Majesty had been and still was defrauded several hundreds of pounds per ann., and there were other mismanagements with which Mr. Nathaniel Castleton, the Controller, was made acquainted; praying a day to have his counsel heard on an abstract of articles of mismanagement annexed.

The abstract referred to. 1 page.

[? 1702 or 1703.] 104. other persons less capable of service admitted upon such hard terms and bare subsistence, who might be apt to make up their salaries, either by defrauding the crown or by exacting upon the subject, or (otherwise having served some time under such circumstances) would be forced to apply to the Treasury for redress: they conceived it might be of ill-consequence to the revenue. Jan. 11. 22. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General to the Lord High Treasurer. He went to Mortlake in order to give a true state of the Tapestry House there. The buildings were very old and ruinous, consisting of two piles built of brick, one fronting the way leading from Barnes to Mortlake, and the other extending from that way towards the Thames; wherein were two workhouses, one with 12 looms and the other four, over which were garrets and an old chapel. The ground floors were small apartments for labourers in the manufactory, within which was a courtyard, and a tenement therein, where the master workman inhabited, which was standing thereon before the workhouse was built by King Charles I. There were several patterns remaining painted on paper, but many of them old and scarce fit for use. The parliamentary survey of 1651 sets out the premises, their value &c., which were to be kept and employed in working tapestry. The same surveyors mention a brick tenement, with a garden on the south side, built at the same King's charge for the use of the Limners, which should belong to the work. There was a grant of 19 Charles II. to Robert, Earl of Sunderland, and Henry Brounker, Esq., of the premises, &c. He did not find the premises had been converted to any use contrary to the first design. The commodity did not vend as formerly and so there had been but little work of late years. The time of setting lands in that kingdom was usually from 1 May. VOL. LXXXIV.

Feb. 11. 72. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the [Lord High Treasurer]. Anthony Rowe, Esq., had assured him that the stables near the Duke of S[t] Alban's house at Windsor, then in possession of the dean and canons, belonged to the Crown, and that King Charles the Second being satisfied of his right to the same, did about the year 1674 order M[r] Rowe (upon the neglect or refusal of the dean and canons to show their title) to break open the doors, which he did and turned out their horses into the street, and put in the King's, and upon their complaint His Majesty told them it was a dangerous thing to lend them anything, for they presently took it for their own; that the stables were his, and if they grudged him the use of them while he was at Windsor they should use them no more in his absence. The dean and canons entirely contradicted all this; no such claim had ever been heard of. King Charles offered to buy them, and offered to build stables for them, if these might be laid to M[rs] Gwynn's house, &c. M[r] Rowe and all agreed that at Eton there were stables whereunto the Crown had an undoubted right, which, with the yard and passage, contained about half an acre. M[r] Rowe says he begged these of King Charles, but did not pretend to any grant or lease thereof. It would be better to let these at a rent. The Duke of Somerset had told him that a learned serjeant-at-law (who had an old house at Windsor on a college lease) offered to build stables for Her Majesty at a rent of 300*l.* per annum. This proposal he did not think for Her Majesty's service, but advised the purchase of a square piece of ground of about two acres adjoining the great avenue, and fronting the Little Park, and some tenements on the opposite side of the avenue, which might answer the Queen's present occasions. Dated 11 Feb. 1702/3.

Minuted:—"Read 10 March 1702. M[r] Surv[r] to find a tenant for ye old stables at ye best rent that can be gotten for ye same, or a fine & proporconable rent." 2 pages.

Feb. 18. 88. Report of the same to the same, upon a memorial relating to timber of considerable value, fit for Her Majesty's service in the forest of Rockingham, on the lands in the possession of the Lady Westmoreland, which it was alledged belonged to the crown. He found that King Charles I. on 30 May, 4th of his reign (at the request and nomination of Francis Earl of Westmoreland) granted to Nicholas Pay, Esq., and Clement Bellamy, gent., various woods therein set out, with the soil, &c. at an annual rent of 100*l.*, and in 1663 it was made part of the Queen Dowager's jointure. He further found that on 23 July, 4 Car. I., another grant passed the great seal to the same and two other persons, of all timber trees growing on those coppices, and on others, to hold to the grantees for ever. If the person who makes "this discovery" can make it appear that the lands he has mentioned are no part of these, the timber whereon is granted away for ever, the timber might belong to Her Majesty, and would be of great service to her naval affairs. Dated 18 Feb. 1702.

The memorial is not now with it. 3½ pages.

Dated 18 Feb. 1702–3.

Minuted:—"Agreed to."

Both papers are in Newton's hand. 2 pages.

The provisions in three prize ships taken by Captain Norris, Commander of the Orford, had been appraised and distributed to the fleet, one half of the value being paid by the victuallers' agent to Captain Norris, to be distributed to the captors, which the Com^rs considered was very irregular; and for the other half the Com^rs for Victualling were still indebted to the Prize Office. Feb. 24. 101. Report of the Post Masters General to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of Alexander Inglis. Not having had the liberty to appoint such person as they thought proper, for taking care of the English letters at Edinburgh, they had met with great difficulty in recovering the English post[age] of letters sent to Scotland, it being customary for the Treasury of Scotland to let their post office to farm, and the farmers being changed every three years, they had been under the necessity to employ such persons as farmed the post office there. They had taken the best security they could, and upon Mr. Smyth's entering on his farm in 1699 they required him to give security, &c. They had frequently pressed Mr. Smith, who ran into arrears, and afterwards sued his bond; but before they could bring the suit to an issue, so as to recover the money, Smyth died insolvent; and as they had no power to displace or suspend him during the suit, the debt increased, &c. The laws of Scotland appeared so favourable to "cautioners," the expense of prosecuting the suit was so great, and money so difficult to be got from Scotland, that they thought a reasonable composition more advantageous than continuing such a prosecution. The petitioner proposed to pay 500*l.* sterling, but they thought it ought not to be accepted. No allowance has been made to Smyth for the exchange of money returned to the office, or for postage of packets sent by express for his late Majesty's service to and from the Secretaries of State in Scotland: these would reduce the balance to 1,776*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* Dated Feb. 24, 1702–3.

In the year 1700 the King commanded the removal of his cows, &c. from the park, and to deliver up possession to Lord Overkirke, the Master of the Horse, which was done accordingly, and the Lords of the Treasury were to pay the value thereof; but they being unwilling to part with ready money, compelled him to receive an annuity of much smaller value. The petitioner had made great improvements, &c. at an expense of 500*l.*, and paid various officers. He never received any fee as keeper of the orchard (which the late King converted to a wilderness) during the 12 years, all which amounted to 956*l.*, and was not at all considered in the annuity. The Lord Overkirke took possession at Lady-day, 1700, and the petitioner had not received 100*l.* of his annuity. The petitioner surrendered his small estate to M^r Tho^s Goodall, who married the petitioner's daughter, who was cousin german to the Earl of Marlborough, &c. Prays for payment of his claims.

[? About March 3.] 119. Petition of the chancellor, registrar, king of arms, and usher of the Order of the Garter. The affairs relating to the Most Noble Order of the Garter had in all ages from its foundation been under the immediate government of the sovereign and knights companions of the order, having peculiar laws, statutes, and ordinances, and a great seal and signet belonging thereunto; and had been exempt from all other jurisdictions, laws, and authorities whatsoever. Notwithstanding which the petitioners had been taxed to the public aids, to the great violation of their privileges and immunities. Part of the prayer is torn away, but it probably asked that the sums assessed might be allowed them.

Minuted:—"3 March 1702. See w^t has been don in this case.

The arrears due to them for that tedious siege, &c. amounted to 221,989*l.*, besides great sums laid out by them for raising, arming, clothing, and subsisting their men, for which end some of them had mortgaged their estates, and they had had their houses and corn burnt, plantations destroyed, and their cattle and goods carried away by the enemies during the siege. Their services and sufferings had been acknowledged by the House of Commons and by the King, but they were still without relief; praying that Her Majesty would grant them the office of licencing pedlars, petty chapmen, and "gray merchants" in Ireland, and also empower them to coin pence, halfpence, and farthings in that kingdom for 31 years in satisfaction of their arrears.

Minuted:—"3 March 1702. Not reasonable to be granted." 2 pages.

The quantity of timber that would be necessary for the repair of the roof, &c. of that church, would amount to 200 loads. In the "3rd & 4th year" of King James the Second, petitioner was established to prosecute for crimes against the peace in that court, at a salary of 50*l.* and expended 982*l.* before 1688, and his salary was then 25*l.* in arrear. As clerk of the peace for Middlesex, he had discharged duties without fees from 1693 to 1702, which at a reasonable allowance were worth 130*l.* He also prepared all the proceedings against the conspirators to assassinate the late King, &c. [? About March 6.] 136. Petition of Rodney Fane; Esq., to the Queen. Was son of Doctor William Fane, deceased, brother to the Rt. Hon. Mildmay, Earl of Westmoreland, and one of the canons of the cathedral church of Wells, who in the reign of Kings Charles I. and Charles II. eminently expressed his loyalty, &c., and suffered imprisonment and sequestration; praying for employment as one of the Com^{rs} of Stamps, agents of the Exchequer (called quickners), or as one of the Com^{rs} of any other office.

[? About March 6.] 138. Petition of Abell Slaney and others to the Queen. There was great occasion amongst the common people for half pence and farthings, to carry on the retail trade; as well as to transport to the West Indies. In the late reign he contracted for coining half pence and farthings to the satisfaction of parliament, but sustained great losses, in being obliged to take in exchange all the tin half pence and farthings of the Kingdom for copper coin by tale, praying for letters patent for coining 500 tons of the same in five years, at the Mint in the Tower, of the same weight and value as the last, with such impressions as Her Majesty should direct.

[? About March 6.] 139. Petition of William Rowley, Esq., groom porter to Her Majesty, addressed to the Queen. He furnished by contract the Palaces, both Houses of Parliament, and the Ambassadors "first lodgings," at 550*l.* per ann. There were more palaces furnished and to be furnished, than at the time of the contract; but he craved no additional allowance. There was beyond the contract money, a salary of 130*l.* 8/4, but the present establishment was so worded that it cut the petitioner off, unless her Majesty signified her pleasure.

Minuted:—"6 March 1702. It is otherwise regulated on ye establishm^{t}." 1 page.

VOL. LXXXIV.

1702–3. [? About March 6.] 140. Memorial or letter from Mr. Rymer [to Mr. Lowndes]. No allowance on account of the old leagues and treaties had been made him by the Treasury since Midsummer 1701, but the charge in clerks and lodgings continued. To part with them would put it out of his power to print and publish, as the order of council had directed. By this means a debt was growing upon him, which he must sink under, unless relieved by the Treasury, which he might the rather expect, as hitherto no manner of consideration had been shown him for almost 10 years constant attendance in that service, and old age came so fast upon him, that he could not expect to be much longer in a condition to do anything. Begging his favour to present this to the Lord Treasurer.

[? About March 6.] 141. Petition of W^m^ Attwood, chief justice of the province of New York, America. The Lord Cornbury had thought fit on 9 June last to suspend him without giving him any hearing upon articles exhibited. This had so inconvenienced him, that he could not help his son, who with considerable effects had fallen into the hands of the French as prisoner at St. Malos; prays for consideration. 1 page.

March 7. 142. Letter from Mr. Robert Sutton [Ambassador to Turkey] to the Lord [High Treasurer]. The Levant Company had pared away his salary to the quick, by making a retrenchment amounting to 40 per cent., and took no further notice of this embassy than as it related to their trade. The support of the Queen's character and the decorum of the embassy were left to the care of the crown, whose servant the ambassador was, and the same order having been given to him by the Secretary of State, as to Her Majesty's other ministers abroad, to put himself and family into mourning upon the occasion of the King's death, he was confident his Lordship would allow the charges; especially since the French, Venetian, and Dutch ambassadors had the same, besides considerable appointments which they enjoyed from their masters as well as from the merchants of their respective nations. The canopy and other things pertaining to the embassy had not been received from the Earl of Mountague out of the wardrobe. He further asks payment of his arrears. Dated "Pera of Constantinople, March 7, O.S. 1702/3." 2 pages.

March 8. 143. Letter from Mr. Benj^n^ Sweet to the Duke of Marlborough. There were only the first 10,000 men (sent to the assistance of the States General), cleared to the last of May 1702. He had sent an account to the Earl of Ranelagh, of moneys paid there to these men, and for subsistence to the rest of the English forces who came since, that the accounts might be made up, &c. Dated Hague the $\frac{19}{8}$ March 1702–3.

Minuted:—"15 March 1702. My Ld. Ranelagh to bring w^th^ him to morrow an acco^t^ of w^t^ m^o^ he hath paid to M^r^ Sweet." 2 pages.

March 9. 145. Report of the Post Masters General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of John Macky. Upon the conclusion of the late peace with France, they entered into contract with Mr Macky, by which he was obliged to furnish five boats to carry the mails between England, France, and Flanders for three years from Lady-day, 1698; they further entered into a second contract for five years for 1,400*l.* per ann., he finding boats, men, &c. There was a clause that if, from war or otherwise, the intercourse should be interrupted, the contract should cease, and upon the declaration of war with France and Spain the boats were discharged. As to his desire to be continued on the establishment with a salary as manager of the packet boats, it did not appear there was any occasion for such an officer during the war.

These boats were built by Mr Macky purposely for carrying the mails and were not proper for other uses, and were lying upon his hands, &c. Dated 9 March 1702.

Minuted:—"Read 8th March 1702 [which must be a mistake]. He has a title to be employed before any body else when the boats can be used. But there is no agreemt for the Queen to pay damage in this case."

The petition referred to, also another petition on the same subject praying that the Postmaster General should purchase the boats of him, "it never being the intention of so good a government that any man should be ruined purely for serving it," &c. This is minuted: "22 Mar. 1702. My Lord will be guided by ye Post Mrs report who are ye proper judges in his case & can add nothing to his former resolucon thereupon." 4 pages.

[? About March 12.] 149. Memorial of Edward, Earl of Orford, to the Lord High Treasurer. In May 1699 he laid down his employment as Treasurer of the Navy. The then Lords of the Treasury were of opinion, that his officers should continue to act, and Mr Doddington and the clerks had continued their duties. In addition, Mr Hill had been appointed; asking for a warrant for their pay. Seven clerks had since been dismissed and his accounts with the Navy Board drawing near a conclusion, more might have been dismissed, but the Comrs for taking the public accounts required his accounts to be exhibited in so extensive a manner.

March 13. 154. Report of Mr. Philip Ryley to the Lord High Treasurer upon the petition of the water-carters for watering the ring and places leading thereunto in Hyde Park for the years 1701 & 1702. They employed 12 carts with a man & horse to each for 61 days in 1701, and for 58 days in 1702. He thought 6*s.* a day for a cart, man, and horse, and wear and tear, was not an extraordinary craving. Dated 13 March 1702–3.

Minuted:—"To be pd for 1701 out of arrears. 1702 out of Qs mony."

[? About March 17.] 3. Letter of Captain Henry Thomas to the [Lord High Treasurer] asking, on account of his great necessities, that something might speedily be done, to enable him to pay his creditors; he must end his days in a loathsome prison, unless his lordship, in consideration of his unshaken loyalty, long services, and great sufferings, find some expedient. There were few who had suffered more by the revolution. His circumstances were such at the death of King Charles, that he did not think it would be in the power of fortune to make him so miserable; nor could he believe, considering how often he had hazarded his life for the service of the crown in the worst of times, he should be suffered to want bread so long as there was a "Steward" on the throne. He was the only officer turned out by Lord Tirconnell who was restored by King James.

was possessor by inheritance, called Rowley coppice, lying in the parish of Thoydon in the forest of Epping, containing about 26 acres, and of which he says the shrubb and wood was much decayed; unless it were grubbed up he could make no profit of it. There was no timber in the coppice, and but very few small young trees in the fences, which he would carefully preserve. There being at present no Justice in Eyre on this side Trent to whom he might have applied, he prayed his honor's leave for the same. The surveyor certifies that he had caused the coppice to be viewed and found the same was thriving, and a very great many young oaks in it; some part of the wood was already cut and many young trees felled, and it being usual on like occasions to consult the Lieutenant and verderers and before any licence was granted to have some certificate that such licence might be granted without prejudice to the game, he ordered his deputy to attend Mr Harvey, the present Lieutenant of the Forest, that he (the surveyor) might receive his opinion concerning the petitioner's request, who as he was informed, was against grubbing up this coppice, it being the best wood on that side the forest for preserving the game, and did not think the verderers would join in a certificate as usual, if it were desired of them, there being but little covert near it. [The upper part torn away.]

On the treaty of marriage between the Earl of Sussex (then Lord Dacres) and the Countess, King Charles II. promised to create his Lordship Earl of Sussex, and give him 20,000*l.* as a marriage portion with the Countess. The Earl was to settle 3,000*l.* per ann. on the Countess for her jointure, and 600*l.* per ann. for pin money. [It relates other circumstances arising out of this arrangement.] The portion was not paid, and the Earl was encumbered. The Earl preferred a bill in Parliament and sent to the Countess in France for her consent, but she refused, as it might divest herself and children of their interest in the estate. The Earl increased his debt to near 40,000*l.* in the absence of the Countess, and to help him she joined in several fines to bar herself of her dower, and about three years before she joined in a fine to take up more money on the estate in Kent. The estate was settled on trustees to discharge the debts and raise 6,000*l.* apiece for the two daughters and 5,000*l.* for the Countess, but nothing was done, and the interest would eat up the estate. The Countess prays that when the 20,000*l.*, or part thereof, should be paid, it might go to liquidate the debts on the "early estate," prior to the provision for the daughters portions, or to provide for the daughters portions.

The limits or districts of the port of Falmouth in Cornwall, about 25 years before, were settled by commission out of the Exchequer, as in such cases the law directed. The town of Penrin, adjoining the port, was making interest for reducing those limits to what they of that town called their ancient privileges. [? About June 3.] 4. Letter signed "Hen. Thomas" to the Lord [High Treasurer], asking him to lay his hard case before Her Majesty. He had often hazarded his life for the defence of the church and state. In the year 54 he was made close prisoner by Cromwell for 12 months, when Sir Charles Littleton was also confined. He was concerned in S^r George Boothes' attempt, and in most of the undertakings for His Majesty's restoration. King James had that regard for him, that he was the only officer turned out by the Lord Tirconnell (being the first on his black list) that was restored by His Majesty. At the death of King Charles his circumstances were such, that he did not think fortune could make him so miserable, occasioned by his great losses sustained by the revolution. He expected when his case was referred to Lord Rochester that provision would have been made for him. He was 70 years old, and usually four months in the year confined by gout; prays his L^ps protection to an old suffering cavalier. His pension was 4*s.* a day on Lord Ranelagh's establishment, and was above six years in arrear.

For various reasons they advise against laying out 2,000*l.* on the house with a reduction of 50*l.* on the rent, as suggested by Mr. Harvey, and as they could not agree to Mr Harvey's terms, they had contracted with Mr Frederick for a lease for 21 years of his house at 260*l.* per ann., and a small house adjoining for the cashier at 36*l.* per ann. July 8. 102. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer, upon the proposal of M^r Abel Slaney for himself and partners, for a new coinage of 700 tons of halfpence and farthings. They had enquired into all the coinages of that sort since the year 1672, and they found that in the reigns of King Charles II., King James II., and in the beginning of the reign of the late King and Queen, the coinage of halfpence and farthings was performed by one or more commissioners, who had money imprested from the Exchequer, to buy copper and tin at 20*d.* per pound "haverdupois," and accounted upon oath to the Government for the produce thereof.

Upon calling in the tin farthings and halfpence (by reason of the complaints made against them) there was a patent granted to the proposer and others, who contracted to change the tin farthings and halfpence, and to enable them to bear that charge they were allowed to coin 700 tons at 21 pence per pound weight, without being accountable to the Government, which reason now ceasing, they were of opinion that the former method by commission was most advantageous to the Government; especially if the same method were used for coining copper that was observed for gold and silver, viz., that money might be imprested from time to time to a fit officer to buy copper. The coinage should be carried on under the care and direction of the principal officers of the Mint, and the whole profit should be accounted for to her Majesty.

They did not hear that there was any demand for farthings and halfpence at present, if so it was from unequal distribution. They were overstocked at the General Post Office, about Newcastle, and at Leicester. The coinage of halfpence and farthings should be to the intrinsic value. Whenever a new coinage should be thought convenient it should be done in such small quantities as her Majesty should appoint to supply the decrease and loss of those already coined, without danger of new complaints of overstocking the nation. Dated 8 July 1703.

He had written several letters of late about our foreign troops and upon other occasions by the Duke's directions, but knew not whether they had come to hand, and begged M^r^ Taylor might own the receipt of them. The charge of the sick and wounded very much exceeded that of the last war, but that addition chiefly, if not wholly, arose from the want of a cartel for exchange of prisoners.

The complaints against some captains in the fleet for embezzlements were received; examination could not be made 'till the return of the ships. Dated 9 July 1703.

July 1 & 11. 107. Letter from H., Bishop of London, to the L^d [High Treasurer], respecting the circumstances of the Archbishop of Armagh. He says, "I cannot tell how far my Lord Primate has layed open his case to you, but you may be assured it is deplorable. I know w^t I say is to a person of honour, & therefore you shall have it without disguise. The poor gentleman is an excellent scholar & worthy good man, but little versed in y^e affairs of this world. His charitable & generous temper has left him very bare at this time, & to add to his affliction there are severall that insult over his low condition, & one in particular threatens him with a vexatious law suit; so as he is cast down to such a degree that he can think of nothing but retiring, & setting up a private schole for his livelyhood. By this you may guess how much he is distracted w^th his misfortunes, & the rather because he is y^e first instance of any such usage in a case of this nature. I beseech you therefore to extend yo^r compassion to him for his own sake and that of his order." Dated "11 July."

Minuted:—"Read to y^e Queen at S^t James's, 16 July 1703. Referrd to y^e Duke of Ormond."

With this is a letter of Narcissus, Archbishop of Armagh, to the L^d High Treasurer, dated Dublin, July 1, 1703. He says:—"Before this comes to y^r L^p's hands I hope my petition to my Lord Lieutenant, concerning y^e quarter's rent due from ye see of Ardmagh Febr. 2^d, will be laid before you, w^ch I presume her Majestie did not design I should lose, because her letter for my translation was dated in January. I understand y^t 200^li of ye said quarter's rent is given away already. I do therefore humbly supplicate for ye remaining part of it. My Lord, nothing but extreame necessity puts me upon this method. Whilst I was Archb^p of Dublin ye great number of poor scholars, poor curates, & poor scholemasters throwout y^e whole diocese, to w^m I gave pensions as they deserv'd, besides many other poor people, kept me low. Neverthelesse whilst I was three times one of y^e L^ds Justices here, I supported ye charges of ye government out of mine own pocket, & laid by all y^t y^e King allow'd as governm^t mony (w^ch was about 1,500^li) for building a library for publick use in this kingdome where is none. The library is now very near finisht, & will cost me about 1,800^li ye very structure, besides books, w^ch hath brought me to y^e last extremitie for ye publicke good.

"And being upon this juncture by her Majestie's special favour, translated to ye see of Armagh, w^ch hath brought a very great charge upon me, I must of necessity sink under it (& retire to some private place to live in), unless her Majestie will be pleas'd to bestow on me ye remaining part of y^e said quarter's rent, for w^ch I have two reasons.

"1. The first is, y^t it hath never yet been known in this kingdome y^t any part of ye revenues of a B^pricke hath been given away from ye succeeding B^p to any other uses: & t'will be a great affliction to me (to say no more) yf I am made ye first example of it; w^ch I hope y^r L^p will not do; especially seeing my successor & his, are restor'd to ye entire & full possession of their B^pricks with all their profits & emoluments.

"2. The second reason is, because beyond this quarter's rent not a penny can be expected from all y^e tenants of y^e see for above half a year, perhaps a twelv month yet to come. My own steward (who is appointed by ye Com^rs of y^e Revenue to gather y^t quarter's rent) assur'd me but yesterday y^t he rode two hundred miles to gather in y^t quarter's rent for y^m due Febr. 2, & could not get one single sixpence of it, such an extreame want of mony here is in this kingdome.

"My Lord, I can say no more, but y^t I hope y^r L^p will take compassion on my circumstances, & not think it reasonable y^t I, who have nothing, should be debarr'd of y^e profits of my see during y^e time of passing my patents, whilst others have alwaies enjoy'd y^e full profits of theirs."

[About July 13.] 113. Petition of Elizabeth Rice to the Lord High Treasurer. She was bitten and torn and in most deplorable condition, by the great dog (which ran mad), belonging to her Majesty's receipt of the Exchequer. 1703.

that the number of prisoners taken (by common report) was much superior to what were taken in the same time in the last war, and the exchange of prisoners was not then settled. They had essayed to make a calculation of the charge of that office for the last war, and they believed there was imprested to it from the Navy above 316,296*l.*, or about 35,000*l.* per ann. for the time of the war. There had been imprested for the said service this war 31,016*l.*, which added to 41,034 (the debt of that office) made 72,050*l.* for the past year. Bills of exchange should be carefully answered by every office to keep up their credit. That the people who entertained the sick seamen would not stay three months for their payments seemed very extraordinary, as it was found when the affairs were managed by some of the members of that board, they were not only content to stay half a year, but thought themselves well paid if their charges were defrayed in the year. Between 60 and 70,000*l.* was the debt at the end of the war, which had been paid off by degrees. The debts of the sick and wounded should not exceed six months. The exchange of prisoners should have been negotiated by the Com^rs^ of Prizes. Dated 14 July 1703. 3½ pages.

Some small additions were desired to be made to the Danes. The duke desired him to remind M^r^ Lowndes as to remitting part of the poundage for the use of the hospitals. These works could not be despatched without the assistance of many and able hands, who with great reason expected to be well and duely paid, &c.

July 21. 131. Letter signed W. Fanshawe, commencing "My Lord," relating the particulars of his severe sickness. His father's estate was ruined by his long and constant service to the Crown, for which they received nothing. 'Twas true King Charles his dead master was pleased to give his wife a pension of 400*l.* a year as her portion and promised to settle it on her, on him and his children for a term of years. King James took it away, because he had made his wife a Protestant, and Col. Sarsfeild (since Lord Lucan) unjustly seised an estate of 1,200*l.* a year in Ireland, which the King had purchased for his wife and children by her first husband, and afterwards got him (the writer) attainted in Parliament there, as a rebel to King James, which he never was. When King William had conquered Ireland this estate was seised as Lord Lucan's, and it cost him three years attendance and a great deal of money, nor could he get possession till two noble Earls of this kingdom and some other pretenders had received 2,000*l.* out of it, on pretence of debts which the Lord Lucan owed them; by which time his wife was dead, and his daughter-in-law, M^rs^ Sarsfeild, carried away the advantage. On his petition to her Majesty for the continuance of the pension, he had received 200*l.* out of the lotteries. Praying his Lordship to induce her Majesty to continue the pension to his poor children.

Aug. 6. 18. Report of William Blathwayt to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of George Granville, Esq., on behalf of Sir Bevill Granville, governor of the Island of Barbadoes, as to his salary. Her Majesty by order in council had forbidden the accepting any present by the governors of her Majesty's plantations, which for some years in Barbadoes had amounted to 2,000*l.* per ann. or more, in lieu of which Her Majesty had settled an additional salary of 800*l.*, which with the former salary amounted to 2,000*l.* per ann. The late governors of Barbadoes, viz., Col. Kendal, Col. Russel, and the Lord Gray, received their salaries from the 4½ cent. upon the place, which method had been altered to payment in the Exchequer here, and occasioned a demand for taxes not paid by any former governors.

The manner of living in Barbadoes was very expensive, and the provisions very dear; besides which it seemed very hard that a governor of the plantations, who was liable to answer his share of all impositions and public debts within the plantations whereof he was governor, should likewise pay the taxes imposed in England, where he was not resident, for a salary payable out of the revenue granted to the crown by an assembly of that plantation, and not by parliament here. His salary should commence from the date of his commission. Dated 6 Aug. 1703.

Aug. 12. 25. Letter of Charles Roudolf, Duke of Wurtemberg, to his Excellency the Duke of Marlborough, Captain General of the Confederate army. The crown of England owed the Danish troops 58,313 fr. 2 5 up to the end of the year 1702. The time fixed for the payment to the "solliciteurs" in Holland was expired, and so they kept back the ordinary pay of the troops. The forage was not paid for to the Danish regiments, viz. to the officers of infantry who had been in garrison on the frontiers and in the country acquired; cases of medicine had not been delivered to the sick, and the people would not receive sick regiments. These things were all directly contrary to the treaty with his Danish Majesty. His Excellency had promised that all arrears should be paid. There were no means for finding recruits in the winter, so that in the spring the corps would be ruined, if the arrears were not promptly paid, &c. Dated at the "Camp de Vale, Notre Dame," 23 August 1703. [French.] 4 pages.

Aug. 12. 26. Letter from Ad. Cardonnel to M^r^ Lowndes. He had been already informed of the daily clamours of the foreign troops for want of money. Their cries were become so loud and their necessities so great that the Duke could no longer forbear transmitting the enclosed papers for the Lord Treasurer. The Dutch had long since paid their quota. If a supply were not immediately remitted, not only for the Danes and Prussians, but for all the rest of the auxiliaries, it might be of dangerous consequence, for the troops must infallibly desert. Upon repeated promises from his Grace, the last winter. of a speedy supply, the Danes were prevailed with to make their recruits, in order to which they were obliged to take up money at interest from their solicitors at the Hague, who now began to stop the same, so that they were without money either from the Dutch or us, and must of course disband themselves if not relieved. We had altogether lost our credit with these foreign troops, and the Duke directed him to observe we must not expect one recruit for next year, until they had their levy money and other extraordinaries paid in advance. Dated, Camp at Val Notre Dame, 23 Aug. 1703.

Aug. 13. 28. Letter of Col. Christopher Codrington to [Lord High Treasurer]. He was just "rising from the grave & could scarce yet be reckoned amongst the living." He had hoped his friends would have procured him a furlough, and in person to have given an account to his Lordship of his expedition. He undertook it out of perfect necessity, that the soldiers might not all perish on board. Notwithstanding the baulk of his first design, to surprize the "Dos Dane," her Majesty's arms had a success. Why that success had no better consequence he knew not. M^r^ Walker, he hoped, had a better reason in reserve than he could find, or anyone else there. He continues, "But this my Lord, ile stake my head and all I'm worth on, that if he would have staid at Guardeloop 'till the 20th of May, all the people of Guardeloop, and eight hundred the best men of Martenico, would [have] bin our prisoners at discretion; which would have been in effect to have gaind all the French islands at a blow. We shall never have so fair a prospect agen." He could not hope to have the honour of waiting on his Lordship till next summer, but would send the result of several councils of war, with his reasons and explanations on them, by the next packet, which would arrive, he believed, as soon as the fleet would be returned to England. Dated "Antego," August 13 [1703 on the dorse]. 2 pages.

Oct. 15. 78. Letter signed Edward Southwell to the Lord Godolphin, giving an account of the proceedings [? of the government in Ireland], viz.: The speaker in most open manner had opposed what his grace thought was for the Queen's service, so that instead of the usual assistance from one in his post, they had been forced to labour against him. He hoped the last vote for supply had much broken the knot, and if what was given did not come up to her Majesty's wishes, yet it was a great deal more than most people expected. He enclosed various papers, and one from Sir Wm Robinson to show how he discharged himself. He believed the House would pass a censure upon their officers of the revenue in general, for not laying before them the credits as well as the debts. There would be great wrangling about the pensions, &c. The House of Lords continued pretty quiet, but Ld Meath threatened every day to bring in his case. The transports with the soldiers were ready to sail. Admiral Dilkes was in Cork harbour and had nearly recruited his victuals, and then would proceed with the E. India fleet. He had that night an express from Kinsale of the arrival of the Yarmouth, with seven companies of Lord Charlemont's regiment. The contingent sum in the establishment for the 6,000 men might prove short, which would prejudice her Majesty's service. Oct. 25. 91. Letter signed T. Brown, addressed to the Lord High Treasurer, urging the case of Mr Hugh Speke. Some persons of honour and quality " admired " that he had not some satisfaction already made him, and condemned the late reign in a great measure for the ill usage he then received; and they were all of opinion that some suitable return to him would be greatly for her Majesty's service, for he had many great relations, and was a person publicly known; an active man, of good sense and great understanding and experience in the affairs of the kingdom. It would be a great reflection upon his Lordship, after his Lordship's report, if he did not find some speedy relief from her Majesty. He would be forced to apply to the House of Commons, where he had at least 150 relations. Dated 25 Oct. 1703.

Minuted:—" My Lord had some thoughts to move the Queen in his behalf; but now, because he would not hinder him in making his application to the House of Coñons, my Lord will defer the favor he intended him till the session is over."

Oct. 26. 93. Letter signed Robert Gilliver to Christopher Tilson, Esq., at the Treasury Chambers, as to forbearing to levy the arrears of rent charged on the late Duke of Richmond and Lenox for lands in Sutton Marsh. He thought it a hard case to have to send out receipts for the tenants in arrear, to meet at places appointed to pay their money, and in the meantime to have an order to respite the same. By the middle of next month he hoped to receive considerable arrears, if the tenants had "not met w^th disencouragemt not to pay" him. Dated Grantham, 26 Oct. 1703. 1¼ pages.

Oct. 28. 97. Memorial from the Com^rs for Sick and Wounded Seamen, &c. to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the debt of the office (above 40,000*l.*). The quarterers of the sick and wounded seamen, who were three quarters in arrear, were very pressing. The daily expense of subsisting prisoners (who were above 3,000, with no English in France to exchange for them) was very large. A great number of sick seamen were expected home from the Straights and other parts, which would increase the debt. They pray for a supply. Dated 28 Oct. 1703. 2 pages.

It was now 14 months since he received the wounds (of which he was pretty well recovered), and he designed to enter speedily into the army.

By eviction at common law he was put in possession of the curacy of Aldgate, by the impropriator, Samuel Brewster, Esq., and had performed the office and duty of parochial minister or curate for near four years, to the general satisfaction of the parish. Under the false suggestion of its being a presentative church, and in the gift of the crown, he had been vexed with suits, and one Zachary Wells (after two other litigious persons) had taken the broad seal for a pretended title, and pretended that the expenses would be defrayed by the Treasury; praying that he might prosecute his title at his own charge.

Nov. 12. 118. Letter from the Comrs of Prizes to Mr Lowndes, sending such particulars as they conceived might deserve a regard, in case a new declaration of her Majesty's pleasure be made, relating to prizes in general. They were all on shore last year, so that they were mustered after the same method as the land forces, &c. Nov. 15. 121. Report of the Com^rs^ of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer on the controversy between Sir Peter Killigrew in behalf of the privileges of his quays and wharfs, within the port of Falmouth on one part, and the inhabitants and traders of the ancient burroughs of Penrin, Truro, and Helford of the other part. Their opinion was required whether the giving some further liberties to Penrin, Truro, and Helford would not increase the trade and be an advantage to the revenue. They reply that if the trade were singly to be considered without relation to the revenue it might be, the common received maxim would prevail, that the more open and free course it had, the more it would increase and enlarge itself; and on the other hand, if the revenue were singly to be considered, without regard to trade and the immunities, &c., of ancient companies and places of trade, then the more limited and circumscribed the places of importation and exportation were, the more easy it would be for the crown to manage its revenue, and upon this consideration they should readily subscribe to the opinion of their predecessors, that a custom house and collection at Falmouth would be sufficient; but since it was necessary to have regard to the trade and to the rights and privileges of corporations, and since the burroughs of Penrin and Truro were ancient ports and places of trade, and had time out of mind custom houses and collections there, and were as well as Falmouth members of the same head port of Plymouth, and were so set down and acknowledged to be in the return of the commission, which was executed in the year 1676; and since those custom houses had a right to take entries, as well as masters' reports inwards and outwards, it would be unreasonable to deny the merchants to ship and discharge their goods at their own ports, without being obliged to land their goods at Falmouth, and pay a duty to S^r^ Peter Killigrew's quays and wharfs. And if by the return of that commission the bounds of the port of Falmouth were unduly extended, in prejudice of the ports of Penrin and Truro, so as to comprehend all that deep water, where ships of burthen could only lie to take in and discharge their ladings, it would be to debar the burroughs of their natural rights to those waters, and before that commission, held and enjoyed in common with the port of Falmouth. It might not be unfit that a new commission should issue, to revise the former settlement, in which great care should be taken in the appointment of proper commissioners, and there shall be such a limitation of the quorum that the officers of the revenue be not overborne by persons of particular and private interest. They did not see that the giving the further liberties desired to the ports of Penrin and Truro would occasion much increase of the public charge. Although the port of Helford fell not directly under the same consideration, not being in the harbour, yet if a new commission were issued, it might not be unreasonable to revise the former settlement of that port. Dated 15 Nov. 1703.

Minuted:—"29th Novr 1703. A letter to be writt to the Comrs of the Customes to prepare a draught of such a Comon as they shall thinke necessary; with such Comrs & such quorum as they shall thinke proper." 2 pages.

[About Nov. 16.] 122. Petition of the poor inhabitants of Shields, Tynemouth, and adjacent places, "quartered att Tynemouth Castle," to the Lord High Treasurer. They had subsisted a company of invalids one whole year on "25th March next." Many of them old and helpless with families, who were a great burthen to the parish, which they themselves must be, unless her Majesty knew their grievances. They expected every day to be sent to gaol by the collectors of the taxes; praying for relief.

Minuted:—"Nov. 16th 1703. To be brought in to-morrow when the Duke of Malborough is here." 1 page.

[About Nov. 16.] 123. Petition of John Swalwell, Thomas Bone, John Graham, John Potts, and many others of her Majesty's tenants in Cumberland. They had laid the case before his Lordship and the other Lords of the Treasury from time to time for this ten years past of their great sufferings by the Lord Preston's officers. Their lands had not only been forced from them, but they had paid their rents over again to the King's Receiver General. They were reduced to great poverty, having neither bread nor habitation for their poor families, who formerly lived richly. At the death of Lord Preston their Lordships ordered an account to be taken of the arrears due to the Crown from the estate, which was in the hands of the Earl of Carlisle and Sir George Fletcher, being above 2,000*l*., and 700*l*. in the hands of Mr Merriott. Their Lps ordered 200*l*. for present subsistence, which, when divided by Captn Baker, was 6*l*. per family; praying relief.

Minuted:—"16 Nov. 1703. Mr Tailour to see wt these men have had already." Again, "3d Apr. 1704. Dismiss ye peticon."

Also the account referred to. 2 pages.

Nov. 16. 124. Letter of Mary Nevill, relict and administratrix of the late Vice-Admiral Nevill, apparently addressed to Mr Loundes, to whose favour she had been recommended by Lord Burlington. The Lord High Treasurer had referred her case to Mr Parkhurst, whose opinion was that the money ought to be paid through the Comrs of the Navy; but this made her case the harder, as the Comrs of the Navy would not allow any sum without vouchers, and Mr Nevill dying in the West Indies, many of his papers and vouchers were lost, and if his Lordship would not allow this sum (laid out for the public) it was utterly lost. His Lordship could do it, as in Sir David Mitchell's case, who borrowed for his own use 900 pistoles at Calais at 23*s.*, and was permitted to repay them here at 17*s.* If his Lordship pleased to mind the dates he would find the money was borrowed at the time the fleet came into Calais, after the mighty storm in which Sir Francis Wheeler was lost, and many of the ships much damaged, Mr Nevill being left the commander-in-chief without any contingent money. Dated 16 Nov. 1703.

Mr Parkhurst's report, her petition, and another paper on the same subject.

Nov. 17. 126. Report of Sir Chr Wren to the Lord High Treasurer, in relation to the Cotton Library. He says, " I have viewed the room now used for it in Cotton House, & find it in so ruinous a condition that it cannot be put in a substantial repair without taking down and rebuilding a good part of the dwelling house. I humbly propose the removing the sd library to a room that may be made convenient for it, over the ushers near the House of Lords, the plan whereof and estimate for fitting it up and repairing the other are annexed; & I humbly observe thereupon that tho' the proposed library will not be two fifths the expense of the other, yet 'twill be more capacious, and the access to it will be better. 'Twill also have a lodging room & closet over it for the library keeper, which the other is not capable of." Dated 17 Nov. 1703.

Accompanied by the estimate and plan.

Nov. 22. 134. Presentm^t from the Postmasters General touching an establishment of a new post from Exeter to Truro. Addressed to the L^d High Treasurer. The Lord "Grandville" and several gentlemen of Cornwall had represented that the post road passed along the south coast of Cornwall, whereby several inland towns were under great disadvantages in their correspondence. They paid 2*d.* a letter beyond the postage, as they were served only by a bye post. Exeter, Plymouth, and Launceston had been consulted and a scheme proposed. They doubted whether the charge would be met by the increase of letters, especially when they considered the number of franks. They found by experience in other places, that where they had made the correspondence more easy and cheap, the number of letters had thereby much increased. Dated 22 Nov. 1703.

Nov. 22. 137. Report of the Comrs of Prizes to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the claims of Phineas Bowles, Esq., agent for prizes in the fleet, commending him for his services, &c. During the hurry of business, occasioned by the Vigo booty, they appointed Captain Atkinson, agent for prizes in the port of London, which he took care of until called to Portsmouth, when Mr Roop was appointed. Mr Tirrell, their agent at Lisbon, had disposed of several prize ships, and sent home an account of the produce, and desired an allowance of 5*l*. per cent. for his agency, which they thought reasonable. Nov. 23. 138. Letter of J. Rosenkrank [to the Ld High Treasurer] as to what was due to the King his master for the 2,000 men sent into the service of the allies, and to the same King's troops in Flanders for recruits, forage, medicines, &c.; praying payment. Dated 23 Nov. 1703.

King James II. at his enlargement settled a pension of 4*s*. a day on him, which was in arrear six years and eight months, &c.; praying for his pension.

[About Nov. 23.] 141. Petition of the "parish" of Stonehouse, in the county of Gloucester, to the Queen. There was yearly paid out of that parish (besides tenths) to the receiver of her Majesty's quit rents for that county 6*l.*, and there was great want of a grammar school in the parish for the better education of the youth, that they might not be seduced from the Church of England by law established, as too many in those parts were; praying her Majesty to bestow the 6*l.* for the erecting the school. Signed by the vicar and seven others.

[? About Nov. 23.] 142. A paper stating that D^r^ Woodroffe, governor and tutor of the youths of the Greek Communion, residing in Oxford, had petitioned Her Majesty (1.) For an establishment for them to the number of ten to receive their education according to the Church of England. (2.) That several of them having been above three years under the care and at the sole charges of Dr. Woodroffe (excepting 200*l.* received of royal bounty), there might be a supply for the same amounting to about 1,100*l.* (3.) That prosecution might be stopped for 1,100*l.* for which the doctor was indebted as proprietor of one of the salt-rocks in Cheshire, the duty of which came to many thousands per annum. The cost of the youths could not be less than three or four hundred per annum. Her Majesty's reply was in favour of all these prayers; and the petitioner prayed that whatever was granted might be applied to pay off his debt for the duty of rock-salt.

The following document accompanies this paper and is in the same hand:—

"George & John Aptaloghi, two of the Greek youths who were under y^e^ care of D^r^ Woodroffe, in Oxford, having y^e^ last year been prevailed on to withdraw themselves from thence, upon pretence that they should have much better provision made for them, & be sent into their own countrey, as they should desire, & coming to London were furnisht with money for their voyage and had bills of exchange to be received in Holland, as y^e^ most convenient place from whence to take ship for their own countrey.

"As soon as they were landed in Holland several persons were ready to receive & attend them (whom afterwards they knew to be priests of y^e^ Romish Church), who treated them very kindly, carrying them from place to place, 'till being at the Hague they proposed to them to take boat to Middleburg.

"Being in the boat they found they were steering a quite contrary course, whereupon asking y^e^ master of y^e^ boat whither they were going, he told them 'twas whither he had orders to carry them; & so on they went, till they were brought to Antwerp. Going out of y^e^ boat they askt Stephen Constantine (who was y^e^ third who had made his escape from Oxford, & as it afterwards appear'd had long entertained a correspondence with Romish emissaries, having for above 3 years before sold himself & his brethren to them), where they were, who bid them fear nothing for they were safe, & thereupon pulled out of his pocket a purse from 1703. yᵉ Governʳ of Flanders, & now they were sufficiently sensible how they were betrayed, as they afterwards found in all places they went thorow.

"At their landing at Antwerp they were welcom'd by 3 priests, who were to take care of them, who attended them to Mechlin & thence to Louvain, where they were presented to yᵉ internuncio of yᵉ Pope, who at yᵉ first view of them said, Homer is not here! That is not Homer! pointing at the eldest of them. It seems their greatest aime was at him, & they were troubled he was not with them. This Homer is he who was yᵉ eldest of them all, & is now in London, in order to return into his own countrey, he being already appointed to be druggerman in yᵉ place of one lately deceas'd at Smyrna.

"Here they were ask't wᵗ money they had receiv'd, & they answering that they had receiv'd 50 guineas, they were told more was return'd for them, naming an 100 or 150 guineas more; but they averring they had receiv'd no more, yᵉ person who put yᵉ question said there must be an account taken of wᵗ moneys his holinesse had ordered for their use; for 'twas above 3 years since money had been order'd for them, & thereon yᵉ person [viz.]* was named, who was appointed to manage that affair.

"And now they began to deale plainly with them, greately exclaiming against the English as yᵉ worst of hereticks, & telling them that they were to renounce all their errors, & to be instructed that they might be receiv'd into the true Catholick Church. In order wherunto they were put into the Irish College, & often disputed with, to be convinced of their errors; but that not prevailing, they were told that his Holinesse had a desire to see them, & to Rome they must goe, where they should find what it was to offend an Apostolick Minister. And so they were sent to Paris, where yᵉ Pope's Nuncio entertain'd them, beyond wᵗ they had ever seen; & to soften what had been said to them at Lovain, he told them of yᵉ great love his Holiness had for them, & a letter of grace came to them from his Holiness, written in Greek, to confirm them therein.

"They had desired to have had some new cloaths but 'twas denyed, they being told yᵗ his Holiness had a great desire to see them in their own countrey habit, meaning yᵉ habit they wore here in England & had travelled in, & are now return'd in yᵉ same to London.

"From Paris they are sent to Avignion, & from thence to Marseilles, where they were shipt for Civita Vecchia; but yᵉ master touching at Genoa, & giving them leave to walk about the streets, they found out yᵉ English consul, relating to him how they had been decoyed from England, where they were under her Maᵗⁱᵉˢ protection, & how they had been since treated, & that they were now sending to Rome to be put in yᵉ Inquisition, & therefore begging his protection, who accordingly undertook to protect them, & having withstood all yᵉ endeavours of the Romanists to recover them,

The Governor designed to forward the accounts, but was at New Cesaria at the meeting of the Assembly there. The writer had begun to frame a rent roll of her Majesty's quit rents, and of the few he had registered he found most of them had not paid any quit rent since the time they had their patents granted them. Some were 18 or 16 years in arrears, and tho' the quit rent was but a small acknowledgement, yet when it was perfected he believed it would amount to a considerable sum. He found the patentees were very backward in bringing their patents to be registered, so that he designed, as soon

Some time after the discovery of the conspiracy to assassinate the late King William, the petitioner being informed that one Capt[n] Joseph Saunders had been hired by several disaffected persons to convey Cardwell Goodman, one of the conspirators, Coll[l] Ingram and W[m] Obrian into France; on the said Saunders' return, caused him to be seized, and at great trouble and charge prevailed on him to make a full discovery of many very material things for the service of the then King and Government, to the great satisfaction of the Principal Secretary of State, to whom it also appeared, upon his 1703. examination, that the said Saunders had been a great agent for the French smugglers, as well as for the "Owlers." The said Saunders gave information respecting divers smugglers, upon which many of them fearing he would appear against them, caused him to be arrested for a fine imposed upon him for importing French silks; the petitioner knowing it would be a prejudice to the Government to lose the services of Saunders, borrowed the money (150*l.*) to pay off the execution, and the petitioner was then arrested for the sum borrowed; praying the money might be paid out of the Exchequer. He had received letters from the New Forest giving an account of the great damage done there by the late storm, as well in the blowing down many trees as ruining the lodges, and in particular that of Bolderwood Walk, of which the Honble Mr Smith was master keeper. Asks for issue of a warrant to deliver to the Purveyor of the Navy above 1,000 trees fit for the navy, and to sell the rest. that they might not be stolen, for upon this occasion the country people were very busy. Many hundred trees had been blown down in the Forest of Dean which might be sold upon the issue of a warrant, &c. There was great damage done in several parks and forests, the walls and pales being blown down, which he had ordered to be temporarily shored up, to keep the deer in, till an estimate could be made for a thorough repair of the same. Asks for directions. Dated 6 Dec. 1703.

He had well considered the matter, but lest any clamours might afterwards arise, had consulted the keepers of the respective walks, as also some of the regarders living on that side the forest, who all joined in opinion that furze and heath might very well be spared out of the said walks to supply her Majesty's dockyard at Portsmouth, without any prejudice to the vert and venison; provided those persons who should be appointed by his Lordship's warrant to cut it might be directed by the keepers. If he was not misinformed the persons who then sold most to the dock cut it in the forest. Dated 6 Dec. 1703.

83. Petition of Col. Colepeper to the Lord High Treasurer, showing that there remained due to the crown on Major Clerke's account for the hearth money 1,000*l.*, that Sir Ph. Warwick bequeathed the manor of Frognall and his lands in Chiselhurst, Foots Cray, and Paulins Cray, in Kent, to his nephew, Henry Clerke, eldest son of Major Clerke, the King's debtor, who also inherited divers lands at Endford in Wiltshire charged with the debt; that Ph. Warwick [son of Sir Philip], petitioner's brother [in law], gave all his estate to his cousin, Eliz. Clerke (afterwards Graswick), daughter to Major Clerke, the King's debtor, with certain conditions. The said Ph. Warwick gave the use of 6,000*l.* which was extorted from the petitioner upon a corrupt and usurious bargain, to receive 2,500*l.* a year for the use of the 6,000*l.*, and was thereby forfeited to the petitioner, and considering he (i.e. Ph. Warwick) had several debts to pay, contracted before and since he was Envoy Extraordinary from King Charles II. to the King of Sweden, and about 3,000*l.* being due to him from King Charles, he desired that sum should go to pay his debt, and the surplus, if any, he left to Mrs. Grasswick during her life, so that she was only a legatee and executrix in trust for the Countess of Holderness [petitioner's sister]. Elizabeth Graswick, under pretence of the will, had seised on the testator's real and personal estate in England and Sweden, to the value of much more than 1,000*l.*, which the testator gave her, whereby her estate in the testator's estate determined. The Countess of Holderness [petitioner's sister] being dead, had left the petitioner her executor, from whom the said Elizabeth Graswick had extorted the 6,000*l.*; and now she had sold divers lands, subject to the King's debt of 1,000*l.* due from Major Clerke, and endeavoured to recover 3,000*l.* then in the Queen's hands, to which she had no title, being only executrix in trust for the petitioner, whereby he would be disabled from paying the money he owed the Queen; prays that no part of the 3,000*l.* in the Queen's hands might be paid to the said Graswick, but that it might be employed to pay the 1,000*l.* due from Major Clerke, and also from the petitioner, and that extents in aid might speedily issue to levy the 18,000*l.* and other moneys due to the petitioner, to enable him to pay the debts to the Queen.

Another petition from him to the Queen, in which he says he owed the crown for rent for the customs, &c. many thousand pounds, which he could not pay until divers persons who owed him 157,000*l.* paid him; he had discovered that the amount was in the Queen's hands, pretended to be lent to her, &c.; prays that it might be sequestered, &c. On the dorse is: "y^e^ pet^r^ is mad." 2½ pages.

Report of the Officers of the Works to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Alexander Fort, master joiner by patent, which stood suspended over the two reigns of Kings Charles II. and James II., but was acted on in King William's time. They employed the person fittest to do the work, and had asserted a power over the patentees to employ whom they pleased, when necessity required it (of which they were judges, as well as of the prices) without which they could not be responsible, and the patentees would be too apt to impose on the office by enhancing the prices. Dated 28 Feb. 1703–4.

Feb. 29. 93. Report of M^r^ S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the Lord High Treasurer. He says having perused " the petition of Gilbert Jones, woodward of her Majesties forest of Waltham, setting forth his fidelity in the discharge of his trust for twenty-three years past, and that he did formerly fence in two groves called King's Grove & Queen's Grove at his own charge, without any allowance for the same, that he hath divers perquisites due to him out of her Majesty's timber and wood within the said forest when felled by order of the crowne; that he is unpaid his wages as woodward for some years, and that he had been prosecuted by malitious men, and confined several months, which cost him above two hundred pounds, and praying that his case might be considered before any lease passes of the said groves. I thereupon inclosed a copy of the petition in a letter to the verderers of the said forest, wherein I desired them to examine the allegations thereof, and certify in particular what perquisites do belong to the woodward, if her Majesty makes a grant of the said groves, with the wood thereon, and have received the annexed certificate under the hands of three of them, wherein they say that they find all the allegations in the petition, and especially that relating to the perquisites, to be true; that they have viewed the four groves intended to be granted to George Finch, Esq^re^, and that the assarting the same will not only deface the beauty of the forest, but be prejudicial to the vert & venison." When one Goulstone had petitioned for a lease of these groves, he (the surveyor) had written to Jones, and had received an answer that the assart would not be prejudicial to the forest, either in vert or venison, there being much better covert near the said groves than ever they were or were likely to be. He (the surveyor) had viewed and caused them to be measured and valued, when he received a warrant to make a constat for M^r^ Finch, and considered it a very different case to that of Walwood (the assarting whereof the verderers alleged 1703–4. proved fatal to the adjacent part of the forest), where little or no covert remained, for in the neighbourhood of these groves were many hundred of acres of good covert, &c. He had prepared a constat of the premises to have passed to M^r^ Finch for 31 years at 4*l.* 10*s.* per ann. rent and 20*l.* fine, with an exception of all mines, quarries, and prerogatives, and timber trees then or thereafter growing thereon, and a clause giving liberty to enclose and convert the premises to arrable or pasture at his own charge, the lessee leaving such a sufficient number of choice young saplings for timber in the most convenient parts of the premises as the woodward or other proper officer should think reasonable, &c. Dated 29 Feb. 1703–4.

March 3. 98. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the Lord High Treasurer on the representation of the Lord Granville, finding that the castle of Lidford (wherein the stannary prison for Devonshire had been kept, and within the site whereof the courts were held for the borough of Lidford) was certified by the parliamentary survey in 1650 to be in much decay. He believed nothing had been done to it since that time, for nothing remained but the bare stone walls without any roof. The lead and timber he believed had been pillaged by the poor people, of whom the neighbouring country (being adjacent to Dartmoor) abounded. The want of a place to confine offenders in made the laws ineffectual, and whilst her Majesty continued to hold the pre-emption of tin in her own hands, the reparation of the prison was of the greater necessity. He had no objection to the estimate for the same. He was told the inhabitants were very apprehensive of the charge of a parcel of necessitous prisoners on that poor place.

The castle of Trematon was anciently the seat of the Earls of Cornwall, but nothing remained of it besides the "out walls" for many years; but within the site thereof was an old house wherein the keeper of the castle "uses to live," and in which the prison for persons arrested in the whole honor, manor, and fee, is kept, and wherein are held the courts for that part of the honor and manor which lieth in Cornwall. This castle with the site, a small park, and some parcels of land, were granted, a° 2 Car. I., with the office of keeper, by letters patent for three lives at a rent of 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, &c. The court and prison would be totally ruined unless about 60*l.* were laid out on them. But it was probable the proceeds of the copy of the "stannary laws" to be printed, would, besides defraying the necessary charges, go a great way towards the repair of the prison and court house. Dated 3 March 1703–4.

March 3. 99. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the L^d High Treasurer, on the account of John Lesbire, an inhabitant of the island of Jersey, of several fines and forfeitures imposed there, which (as he alleged) belonged to her Majesty, but had been taken by Philip Pipon, under pretence that he was farmer of the revenue there; though they were no part of the revenue of the island, being imposed for offences committed against penal statutes made in England. The Lord Jermyn, Governor of the island of Jersey, or his farmer, was not entitled by his patent to the Queen's part of forfeitures on penal statutes. Such forfeitures could not be granted before the crown was entitled by the act done that made the forfeiture; an account should be required of such fines, &c. Dated 3 March 1703–4.

March 3. 100. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Ambrose Pudsey, Esq. In 1696 the King granted to George Tushingham, gent., all the mines and veins of lead found, or to be found, in the lands or field of Grinton, Whiteside, and Harkaside, parcel of the manor of Grinton in Yorkshire; and also within the lands of Fremington, in the county of York, for 31 years; at certain rents and 1/10 of the annual profits. The petitioner desired a grant of the tenth part, which had amounted to about 20*l.* a year. The mines had proved richer since the last Michaelmas. The petitioner offered 30*l.* a year and a third part of what the tenth should produce above the 30*l.* a year. Advising that he should pay 20*l* a year and two thirds, or at least a moiety of what it should amount to above the rent. He had received an anonymous paper that the produce had been most extraordinary, and that the tenth might come to 300*l.* or 400*l.* per ann. Dated 3 March 1703–4.

March 13. 111. Report of the Attorney General to the Queen, on the petition of James Trefusis, whereby it was represented that the late King, by letters patent of 17 Oct. in his 3^rd year, granted to the petitioner and others for 14 years the sole use and benefit of an engine whereby they were enabled to work under water for several hours together, with a prohibition to any person from making use of the like without licence during that term, and that none of the patentees had worked the same but the petitioner, and he had made no profit of the same, although he had been at great charges. It was doubted whether what he should take out of the sea would belong to him, the patent not fully expressing the same. The petitioner prayed Her Majesty to grant him the treasures he should take by means of the invention for seven years, rendering such portion as to Her Majesty should seem meet. The Attorney certifies that King William III., by letters patent of the above date, granted to James Trefusis and two others the sole privilege of using and enjoying for 14 years an engine by them invented, of covering vessels and pipes, whereby they were enabled to work several fathoms under water for divers hours together, without any want of air, which patent would determine in October 1705; but there was no grant to the patentees of the goods they should gain, &c. The Attorney General's opinion was that it would be for the benefit of the Queen and the public, to encourage the petitioner to proceed in gaining by his invention that which would otherwise never be likely to be of use to anybody, and to grant the petitioner what he should gain out of the British seas by means of his engine within the time desired; reserving such a portion as Her Majesty should think fit, and Her Majesty might lawfully make such a grant. Dated 13 March 1703–4.

At the Court at Whitehall, 17 April 1704, Her Majesty directed that the Lord High Treasurer should report what proportion should be reserved for Her Majesty.

March 30. 147. Report of a Committee of the House of Lords "appointed to consider the method of keeping records in offices." They had enquired how the records in the Tower of London were kept, and had sent for Mr William Petyt, the keeper of those records, and had heard his account of the method observed. They had appointed a sub-committee to repair to the Tower to view the records and satisfy themselves of the state the same were in and how the office was executed, which they did accordingly. They report that the records in the office were in good condition and carefully kept, and the present officer had fairly transcribed the old calendars of most of the rolls; but there were a great number of rolls from the first year of King John to the end of Edward IV., without calendars or abstracts, viz., Rotuli Normanniæ, Franciæ, Vasconiæ, Walliæ, Romæ, Scotiæ, Almaniæ, et Hiberniæ, which would require careful perusal of all the entries by the clerks employed therein. The committee were of opinion that this would be a public service.

In Cæsar's chapel under the leads in the White Tower, multitudes of records in several reigns, some relating to state matters and some to courts of justice, lay in confused heaps, and if speedy care were not taken of them were in great danger of utterly perishing. It would be a public damage, as well as dishonour to the kingdom, to suffer such memorials of antiquity to be lost. This would be too great a work to be undertaken by the keeper of the records, unless there were allowances made him for a considerable number of clerks who understood the languages and hands in which the records were written, and were capable of making abstracts of them under the care and direction of that officer. It did appear by the writs de calendariis faciendis, de rotulis et scriptis in recto ordine ponendis et expensis clericis ministrandis that these allowances had been anciently made to clerks attending the office of records within the Tower.

If these records were cleaned and reduced to order, they might be placed in the room where the present office was kept at a small expense.

Signed—"Math. Johnson, Cler. Parliamentor."

There is also an order by the House of Lords signed by him that this report should be, by the Lord High Treasurer, laid before her Majesty to give directions; and the Lord High Treasurer to acquaint the House what was done therein in the next sessions. Dated 30 March 1704.

Accompanied by the case of John, Bishop of Chichester, as to an estate in Chancery Lane belonging to the see, consisting mostly of ruinous buildings thought capable of considerable improvement, for the present and future benefit of the bishopric. The Bishop had obtained an Act of Parliament and purchased ground and decayed houses to a considerable value, and expended about 2,000*l.* without any benefit, but much to his prejudice, unless he could bring it to an issue.
Also, "The case of John, Bishop of Chichester, and Sarah his wife." This relates to a debt due to Francis Jenks (the former husband of the Bishop's wife) from the late Duke of Monmouth, who was indebted to Jenks about 8,000*l.*, to which the Bishop laid claim.
Minuted:—"4 Apr. 1704. My Ld. can do nothing in this matter." 5½ pages.

1704. April 4. 9. Letter signed "Le C. Maffei" to the Lord [? High Treasurer,] as to payment of bills of exchange drawn on him from Turin. The treaty imported that the subsidies should be paid at Turin at two months advance, &c. Dated 15 Apr. 1704, N.S. [French.]
Translation thereof. 4½ pages, quarto.

[? About April 5.] 10. Petition of Thomas, Earl of Limerick, to the Queen. He had been bred a soldier and was colonel of an Irish regiment in France, and brigadier, worth 5,000*l.* a year. At the command of King Charles II. (pursuant to a vote of Parliament) he left those posts, rejected far greater offers, and lost 6,500 livres due to him for recruits, &c., on purpose to enter the service of England; of all which the Earl of Montague, then ambassador in France, was a living witness. In consideration of which 500*l.* a year for life was settled on him, he was made a general of the army then designed for Flanders, and after the peace of Nimeguin he was appointed deputy-governor of Tangier, and from thence removed to be governor of New York, and continued six years there. He reduced the five nations of warlike Indians (who before used to destroy the English plantations) to become subjects of the crown, and laid out above 10,000*l.* in a war against the French of Canada, and engaged for 2,500*l.* more. On the attainder of his brother William, the late Earl, for the last rebellion in Ireland, the estate was granted to the Earl of Athlone, who sold part to others. The petitioner was entitled to the estate after the death of his brother; but the settlement under which he derived his title was mislaid, and could not be found before the time appointed by the act of resumption. He was debarred of two and a half years' rent received by the trustees, amounting to upwards of 6,000*l.*, and of rectories and tithes amounting to 700*l.* a year, and compelled to pay 5,400*l.* to the purchasers under the Earl of Athlone. His estate in Ireland was so encumbered that it yielded little more than the interest on the debts. He received no part of his pension since 1688, the arrears were 7,500*l.* Though he received tallies for 2,500*l.* for which he stood engaged at New York, by which he lost 20*l.* per cent., yet he received no part of his disbursements in the war against the French of Canada. Nearly 20,000*l.* were due to him; prays for part of the money due to him to redeem his estate.
Minuted:—"5 Apr. 1704. To be laid before ye Queen."
Duplicate having additional minutes, viz.:—"Read 24th May 1704. My Lord is to speak to ye Duke of Ormonde about him."
Again:—"25th July 1705. Speak to Mr Blathwayt abt this at his next attendance." 2 pages (brief size).

[? About April 5.] 11. Memorial on behalf of Robert Cole, H. M. agent and consul at Algiers, to the Lord High Treasurer, asking that his two last years bills for extra disbursements might be paid. He had to pay two per cent. per month for interest. The French consul's annual allowance of 3,000 crowns, and 2,000 for necessary expenses, were punctually remitted to him from Marseilles, in specie. He and other "Christian ministers" at the Turks' two solemn festivals had to make presents of 80*l.* besides the costs for secret intelligence, as well as gratifications to the Algiers men of war, for humanity to English ships. The continuance of the present good understanding, was of high import to the safety of our navigation. He had successfully preserved peace for near ten years, amidst incessant artifice of the French court to destroy it. He was exposed to frequent hazards in the faithful discharge of his duty, by those ragged untractable soldiers, who in 1683 and 1684 shot off two French consuls into atoms at the mouth of a canon. The last war continued five years and our merchants lost 157 vessels. Our country was deprived of 3,000 seamen carried into captivity, and the late King Charles expended 300,000*l.* to secure our trade and maintain a squadron "to cruize on them"; and nothing could have been more acceptable to the king than the renewal of peace by the Earl of Torrington, as he declared on the arrival of Admiral Aylmer at Whitehall with the capitulation. The naval strength of that place consisted of three gallies and 25 ships, from sixty guns downwards. Soon after the peace of Ryswick, a squadron of ships ranged the Mediterranean under Admiral Aylmer, who visited that place and continued there 17 days, when the consul plentifully entertained, in his own house, two and some days three hundred officers, gentlemen, and seamen. He transmitted his account of this extraordinary charge to the Secretary of State, who was pleased not to allow but sent it to the Treasury, where it was never taken notice of. He hoped the present happy posture of affairs with Algiers, and the above circumstances, would induce his lordship effectually to favour him to make his circumstances more easy.

Minuted:—"5 Apr. 1704. The Queen will consider him for any extraordinary expence that is necessary during her Ma^ts reign." 2 pages.

Report of the Com[rs] of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, on the representations and affidavit relating to the Sidney frigate, under the command of Captain Upton, and the benefit to the merchants, as well as the fishery and coasting trade in Cornwall, in being defended by the said frigate. They had thought it a duty (not having heard of any remarkable services from Captain Upton), to dispose of the vessel by public sale, but had respited the same till his Lordship's pleasure were known. Their opinion was, that if it was thought necessary to have a man-of-war to cruise, she should be appointed by the Admiralty. Dated 11 April 1704.

entirely upon his Lordship for what he should think most proper for him. He tendered the enclosed for his L^ps consideration. By his L^ps administration there was such a currency of money, that interest was reduced without a law which parliament laboured in vain to procure. This had in a great measure eased the burden of the taxes. His Lordship's own county would have been reduced to the lowest extremity but for the relief in the tin affair, whereby property was doubled, and the labouring tinner had an advance and was freed from the greatest oppressions, &c. Dated April 18, 1704.

Minuted:—"24 May 1704. My L^d will first discourse M^r Travers."

With this is another paper giving many reasons for the appointment of a surveyor of the Duchy of Cornwall, then vacant for about 20 years. It commences:—"Her Maties revenues, estates, & interest in the Dutchy of Cornwall have been greatly prejudiced, and the tenants of the said duchy have laboured under great inconvenience, as will appear by the particulars herein. But a very considerable interest among the freeholders of the county & in several borough towns [was] entirely lost to the government," which might (it was presumed) be remedied by reviving that ancient office.

The second part of the paper commences:—"The tenants of the Dutchy of Cornwall lye under greater inconveniences than any other tenants in the said county in these particulars." One of their grievances was that the records which previous to the war were kept in the county, were then removed to London. 3 pages quarto.

May 10. 52. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, on the memorial of Richard Fletcher, praying to be a deputy to one of the Queen's waiters in the port of London, in the room of Mr. Edlin, deceased. They had appointed Robert Olton, a keyman (who for 30 years had performed landwaiter's duty, and was esteemed one of the ablest landwaiters, although he had not attained the establishment of a landwaiter), to act for Mr. Herne, who was in Ireland. The latter had since sent over his deputation from Ireland for one Mr. James Benn to be his deputy, who was admitted and sworn, so that there was no room for either Olton or Fletcher. [The landwaiters] took upon themselves to appoint deputies without the approbation of his Lordship. By private bargains and subterfuges, the deputies were left to no other maintenance than the scrambling fees at the waterside, and were under great temptations to betray their trust. The Com^rs on the two last occasions had obliged the principals to give instruments to the Receiver General, to pay their deputies the allowance of 20*l.* per ann. each, and if his Lordship approved they moved that the order should be made general.

VOL. XC.

1704. [? About May 10.] 55. Petition and representation of the President, Treasurer, and Governors of the Hospital of S^t^ Thomas the Apostle in Southwark, to the Lord High Treasurer. By letters patent of King Edw. VI. for founding the hospital, the mayor, commonalty, and citizens of London were made grantees of the revenues and perpetual governors of the hospital, with power to substitute other governors. The hospital was principally designed for the relief and cure of such sick persons as should be in the city of London or the suburbs thereof, who for many years had so much increased that the ancient revenue was not sufficient. During the late war with France, timely provision could not be made for the sick and wounded at the out-ports, and the Com^rs^ for sick and wounded urged the governors to admit them to the hospital, promising to endeavour to obtain an allowance in respect thereof by the consideration of the Treasury. They thereupon admitted between 10 Feb. 1688 and 25 June 1702, 4,992 poor sick and wounded seamen, and from that time to 1 May 1704 about 1,000 more, the far greater number of whom had been cured and sent into the service. The number of days of the 4,992 all added would amount to 330,843. The allowance for each man's diet in the hospital was 4*d.* per diem, and the charge of doctor, surgeon, apothecary, nurses, medicines, lodging, &c., was computed at least at 8*d.* per diem more, so that the charge the hospital had been put to was 16,542*l.* 3*s.* The Government during the late war allowed for the quarters of each seaman, while under medical care at the out-ports, 12*d.* a day, and the surgeon 6*s.* 8*d.* per head, and paid for all medicines and allowed a salary to the physician; and in cases of amputation allowed the surgeon 20*s.*, all which allowances were computed at 2*s.* a day per man, at which rate the seamen would have cost 33,084*l.* It seemed reasonable that those who were wounded in the public service "should be repaired at the public charge;" praying payment for the use of the hospital by the Com^rs^ for sick and wounded seamen.

They also represent that in March and April 1702, Doctor Richard Forlesse, one of the physicians, and M^r^ Thomas Elton, one of the surgeons, in a clandestine manner, and without the privity of the petitioners, applied to the said late Com^rs^ for a debt of 6*s.* 8*d.* per head, pretended to be due to them and the other surgeons, for attendance, &c., on 4,146 sick and wounded seamen, cured in the hospital during the war; upon which application, the Com^rs^ ordered 1,382*l.* to be paid to M^r^ Jeremiah Garrard, their secretary, in full of the pretended debt. This being casually discovered, the doctor and surgeon were dismissed. The other physicians, &c., were in no way privy to the application. The hospital had always paid the doctors, &c., and in nowise suffered them to take anything from the patients. They also paid for medicines, and no one could be entitled to that money but the governors of the hospital; praying that the money might be paid to them.

If he were detained here until an answer were returned from New York it would be twelve months. 1704. and had quitted a beneficial employment abroad, to attend the late King in the war in Ireland, the Duke thought he well deserved a mark of her Majesty's favour. He quotes a similar case of allowance to Col. Tobias Purcell, and says the city of Cork was first formed into a government in the year 1692, but by its situation it was incapable of strength, and was inhabited by merchants, and there would be no occasion to continue a governor there after the decease of the petitioner. July 12. 48. Copy of (1) an address of the Council and Assembly of the province of Massachusets Bay in New England, to the Queen, in praise of Col. Dudley, Captain General and Governor, for his success with the Indians, until the French emissaries had seduced them. Through their irruption the Governor had to garrison the frontiers for more than 200 miles, and to send parties into the desert, if possible to find out those bloody rebels in their obscure recesses, under covert of a vast hideous wilderness (their manner of living being much like that of the wild beasts), and give check to their insolencies. There were not less than 1,900 effective men in arms upon the eastern and western frontiers, besides the vessels and men on the coast, against the infestings of the French from Canada, Port Royal, and the West Indies, and they thought the neighbouring governments should bear a part of the charge. They express their detestation of the piracies and robberies lately committed by Captain Quelch and company, and hoped the speedy justice done on them would vindicate the Government from the imputation of giving countenance to them.

Aug. 1. 71. Letter of the Duke of Ormond [Lord Lieut. of Ireland] to the Lord High Treasurer, respecting the lighthouses in Ireland. The Parliament of Ireland having observed upon the establishment an allowance of 500*l.* per ann. for maintaining lighthouses, proceeded to an enquiry how they were supported. They found that the patent which Lord Abercorn had, obliged him to maintain six lights, but two only were insufficiently maintained. They resolved that the six lights should be maintained. The Attorney General reported on the case that his Lordship must maintain the same. The Com^rs of Revenue were instructed to examine into the matter and report. The Com^rs had reported and sent estimates for erecting and repairing the lighthouses necessary That at Dublin was estimated at 1,200*l.* The two lighthouses cost Lord Abercorn near 200*l.* per ann., and his clear profit did not exceed 300*l.* per ann. His (the Lord Lieut.'s) opinion was, that the whole matter had better be placed in the hands of the Com^rs of Revenue. The repairs ought to be immediately proceeded with. He would give directions for the one in Dublin. Asks that the matter may be laid before her Majesty, and for orders to be given. Dated 1 Aug. 1704.

The following are abstracts of the reports and other documents referred to:—

Report of the Com^rs of Revenue, Ireland, to the Lords Justices there. In accordance with their Excellencies' order of 1 April last, and with a former order of reference relating to lighthouses, directing them to inform themselves, in the best manner they could, from the captains of men-of-war, expe[rienced] masters of ships, and such others as they thought most capable to advise them therein, upon what places lighthouses might most conveniently be erected for the benefit of trade, the security of her Majesty's ships, and the lives and goods of her subjects and allies, they had used the best means they could to be rightly informed therein, and having formerly reported their opinion on the lighthouse already erected on the Hill of Hoath, they now, in relation to the second lighthouse mentioned in the former reference, acquaint their Excellencies that they were informed the most proper situation to build it on was Cor Castle, but even there it would not be effectual, unless one or more lights were placed in the harbour of Dublin, in such manner as was proposed by the Surveyor General of Works, &c.

As for the lighthouses in the out ports which were mentioned in their Excellencies' reference, they had transmitted certain reports, draughts, and estimates for erecting such lighthouses as were necessary in the ports of Kinsale, Waterford, and the Isle of Magee. Dated 10 June 1704.

From the reports and other papers enclosed (the maps and plans are wanting) may be learnt, amongst much other information, that at the lighthouse on the Hill of Hoath, the hearth on which the fire was made was about 20 inches diameter, declining inwards towards the centre, where there was a grate of about 6 inches square for the ashes to drop through; and that there was a pair of 1704. the smaller sort of smith's bellows, the nose of which was at least 5 feet from the fireplace, that the fireplace was not rightly made, and the bellows of little or no service. The surveyor proposed that a strong cylinder should be made of iron bars, of 2 feet diameter and 2 feet high, set upon a brick cylinder hollowed within, of near the same breadth in the clear, and about 4 feet high; by that means the bottom grate would be large enough (being 2 feet diameter) to let all the ashes through, that so the fire might burn the clearer, and the upright bars, without hindrance to the light, would enclose a large quantity of coals and make the fire so much the greater, and less subject to be extinguished by rains, or hid from the sea by its smoke in westerly winds, and a larger bellows should be provided and placed nearer the fire. He proposed to place lighthouses, one at Cor Castle between the Lord Hoath's house and the Warren house, one at the upper end of Polebegg, and one at the most northern part of Ringsend; and he explains his reasons for so doing. The lights to be kept in the lighthouse at Pool-beg should be large lamps; for this house standing in the sea, the waves beating violently against the underwork might extinguish a coal fire, and the light of the lamps (36 in number) would be more steady and constant, and cast a much greater light, and require much less attendance than any coal fire, and it was presumed would not be more expensive. The estimate for the same was 1,221*l.* 13*s.*

Kinsale.—As to the expense of building lighthouse and maintaining lights at the Old Head of Kinsale and Barry Oge's castle, Capt[n] Corneile the engineer, M[r] Edw. Bridges, architect, the officers of her Majesty's yard, &c. had been consulted. They believed that the very same places where the former houses were erected, were the most useful and commodious to be built on again, in regard that any ship or vessel that kept "both them lights open" might on the darkest night come with great safety into the harbour of Kinsale. The lighthouse which stood at Barry Oge's castle was entirely demolished, and that at the Old Head of Kinsale was so defective that it would want considerable repairs. [There is a diagram with the estimate.]

Waterford.—The lighthouse at the Tower Hook of this harbour was 140 steps to the top, and above that a large oval lanthorn, glazed, very much in want of repair, and to make the light serviceable an alteration should be made in the light or lanthorn wherein the light was kept. The lighthouse stood in the most convenient part of the harbour's mouth, and was formerly kept by Henry Loftus, Esq., who employed a person who was a smith, and allowed him only 12 barrels of coals yearly to keep up the light, which was no manner of use, &c. It was the opinion of the most knowing men of those parts that the light being once put into sufficient repair could not be kept with less than 200 great barrels of coals every year, at a cost of 30*l.*, and that 40*l.* per ann. should be given to a careful person to look after it, with two servants to blow up the fires.

1704. VOL. XCI.

Isle Magee.—For the trade to the Lough of Carrickfergus the opinion was there should be a lighthouse on one of the Copeland Isles, commonly called Crosse Isle, and that a lighthouse on any part of Isle Magee would be no way comparable thereto. A lighthouse would be most useful on the South Rock, but was scarce practicable, or would be very chargeable. If there must be one on the Isle Magee, the place where the last lighthouse stood was the most proper. The light on the Isle Magee had been abandoned nearly 36 years. In the estimate it states the person would oblige himself to keep the light in it w^th^ candles of 4 in the pound, 5 at a time, or to burn 10 at a time of 8 in the pound, for 15*l.* per ann.

A petition of James, Earl of Abercorn, in behalf of himself and Elizabeth, Countess of Abercorn, his wife, and their eight children, to the Queen. King Charles II., by patent dated 13th November in the 17th year of his reign, caused certain lighthouses to be built in Ireland by Robert, afterwards Sir Robert Reading, Bart., and lights to be maintained there. On surrender of this patent he granted a second patent (16 July, 19th year) to Richard, Earl of Arran, in trust for the said Robert Reading, and Jane, Countess Dowager of Mountrath, his wife, to hold six lighthouses and towers lately built by Sir Robert, and to receive for their support, from all ships and vessels trading to or from any of the harbours or ports of Ireland, 1*d.* per ton outwards, and from all ships of strangers 2*d.* per ton both inwards and outwards, and from fisher boats 10*s.* yearly for 61 years. Upon complaint to the English House of Commons that this was grievous to trade, the ships of subjects were exempted from payment, but the lighthouses were continued. Sir Rob^t^ Reading and his wife had expended in building the lighthouses 2,600*l.*, and considering the loss they would sustain (instead of the benefit intended by the King to the Countess and family for their services at the Restoration), the King granted to Sir Robert 500*l.* per ann. from the Exchequer in Ireland, during the rest of the term of 61 years, and the duty on foreign ships.

The six lighthouses might have been kept up with good profit out of the tonnage of all ships, the benefit being upwards of 1,600*l.* a year; but they could not possibly be supported out of the 500*l.* and the tonnage on foreign ships, and so the governors of Ireland were satisfied with two lighthouses only in the kingdom. The petitioner married Elizabeth, the daughter of the said Sir Robert and the Countess, and this 500*l.* per ann. was involved in the marriage settlement and for portioning the children.

In the last sessions the House of Commons in Ireland voted it necessary that lights should be maintained in the above lighthouses, and the petitioner was unable to comply with the vote by reason of the charge; praying for an acceptance of the surrender of the patent and the grant of an equivalent.

The report is minuted:—"A w^t^ to be prepared for authorizing the Com^rs^ of y^e^ revenue to take care of repairing & keeping up of light h^os^ upon my Lord Abercorne's surrend^r^ of his title thereunder." 1¼ pages and 3 halves.

Aug. 10. 85. It was a great hardship to have half his bill (for money disbursed) postponed. Want of speedy payment of his bills brought him under straights, &c. The French king sent his agent yearly 3,000 crowns, without deduction, and 2,000 more for extras. When the consul's reputation sunk, that of the peace must follow. He besought his Lordship to [? Aug.] 113. Certifying that the petitioner held the same by assignment from Fownes and Petty, to whom it was granted 14 March, 11 Will. III. A part of Newton Lodge had always been enclosed with a hedge, and kept separate from the park, for the use of the chief ranger and keeper of the walk called Newton Walk, which had then been enclosed with a stone wall at the charge of the Ranger, and there was some allowance for keeping more cows. It would be well for the safety of the petitioner to have this ground granted to him. A surrender of the former patent should be obtained, and a new grant made to the petitioner of the "office & offices, lodge, walk, & fee of 50*l.* per ann., with the piece of ground mentioned," &c. Undated, but ? Aug. 1704.

Sept. 6. 116. Letter of the Prize Com^rs^ to M^r^ Lowndes, as to payment for the brass and iron guns and the stores in the custody of the Board of Ordnance. The Navy Board had not paid for the prize men of war taken at Vigo. Several buyers of the Vigo booty had not paid for the same, and were under prosecution, and Sir William Hodges had a claim for goods in one of the galleons, depending before the Lords of Appeals. Dated 6 Sept. 1704. 1 page.

Sept. 6. 117. Report of Sir Chr. Wren, Mess^rs^ W^m^ Lowndes, William Petyt, and John Anstis, to the Lord High Treasurer. They had viewed Cæsar's Chapel within the Tower of London, which was a large room at the top of the White Tower. They found there multitudes of records of several reigns lying confusedly, in danger of utterly perishing, unless speedy care were taken for their preservation. Drawers, shelves, and presses should be immediately provided to receive them, as they should be cleaned from the dust.

1704. VOL. XCI.

After diligent perusal of such as were written on one side and of value (and not writs of course at the common law), they should be fixed into books, in the same manner as the ancient deeds were in the Cottonian Library, with paste prepared with colliquintida to secure it against worms, by which means the small pieces of parchment would be much better preserved than by putting into bundles. This method could not be expensive, since paper fit for the purpose might be had at cheap rates. They conceived it would be a labour of too great difficulty to range those instruments according to the exact series of time, or their respective subjects. The records of each king's reign should be glued on indiscriminately as they were cleansed, and when a book was finished and bound an index should be carefully made thereto of the subject matters, under proper heads, according to succession of time, referring to the numbers of the original instruments, and not in the dry form wherein the calendars in the Office of Records (which were kept in another part of the Tower) were imperfectly composed, as they contained little more than the names of persons and places, being prepared only for the service of the Court of Wards, to discover tenures and descents. Such bare tables of names could not be of that use to the public as repertories of things would prove, containing abstracts of records digested according to their various natures under distinct and methodical titles. In this manner the public service seemed to require that like calendars should be made, as well as to the 429 Foreign Rolls (whereof there were no abstracts at all in the office) as to those which should be reduced to order.

The office consisted of three rooms, in one whereof the records were "reposited." On one side the wall was damp, and the wainscot should be removed at a further distance from it, and drawers might be made, &c.

Presses, drawers, and shelves might be placed in the two other rooms for 150*l.*

Minuted:—"Done."

There was a building of boards contiguous to the room, which was lately on fire and with difficulty extinguished, whereby the whole office was in danger of being destroyed. The building ought to be taken down for the security of the records and the Tower.

Minuted:—"Done."

The sorting these records and compiling calendars would be the fruit of great pains and industry, and take a long time. It was not possible to get a considerable number of clerks conversant in the old French language, the characters and knowledge of those ages; nor was the office convenient for many clerks. They conceived that three would suffice, besides Mr. George Holmes, who had been 14 years in the office, and was qualified to be chief clerk at 100*l.* yearly. The three other clerks might have 150*l.* annually amongst them, to be employed under the directions of the Keeper of the Records, to report yearly to the Treasury. Dated 6 Sept. 1704.

Minuted:—"Approved." 3 pages.

At the Swainmote Court held in the New Forest, one Furzer, an under officer of the surveyor, was tried and found guilty of cutting and selling the Queen's wood and timber, contrary to the laws of the forest and of the late Act made for the preservation of the wood and timber there. Oct. 2. 136. Report of the Attorney General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the Lord Bophin, who was restored to his estate in Ireland forfeited by the Act of the Irish forfeitures, charged with the payment of 25,000*l*. to the crown, at the times mentioned in the Acts set forth in the petition; in default of payment whereof, the estate was to be vested in the crown for the purposes therein mentioned. The two last of these payments not having been fully made, the petitioner prayed her Majesty that he might have further time for the payment of the remainder; and that Lieut^{t} Gen^{l} Stewart, and the Lady Grandison his wife, might not be relieved by her Majesty for the debt claimed by them out of the said estate, and allowed to them on their claim before the trustees for the Irish forfeitures; but might be left to their remedies by law or equity. The Attorney Gen^{l} certifies as to Margaret, Viscountess Purbeck's transactions with this estate, as well as the transactions of William, late Earl of Clanrickard (father of the L^{d} Bophin), and of Richard, late Earl of Clanrickard, &c. He was of opinion that as the two last payments had not been fully made, the estate restored was vested in her Majesty for the use of the public, but not as an absolute estate. He also advises other things about the same. Dated 2 Oct. 1704.

The following minute is on the back of the last paper:—"Read the 16 Oct. 1704. The debt to be ascertained in Ireld as proposed by M^{r} Attorney."

II. They go into great detail as to the affairs of the petitioner in connection with these lighthouses. The chief point was that if six lighthouses had to be built and maintained, the means set aside were insufficient to leave a profit to the petitioner. They say:—"Upon this whole case its manifest that y^e^ original designe of the ires patents was the doing of a publick work, with advantage & profitt to Sir Robert Reading, and that one branch of the profitt being taken away, the 500^li^ p ann. was substituted in its place, for the same end which was intended to be provided for," &c.

If the Queen applied the duty or tonnage on foreign ships, and the 500*l.* per ann. to the maintenance of the lights, according to the resolutions in parliament, the petitioner would lose 1,000*l.*, which by his settlement was secured to him out of the 500*l.* per ann. and the interest, and would be deficient about 2,000*l.* Dated 2 Dec. 1704.

exhibitioner might amount to near 31*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, but he only took for his own fees 2*s.* 10*d.* for a debenture, and had been so far from defrauding the poor scholars, that he had often undergone some trouble and expense in procuring their exhibitions. Dated 20 March 1704.

The petition, which states "that heretofore a monck of Glassenby gave an estate to Hart Hall, which afterwards was taken from the said hall and vested in the crown, and in lieu thereof, five exhibitions each of 3*li.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per ann. were setled upon the said society by the crowne, to be paid out of the Exchequer, to be disposed of to such young men students there, as the Principall himselfe for that time being should think most deserveing.

"That the same hath been for many years paid by Parsons, Esq., one of the auditors of the Exchequer, but detaines the 6*s.* 8*d.* out of every exhibition, and refuseth to pay the exhibitions which were due last Michas, whereby the poor schollars are in great want of their small subsistance.

"And your petitioner further sheweth that when any young man have an exhibition given him, his name is sent up to the said auditor, who then seizes on all the first year's profitts of the said poor schollars place of 3 6 8, so that the young man is defrauded of a whole year's due, which is a great hardshipp and unjustly imposed by the said auditor."

In the last sessions the House of Commons employed Capt^n^ Francis Nevill in a survey for making a canal from the "Loghneagh to Newry, in the north of Ireland, which was proposed as a public advantage. He performed his part, but the charge was computed at near 20,000*l.*, and the House was not in a condition to proceed in it. The House made an address that the surveyor should receive 200*l.* for his trouble. A fresh application had been made by several gentlemen of the House of Commons, but no extraordinary charge could be paid without her Majesty's particular order, so he desired her Majesty's letter if she were inclined thereto. Dated Dublin 20 Mar. 1704–5.

The second minute is:—"4 Apr. 1705. A warr^t^ to be prepared." 1 page.

Mar. 20. 102. Letter of the same to the same. In the last sessions Parliament had resumed the consideration of the services of D^r^ George Walker, late Governor of Londonderry. In the preceding Parliament they had voted 2,000^li^ for the support of his family, as they found the supplies would be deficient. They desired that the son of M^r^ Walker should be provided for until the kingdom should be in a condition to make good the 2,000*l.* The present M^r^ Walker was never bred to any military employment, so as he could not provide for him, and several gentlemen of the House of Commons had applied on his behalf, that he might receive some mark of her Majesty's favour, he proposed the same as in a similar debt to Mr Ricksy, the grant of a pension of 150*l.* per ann., or such sum as her Majesty thought fit. March 23. 113. An unfinished letter [?] to the Lord High Treasurer of England, giving some account of the proceedings of the Irish Parliament, just then adjourned. It states there were some expressions as to tithes upon flax lands mentioned in the linen bill, which gave great offence to the House, "as if they had the care of the civil rights of the clergy." The address was a very full demonstration of the entire confidence the House had in his grace's administration. All people agreed that there never was a session carried on with less heat as to the public, or more good manners to one another. Dated Dublin 23 Mar. 1704–5. 2¼ pages.

March 25. 118. Letter signed Peter Skinner to M^r^ Lowndes. By some clandestine means it had been insinuated that he was not the real secretary to the Prince of Hesse, but an imposter, or at best but a messenger from his Highness. The bearer would produce undeniable testimonies in relation thereto. Asks for the royal bounty for his services and expenses, which had been very considerable. His return to the Prince, his master, was only retarded by that. His Highness told him (Skinner) at his departure from Gibraltar that in addition to the bounty, the publishing the plan of the place which he brought over, would be worth something considerable, but he was deprived of this, the same being already disposed of, and made public by another hand. Dated 25 March 1705.

A great mistake had been made in sending, without the papers, the addresses from the House of Commons for a pension for Governor Walker's son, of Londonderry, and for 200*l.* for Captain Nevill, who had been employed in admeasuring a river in the north to make it navigable. It has this P.S.:—"Pray let me desire you to further the Primate's request about getting ye 500^{li} in order for buying D^{r} Stillingfleet's library, unless you are afraid we should grow too learned." VOL. XCIV. 1705. APRIL TO JUNE.

April 2. 1. Representation of the Com^{rs} of Chelsea Hospital to the Lord High Treasurer. They had examined several invalids lately arrived from Holland, and admitted those duly qualified to the royal bounty in the hospital, &c. Her Majesty had appropriated 4,000*l.* for the maintenance of such of the sick as could not be admitted to the hospital, but limited the same to those wounded in the last German campaign. Several men had arrived from Holland who could not be paid in consequence. Some men had arrived from Holland who were not qualified for her Majesty's bounty in Chelsea Hospital, and his grace the Duke of Marlborough directed some small allowance to be given them, with passes to carry them home. They recommended 10*s.* each to be given them (the usual bounty given to disbanded soldiers). Dated 2 April 1705.

April 2. 2. Copy of Order in Council held at S^{t} Jago de la Vega, 2 Apr. 1705, his Excellency Thomas Handasyd, Esq., being then Captain General and Governor-in-Chief. A flag of truce had been sent from Petit Guavas to desire an exchange of prisoners, and thereupon a letter of Captain Duesbury was read. The latter was taken whilst going in a flag of truce to S^{t} Domingo, carried into Petit Guavas and there detained contrary to the law of arms, his sloop sold, and himself and company carried prisoners to Old France. A deposition was also read, and as the result the clerk of the council was ordered to go with a letter from his Excellency to Major Peirs at Port Royal, and both were to go on board the "flag of truce." Major Peirs was to acquaint the gentlemen in the "flag of truce" of his Excellency's surprise at their sending a flag of truce for exchange of prisoners, since, in violation of the law of nations, they had 15 months ago intercepted a sloop commanded by Capt[n] Duesbury, going with a flag of truce and packets to the Spanish governor of S[t] Domingo, Carthagena, Porto Bello, and the Havanna, sold the sloop, and sent the men prisoners to France. Further, that his Excellency demanded those subjects of her Majesty now sent down in lieu of those taken, and that the gentleman now sent down should engage his word and honour that satisfaction should be made. His Excellency wondered to find her Majesty's subjects were so barbarously treated, and that they were sold as slaves. If full satisfaction were not made, his Excellency would be obliged to treat the French prisoners accordingly. He then allowed every captain and other gentleman half a crown a day, and every private 7½*d.* If the French captain could not concede the above, he must go with his prisoners on the following morning, and one of her Majesty's frigates would convoy him to the coast of S[t] Domingo.

Then follow private instructions for Major Peirs. If the "flag of truce" should go in the morning, the man-of-war was to stop him for further commands. Major Peirs to send an express to the governor, and an acc[t] of what French prisoners were at Port Royal and in the men-of-war. M[r] Henry Forty to go as interpreter, and Richard Allen to go to justify his deposition. 2¼ pages.

April 5. 8. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer, as well on the memorial of M^r^ William Shepard and two others, for a patent to coin 40 or 50 tons of copper halfpence or farthings in eight or ten years, as upon the petition of the provost and moneyers of the Mint for a licence to coin 30 tons of copper money a year, under the direction of the officers of the Mint, to relieve them under their great straits. In a previous report they had acquainted his Lordship that the coinage of copper money in the reign of King Charles II., King James II., and the beginning of the late reign had been carried on at the charge of the crown, under the direction of the principal officers of the Mint, which they thought the best method; they still recommend that method. Out of the profits her Majesty might relieve the moneyers, many of whom were starving. Dated Apr. 5, 1705.

[? About June 6.] 103. The case of John Hill, Esq., and Elinor his wife, the late widow and executrix of Col. Archibald Douglasse, offered to the consideration of the Right Honble the Ld High Treasurer. The late King James granted a lease for 51 years of the forest or chase of Arkingarthdale and New Forest, in the co. of York, with the lead mines, to Col. Douglass, which were found to be concealed lands; with proviso as to the recovery of them. Suits were prosecuted against Theodore Bathurst and John Bathurst (son of John Bathurst, physician to the late usurper Oliver Cromwell), then in possession of the premises, &c., but Theodore Bathurst getting to be a member of parliament insisted on his privilege, and no further proceedings were had. Col. Douglass died. The petitioner married the said Ellinor and took this patent as part of her fortune. He gives other particulars how he was thwarted. June 11. 108. Letter from Col. Thomas Handasyd, Governor of Jamaica, to the Lord High Treasurer. Admiral Whetstone's letter of credit should be complied with. The fleet of 12 merchant ships arrived under his convoy, with six men-of-war, on the 17th ult. They took a brigantine and sloop. The ships continued healthy. They sailed on the 6th inst. to cruise on the coast of Carthagena and "Porto Bell." The homeward bound fleet would sail by the end of July under convoy of four men-of-war. Captain Nathaniel Boys, who commanded H.M. ship Deal Castle, had been taken up on a criminal charge. The Admiral designed to try him but he made his escape, and they could not apprehend him. He (the Governor) believed he had got off to the enemy. He learnt by a spy that a French sloop was preparing at Petty Guavas to come with a flag of truce under pretence of exchange of prisoners, with a letter from the Governor there, and that the gentleman who was to come was lieut. governor of that place, a very cunning intriguing blade, named De Chouppe Salampar. He (the Governor of Jamaica) ordered two men-of-war in the harbour to sail with all expedition in search of such flag of truce, to bring her in, &c., and keep her without the quays. Upon notice of her arrival he ordered the captain of Port Royal Fort to board her and know her business. The commander's answer was that he had brought 35 English prisoners to exchange for French, most of whom were men taken at the Bay of Andoras with "turtlers" and others. He sends the minutes of Council relating to the flag of truce. He could not receive the French governor's letter, nor keep any correspondence with him, since the Queen and the French King were at war. He could not exchange prisoners without orders. If the sloop's company wanted refreshments they should be supplied. He exchanged the 35 prisoners and ordered a man-of-war to convoy the ship to S[t] Domingo. The Act for quartering the soldiers expired 1 Aug., and he was obliged to call an assembly. He was very apprehensive of their stubborn cross tempers, but he should use all his endeavours to make them sensible of the Queen's care for them. The late Chief Justice, Col. Beckford, had retired, and he had appointed Lieut.-Col. John Walters, a very even-tempered man, in his place, who had been assistant judge for five years. There was a report that the French expected forces from Old France, with a fleet of men-of-war, to attack Jamaica. He took it to be nothing but a French gasconade to keep the Spaniard in hopes, but if otherwise, he hoped they should show themselves faithful servants of the Queen. Dated Jamaica, June 11, 1705.

June 12. 110. Report of the Attorney and Solicitor General to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of the Com^{rs} of the Royal Hospital for seamen at Greenwich, praying her Majesty's grant to that hospital of 6,472*l.* 1*s.*, being the effects of Kidd, a notorious pirate, condemned and executed for piracy. Several persons had appeared and pretended an interest in those goods, but could not make out their right thereto and were dismissed. On 5 May 1701 a claim was made to them by one Coga Baba and other Armenian merchants, who pretended they had been robbed of the goods by Kidd. The Court [of Admiralty] on 20 July 1701 decreed several commissions for the examination of witnesses in the East Indies, and pending the suit ordered the goods to be appraised and sold, and the money to be brought into court, and the court decreed the amount to be paid to Prince George of Denmark, Lord High Admiral, and it was afterwards paid into the Exchequer. Any merchant might make out a claim, and the law did not limit the owner of the goods piratically taken to any certain time, to prove his property in the goods, so that anyone substantiating his claim by law at any time hereafter, might become entitled to the amount in question, but it seemed very unlikely that any claim should be set up. Dated 12 June 1705.

The petition referred to, and a paper entitled "State of the proceedings against the goods seiz^{d} upon Capt. Kidd the pirate, in the High Court of Admiralty of England."

There are also duplicates of the first two documents. 8 pages.

June 15. 117. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of W^m Palmes, Esq^re, for (1.) a lease of the manors of Cookham and Bray, &c.; (2.) for a messuage called Morehall, and 260 acres of land in Upwell in the county of Norfolk; and (3.) for the late dissolved monastery of Newnam, alias Newinham, and lands belonging, in the co. of Bedford, late the estate of Thomas White, alias Whitebread, the Jesuit attainted of high treason.

As to the 1^st the rents were answered for to Michaelmas 1697. The trustees for the sale of fee-farm rents conveyed them to Humphrey Hetherington, Esq. The benefit of the grant was for the Lord Sommers. The petitioner was anxious that his grant might be confined to the stewardship, and such royalties and perquisites as remained in the crown, notwithstanding the grant to 1705. VOL. XCIV.

Hetherington. The value was altogether casual. By the Court Rolls of 1699 and 1700 these profits came to 796*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*, but he found very little but what was set upon poor people, for encroachments and cottages upon the wastes of the manor, and the auditor says they are looked upon as illeviable. The profits by the parliamentary survey were estimated at about 1,500*l.* per ann. If granted, the fishing of Tadpool, &c., ought to be excepted. It was granted to Richard Aldworth, Esq., and lately petitioned for by John Bath, gent., on behalf of Anthony Meeke, Esq., &c. If the grantee had power, with the free consent and agreement of the commoners, to compound with the incroachers and cottagers (which he took to be the most valuable part of the premises), he ought to reserve at least one third of the value on such composition, to be paid in rent to her Majesty, &c.

[Minuted:—My lord cannot advise granting any part of Cookham or Bray.]

(2.) The tenement called Morehall and lands are parcel of the Londoners Fenn, and having escheated to the crown for defect of heirs of Sir W^m^ Tresane, Bart., were granted in 1668 to John Sharpe and others for 31 years; which term was assigned to Francis Bell, Esq. His son, Beaupere Bell, petitioned about 1699 to renew the lease, &c. He was informed the acreage was much greater than represented. The last grants passed without any particular rated by the surveyor. Two other petitions for these premises had been referred to him. If his lordship would order a particular to be rated, he would have the premises surveyed and an estimate made.

[Minuted:—The surv^r^ to make a new survey of the premisses and to describe the contents and make a valuac̃on thereof.]

(3.) The estate of Thomas White alias Whitebread. By inquisition of 32 Car. II., Sir Roger Martyn, Bart., was found seized in fee of the site of the late dissolved monastery of Newnham, alias Newenham, and of parcels of land of the annual value of 257*l.* 2*s.*; but direction was given for stay of process, and the rents remained in the hands of the tenants till the reign of King James, when they were paid to Lord Petre until the Revolution, when by inquisition in 1689 the premises were found to have been held by Lord Petre for the use of an English nunnery at Rouen (Roven) in Normandy.

He asks for consideration of the great disbursements he had made in fifteen years service for the crown, in higher affairs than ever any consul had the command of, in the most difficult times, to the most politic governments. Desires favour in passing his accounts. His zeal for the public interest (with no benefit for his consulate sufficient to pay post letters to and fro) might merit his lordship's

[About July 25.] 26. Two petitions of Mary Sayer, widow and relict of John Sayer, Esq., deceased, to the Lord High Treasurer: (1.) saying she held under lease the demesne of the manor of Barkhamsted (co. Hertf.), parcel of the Duchy of Cornwall, of which there were 21 years to come. Her husband rebuilt the mansion house, which was burnt down not long before it was purchased of the Earl of Portland; prays an extension to 31 years.

Minuted:—"25th July 1705. Ref. to Mr Surveyor."

(2.) Referring to the last petition. The Surveyor Genl had reported that the additional term might be valued at 500*l.* fine; petitioner's husband had laid out 2,000*l.* on rebuilding the mansion, and petitioner had laid out a considerable sum more on the house, and upwards of 300*l.* in new building two water grist mills; besides charges at law in defending her Majesty's title; asking an abatement of the fine.

July 28. 28. Report of the late Comrs for sick and wounded seamen to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the president, treasurer, and governors of St Thomas' Hospital. They (the Comrs) had always taken it for granted that the sending of sick and wounded seamen to St Thomas' and St Bartholomew's hospitals was only to ease the government of charge, as the words signified in their (the Comrs) instructions; nor did they ever hear of such allowances demanded, much less ever given, to either of the hospitals, except the physicians and chirurgeons for their extraordinary pains in former wars. By the petitioner's calculation of the number of men and days, each man must have been about three months in their house, to make such a vast number of days as 330,843, for which they reckoned 4*d.* a day for diet, amounting to 5,514*l.* 1*s.*; and for physicians, chirurgeons, apothecaries, medicines, &c., at 8*d.* a day, 11,028*l.* 2*s.*, which last sum was but 9,646*l.* 2*s.* more than the 1,382*l.* allowed by them (the Comrs) to the physicians, &c., for their extraordinary pains, of which they (the Comrs) were witnesses. This last sum was the same as allowed the chirurgeons at other ports, viz., 6*s.* 8*d.* a head. As soon as they had heard of the difference between the governors of St Thomas and their physicians and chirurgeons, they stopped the last warrant until they should be agreed. They had laid their accounts both of St Bartholomew's and St Thomas's hospitals before the Comrs for accounts, together with their proceedings in this affair. Dated 28 July 1705.

Aug. 1. 36. Report of Mr Wm Borrett to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petitions of Elizabeth Muratt, alias Cambolive (one to her Majesty and the other to his Lordship), on the petition of Mark Bartholomew presented to her Majesty, on the memorial of Peter Wentworth, Esq., presented to his Lp, and on other papers. He found that the petitioner Muratt was the only sister of Stephen Cambolive, deceased, who died intestate, possessed of several Exchequer orders upon annuities, &c., worth about 600*l.* Anthony Bieisse, a creditor, obtained letters of administration and received 105*l.* Since the arrival of the said Elizabeth that administration had been repealed, and administration had been decreed to her as sister of the deceased. Bartholomew opposed and litigated the same with the view of getting it granted to himself. The report confirms the claim of the petitioner Elizabeth Murat to this property of her brother, against the other claimants, and advises that she should be set at liberty, being then in prison. She was born of Protestant parents, and her profession of the Roman Catholic religion was the effect of force, and since her coming from France she had acknowledged her fault and made a new profession of the Protestant religion; and if that were not so, and she were still a papist, yet being now a subject, she would be entitled to her brother's personal estate, which happened to consist of such interests as by the Acts of Parliament aliens as well as natives were encouraged and allowed to purchase. Dated 1 Aug. 1705.
The petitions mentioned, and several other documents, one of which is a certificate of the ministers, elders, and members of several French Protestant churches in London.

The case of Lord Paston's regiment was the case of most of the regiments that had done duty at Portsmouth, where great mortality frequently happened, and in apprehension thereof, many of the soldiers deserted. So that the charge of supplying such deaths and desertions, together with the amercements of 2*d.* a day until new men were mustered, lay very heavy on the officers, and much diminished their personal pay. Dated Aug. 14, 1705.

There are three minutes on the back. The last is on 21 Apr. 1706, putting off the consideration of the report. 1 page and 4 lines.

Letter from the Comrs for Prizes, desiring that a letter received from the Agent for Prizes at Newfoundland might be laid before the Lord High Treasurer, for if the Agent for Prizes were debarred from the liberty to trade, they could not procure a person of reputation to go there at the present allowance to foreign agents. Dated 14 Aug. 1705.

Aug. 14. 48. Report of the Agents for Taxes to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Sir Robert Harrison, Knt, Recr General for the county of Oxford of aids and other taxes; advising the allowance to him of various charges for conveying the money by barge, and for paying it into the Exchequer. Dated 14 Aug. 1705.

Aug. 15. 49. Letter of Jo. Methuen to Mr Lowndes. The necessity of the service forced him to act without orders in matters of the greatest importance, especially in relation to money. The nature of many of the articles in his account did not admit of vouchers. For the most considerable sums he had vouchers which would satisfy the Lord High Treasurer, but not regular enough for the Exchequer. For expedition in putting the place in some condition, and with less expense than it could be done from England, Lord Galway had engaged him to pay for all materials there, and to send money in specie for the works to Gibraltar. Dated Lisbon, Aug. 26, N.S., 1705, i.e. 15 Aug. 1¼ pages, quarto.

Aug. 17. 51. Petition from John Newman to the Ld High Treasurer, for a suitable reward for his services in connection with Excise affairs.

The Excise Office made it a mere banter. The officers knew the Com^rs minds. They reported that the conference at M^r Lowndes' in August last, the examination before the Com^rs in November last, and the hearing before his Lordship in June last, would blow over, and they should weather these points. Some of them said they would venture to cut their throats whenever the petitioner was concerned in the Excise. Dated 17 Aug. 1705.

Minuted:—"27 Aug^st 1705. To Comm^rs Excise to consider what he may deserve for the discovery he pretends to, and to report." 1 page.

Aug. 20. 53. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, as to certain flax seized on board a French prize taken by the Zealanders. They saw no reason why the proprietor of the goods should not by licence of the Court of Exchequer compound for the same. Dated 20 Aug. 1705.

Four other documents connected therewith. By the minute his Lordship agrees to the composition. 7 pages.

Aug. 20. 54. The Earl of Ranelagh's state of the reversionary annuities which remained in his hands, and of the debentures returned to him. Dated 20 Aug. 1705.

The E. of Ranelagh to satisfy the money due to the dead penc̃oners of Chelsea Hospitall (computed by him to amount to about 1,400^li), out of the remaines in his hands, as by this rep^t; but first write to his Lord^p for an acco^t of the applicac̃on of abo^t 22,000^li in deb^rs, given by par^lt for discharging arr^s to the penc̃oners of the said hosp^l, and also of the persons' names & sums to whom the said sum of about 1,400^li is intended to be now paid."

Aug. 21. 55. Report of the Com^rs of Prizes to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the settling an agent at Newfoundland at a certain allowance, and not to be permitted to trade; advising that he should have 100*l.* per ann. and three per cent. instead of five (the former allowance), upon the whole produce to be allowed by the captors. Oct. 30. 120. Report of the Attorney General to the L^d High Treasurer on the report of the Surveyor General made on the petition of M^r Henry Wise to her Majesty, for her royal license to build on a waste piece of ground lying near Hampton Court, lately granted to the petitioner and his heirs, by her Majesty's steward of the honor and manor of Hampton Court, by copy of court roll. The question submitted was whether such a grant was legal with respect to the Act of the Civil List. He (the Attorney Gen^l) certifies that by that Act her Majesty was not restrained to grant any copyholds by copy of court roll, in fee, or for other estate. However, he was not satisfied that the grant made by the steward by copy of court roll of the wastes of the manor was available to the grantee, for nothing could be granted now by copy of court roll but what was immemorially so granted and grantable, and waste land which was never before so granted could not now be made copyhold, by which M^r Wise's title would be defeasable, unless he could show the waste grounds had been usually devised by copy, which if he should be able to do, he would want a warrant to the steward for making the grant, a steward not having power by virtue of his office to make such voluntary grants. However, since the petitioner was content to build on that title, if her Majesty would permit him, he (the Attorney Gen^l) saw no objection to her Majesty giving him a warrant for that purpose, that warrant giving him no right to the land. Signed "Edward Northey." Dated 30 Oct. 1705.

Minuted:—"4 X^br. 1705. My Lord is satisfyed y^t y^e copy of court roll doth not give him a good title, but he hath built his house upon a mistaken lisence. His Lord^p will not oblige him to pull it downe again, but will not indulge any body else to build for the future."

The surveyor's report and the petition. This last report contains this clause, "I have not found this making of new copyholds out of the wasts any where justifyed by the laws of copyholders, but it seems most of the ground where the houses & cottages stand by the way side, near the premises, have been thus granted by copy of court roll, and the homage in the name of the tenants which have a right in the said wasts, do give their consent and apportion the rent for their ease, & the benefit of the poor; and the steward doth admit thereupon in behalfe of the Queen." 5 pages.

In the provision by parliament many had not and could not share. If his L^p thought they ought to be relieved, the expense would be 2,500*l.*

1 & 2. The number of sick and wounded admitted during the late and present war.

3. The allowance for diet.

4. The insufficiency of the revenue of the hospital.

5. The buildings ruinous and to be rebuilt.

The report recommends the bestowment of a bounty to the foundation, at the end of the war, as better than an establishment, which would be a precedent for bringing a great expense to the crown. Dated 6 Nov. 1705.

The petition and an opinion of the Attorney General.

Minuted:—"Read 8^th^ Nov^r^ 1705. My Lord agrees w^th^ the Com^rs^ that the hospitall have a gratuity at the end of the warr."

In the Attorney General's opinion he says, "There is not any power reserved to the crown of putting any poor persons into y^t^ hospitall; therefore I dare not say it is a matter of right for the crown to direct who shall be received into the hospitall." 5 pages.

The rates proposed by them were 22^s^ per musket, which would come to 11,000*l.* The exchange at a medium of 8^li^ per cent. would come to 880*l.*, &c. He thought the proposal much for the safety of the kingdom. Dated Whitehall, 7 Nov. 1705.

Nov. 7. 12. Copy of Lord Chief Baron Ward's report to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of M^r^ Leonard Thompson, the Lord Treasurer's remembrancer in the Exchequer, praying leave to resign his place to M^r^ Robert Jones, whom he alleged to be capacitated for that place. His lordship's opinion was that he could not resign the office to any one otherwise than by the surrender of the letters patent, or other determination of the estates or interests therein mentioned, which, when done, such new grant of the office might be made as should be thought fit. Mr Jones was a son of the late Bishop of St Asaph, and was educated at Cambridge, but his Lordship did not find that he had applied himself to the study or practice of the law, or was acquainted with the business of that office, in and through which the charge and discharge of a great part of her Majesty's revenue daily passed. Dated 7 Nov. 1705.

Nov. 7. 13. Letter of the Duke of Ormonde to Mr Secretary Hedges on the petition of Mrs Talbot, widow of Captain Henry Talbot, who was a captain in Sir Matthew Brydges' regiment, served in Ireland and Flanders, and died on his return to Ireland. Nov. 8. 15. Report of the Duke of Ormonde to the Ld High Treasurer on the petition of John Nettervill, gent., son of the Honble Robert Nettervill, and grandson to Nicholas, Viscount Nettervill, setting forth that King Charles II., in consideration of the services and sufferings of his family, granted him 480*l.* per ann. out of the revenue of Ireland for life; and as yet he had received no part of it, and praying a pension on the establishment of Ireland, &c. The services and loyalty of his family might deserve consideration, but there was a great load on that establishment. Dated Whitehall, 8 Nov. 1705.

There are two or three minutes on the back, the last of which is:—"Prepare a S.M. for 200*l.* a year frō Michas last, payble ¼ yearly, in lieu of his pretencons, & in consideracon of his services & sufferings."

Nov. 13. 17. Report of the Attorney and Solicitor General to the Ld High Treasurer on the petition of John Henry Huguelan, who had been confined in France under a strong guard and "was compelled to draw bills of exchange there, and upon France, to a very great value, on his correspondents, for the use of that crown," and afterwards made his escape. They had also considered the petition of Anthony and James Saladine, bankers, natives of Geneva, who were also concerned in the same affairs. By inquisition it was found that Mr Hugueton was indebted to various enemies of her Majesty in France two millions of livres. The Saladines insist they are not alien enemies. To remove objections from the Saladines, Mr Hugueton only desired her Majesty's favour, for the moneys owed by him to the rest of the persons named in the inquisition. They, the Attorney and Solicitor General, had no objection to the grant as desired, and were of opinion it might be lawfully made; the moneys being "owing to her Matys enemys in France, & contracted for ye service of ye French King, in his wars against her Maty and her allys, and not contracted in a way of private trade."

Dated 13 Nov. 1705.

The petition of Anthony and James Andrew Saladin. Huguetan had bills and effects of the petitioners which were seized into the Queen's hands. They pray that the seizure might be taken off, being effects of neutrals, and not liable to be seized.

(2.) A reference of the same to Wm Borrett, Esq. (3.) Borrett's report. Giffard and the others did not take their trials, whereby their recognizances of 9,000*l.* were forfeited. He apprehended the prosecutor had agreed with them and had received a reward. It was "the usual course in the Court of Exchequer on equity arising from facts to compound recognizances." (4.) Another petition of Preston and the others. (5.) Reference to the Attorney General. (6.) His report. These persons were prosecuted as popish priests and for saying mass within this realm under the Act 11 Will. III., for the further preventing the growth of popery, whereby the prosecutor, on the conviction of every priest for saying mass, was to receive 100*l.* from the sheriff. The priests did not appear, but agreed with the prosecutor, and thereby the recognizances were forfeited. If they had appeared they could not have been convicted for want of evidence, the prosecutor being bought off. It might be reasonable to admit the bail to a composition. Dated Nov. 13, 1705. 6 pages.

Nov. 19. 28. Letter from the Earl of Peterborough addressed to "My Lord." The bargain was made by the ambassador Metheun with the masters in whose behalf he (the Earl) had drawn bills on his Lordship. The King of Spain desired, and absolute necessity required, that we should not be left unprovided with ammunition, having Barcelona, Tarragona, Girone, Lerida, and several other castles and fortresses to provide with powder. It was therefore the opinion of a council held before the King that half the powder designed for the Duke of Savoy should be taken ashore and kept for service in that country. The ships were detained there, first, because some letters from the Queen's ministers gave strong suspicions, others positive assurance, that the Duke of Savoy had made his terms, so that to send this ammunition to an enemy, which would have rendered our successes useless, was not advisable, and no proper determination in this matter could be taken till the fate of Barcelona was decided. When that was known, and that not a barrel of powder could be had in Catalonia, they divided the powder and lead with the Duke of Savoy, and sent the saltpetre entirely to Italy, the freight having to be paid by Mr Methuen's order, &c. Nov. 20. 31. Letter of the Comrs for Prizes [? to Mr Lowndes] as to an allowance to Mr Plater for a prize called the S Paul, of Rochelle, carried into Maryland. Mr Plater had not adjusted his accounts with their agent. A commission had been sent to enquire into his management. As to regulation of prizes in the West Indies, their advocates were of opinion that no Court of Admiralty had power to try and adjudge prizes. Even the Court of Admiralty here, as a Court of Admiralty, could not try prizes but by a special additional commission, and that had been the ancient practice. It would be inconvenient to erect prize courts in the West Indies. Dated 20 Nov. 1705.

The L^d Peterborough knowing they served her Majesty under the Com^rs for Victualling the Navy, and wanting money after his glorious success at Barcelona, had drawn on them for 20,000 dollars, supposing (though wrongly) that they might have cash of her Majesty's. They enclosed copies of letters on the subject from L^d Peterborough and M^r Hill, her Majesty's envoy at Turin, addressed to themselves. As they had advanced their moneys freely on this occasion, they did not question his Lordship would order payment of the bills. Trade was dull there and money scarce, and they could not draw the whole sum at once without raising the exchange to an extravagancy. They left the commission to his [Lps generosity, Dated Livorno, 11 Dec. 1705. [N.S. i.e. 30 Nov.]

The copies of the letters referred to. The Earl of Peterborough says, "The news of our success in Catalonia, I doubt not, are as agreable to every Englishman as they are surprising to the enemy, to take a capital whose garrison consisted of above 5,000 foot and 800 horse, when our army was but 7,000 foot and 400 dragoons, the enemy resisting to the last extremity; and at the same time Gironna taken by surprise, and Tarragona, soldiers and officers prisoners of war. This is a beginning which heaven has favoured almost with miracles, since we begun with taken Mangui [Montjuich] with sword in hand, which castle is much stronger than the place. They had five hundred men to defend it, and we but eight to attack it. I thought it of such importance that the Prince of Hesse and myself attacked with the grenadiers, where we had the misfortune to lose that gallant general. Since Lerida, Tortosa, all the strong castles, towns, and villages have submitted to King Charles the Third, except Rosas, just upon the frontiers of France," &c. 5 pages.

Sergison," in which he says that there is not one of his brethren who does not think Mr Dummer deserving of this and much more for his services in the navy; not one in his post ever did anything like him. The new docks at Portsmouth and Plymouth would be lasting monuments of his great skill as well as services to the kingdom. 6 pages or parts of pages.

Letter of Mr Wm Blathwayt to [Mr Lowndes?] He had received an account of payments and cravings made out of the gold and other treasure belonging to Captain John Quelch and Co., for defraying the charges in seizing and securing those pirates and their treasure. The charges were 1/3 too large, but as the prosecution of pirates was carried on with great difficulty in the plantations, and more especially in the chartered governments in New England and elsewhere (piracy being too much countenanced, or at least connived at in those parts), he conceived the service could not have been so well carried on by Col. Dudley without an extraordinary expense. Col. Dudley had been requested to send over the piratical goods or their value, and no doubt there would be a suitable return by the soonest opportunity. Dated 24 Dec. 1705.

A supplemental letter to the above, dated 31 Dec. 1705. Col. Dudley had fully complied with Her Majesty's commands, and had sent an account of the goods, &c., and an invoice of the gold (788 oz. 3 dwt.) delivered to the Commander and Lieutt of the ship Guernsey, being the balance of the account.

Minuted:—"Write to Mr Burchett to procure ordrs to the Capt. of ye Guernsey to send up the gold wthin mencond & to cause the same to be paid in to the Mint for her Mats use & to take the officer's rects for his discharge." 3 pages.

[1705.] 104. Memorial of Dr Woodroffe to the Ld High Treasurer. It was nearly five years since certain youths of the Greek communion were committed to the doctor to receive such a liberal education in the University as might qualify them as preachers, schoolmasters, or otherwise, in their own country. They were received into the royal protection, and some fund was to be found to maintain ten of them, but it had not been found, and their expenses and education to the value of 1,400*l.* (except 400*l.* of the royal bounty) had lain on the doctor, besides what was due for his pains. The doctor was indebted for salt duty to her Majesty about 600*l.*, being proprietor of one of the salt works in Cheshire. Process was stopped for a time, but more Greek youths were sent, and he had not been able to pay the debt. If process should now go out against him he and the good work must be utterly ruined. He offers to have some part of his estate sold, if no other way of supply could be speedily found; as, if he be discountenanced, the honour of the nation and religion must suffer; occasion being thereby given to the scornings and insultings of the enemies of our faith, who are so ready to snatch away the honour of so good a work from us. Undated, but compare a paper dated Nov. 23, 1703, Vol. LXXXVII. 142, when the youths had been three years under the charge of D^r^ Woodroffe. 1 page.

They found the Company was a body politic for smelting down lead ore with pit coal and sea coal for the preservation of timber. By Act 1 W. & M. they were bound to bring to the Mint all the silver extracted, and her Majesty and her predecessors had granted a mark of distinction to be stamped on the coin therefrom. In five months petitioners had brought eight bars of silver of 55 or 60l wt (pounds weight) each, and were bringing a new bar every three weeks. One of the objects of the presents was to break the measures of the French and Spanish consuls and friars, who had carried a great present, to engage Alcaid Aly and the Emperor in their cause, and to hinder the relief of Gibraltar, to redeem all the French and Spanish captives to the number of 1,500 and upwards, &c. The French consuls and friars were sent away the day after he (Jones) arrived, without obtaining the least of their pretentions, and with the answer that when they retook Gibraltar, he (? the Emperor) would treat with them. At the foot is a memorandum that it was sworn to on 5 Jan. 1705.

Copy of the report of the officers of works on the bill. 2 pages.

[Before Jan. 4.] 10. Copy of letter of Col. J. Dudley [to the L^{d} High Treasurer]. Acknowledged the receipt of her Majesty's commands as to the pirates' gold which he had lately seized in that province [Massachusetts bay]. Six of the pirates were immediately executed. The rest had her Majesty's pardon, and were, by her gracious commands, put into her service on board the Deptford, attending that province. Never intended to entitle himself to one penny of that treasure without her Majesty's grant, much less that she should bestow it on the province; the people there in no one thing having obeyed her Majesty since his arrival. Was informed that Mr. Carey, who was sent with no instruction but to deliver a packet at the Board of Trade, had petitioned her Majesty for a grant thereof to the province. When he had "improved" the sheriffs and officers in all the counties of that province, to seize the pirates and their effects, he appointed five Com^{rs} to receive, weigh, and seal every parcel of the gold and other treasure, and no penny of it was ever in his keeping. Had charged five per cent. for himself, being informed that in other plantations 10 per cent. had always been taken, but had withdrawn that charge. Nothing would so well convince that people that he did his duty as the payment to him of part of the treasure in reward thereof. Nothing would prevail with the assembly to settle his salary. If he had not a seat of his own, he could not support "the figure" of the government; the assembly acknowledged his care. Hoped for his L^ps favour to obtain her Majesty's bounty, and that M^r John Chamberlayne of Westminster might attend his L^p in that affair. Prayed his Lordship's favour in his account for sending Capt^n Walton's company three years since to Jamaica. They were the first soldiers that ever went out of the province into her Majesty's immediate service. He had troubled Sir Joseph Tredenham with his letters in that matter. The people talked freely against this expedition, and boasted that he was disappointed in that payment. Was fearful it would discourage any such advance for the future, which was the only service of which that populous province was capable to render her Majesty. If he could obtain three or four of her Majesty's ships to go to Port Royal and Quebeck, it would put all the northern provinces as far as Virginia out of any danger of the French for ever. Prayed his Lordship that M^r Constantine Phipps, of the Middle Temple, might attend his Lordship in that affair, whom he had "betrusted" to receive that payment. Hoped the treasure would come safe. Had the hardest province of any of her Majesty's servants abroad, but if serviceable to her Majesty he was rewarded.

Jan. 4. 11. Report of the Com^rs of Excise to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the appointment of M^r Thomas Treasham in another department, his qualifications not being such as to fit him for the accountantship of the distillery. Dated 4 Jan. 1705. 1 page.

[? About Jan. 4.] 14. Petition of "Jam. Caldevert" and five others to the L^d High Treasurer. They were captains or lieut^ts, and went under command of Mons. de Guiscard, Marquis de la Bourlie, for a descent into Languedoc in France, but were prevented by four French gallies. They were forced to swim for their lives, leaving all they had in the "saties" wherein they had embarked. Seeing the men engaged in the enterprise were taken by the enemy, they went into Switzerland and Wirtemberg; pray relief.

[About Jan. 6.] 17. Petition of John Rayner, Esq., to the Queen. By a Treasury order of 8 Dec. 1699, by command of the King, it was directed that the reversion of the manor and demesnes of Newark, and certain lands in the co. of Nottingham and Suffolk, should be conveyed to Richard Harris, gent., in trust for the petitioner for 1,150*l.*, and at a rent of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, payable to the crown for ever. By the intended grant the reversion was to be charged with maintaining two public bridges, one over the river Trent in the high road from London to York, and a building where the sessions of the peace was held. By reason of certain Acts of Parliament the grant could not be completed without another Act of Parliament. But the agreement was made before the said Acts, and for a valuable consideration; and there was a necessity to build the bridges anew at an expense of 1,500*l.* and upwards, and the petitioner was not obliged by any covenant to do it. If not done it would be a great damage to the subject by stopping the passage of the public road; praying consent to the introduction of an Act of Parliament.

Jan. 10. 21. Report of the Surveyor General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Nath. Reading, Esq., who alleged that he had discovered that many of the revenues were "out of lease," not granted away but unjustly detained, and to which he was willing at his own charge to make out her Majesty's title; and the better to do this, he prayed the power of keeping the courts belonging to the concealed manors, and for such part of the profits of the discovery as his Lordship should think fit.

The surveyor found these consisted of a very large collection of exceptions out of the grant to the city of London, and of leases formerly made of crown lands in divers counties. He advised the petitioner to fix upon a few particulars that he had most assurance of succeeding in, and he fixed upon, (1) several messuages in Wallnut-tree Lane, alias Carter Lane, in S^t Olaves, Southwark; (2) the manor of East Smithfield (Midd.); (3) the manor of Reddriff (Surrey), with Southwark, S^t Saviour's, and Bermondsey. The surveyor reports fully what he had found as to these matters, and gives his opinion that if his LP advised her Majesty to grant all these premises, with the stewardships, to the petitioner for 31 years, in order to his making out the Queen's title, then the old rent of 6*l.* per ann. for the Wallnut-tree tenements ought to be reserved, &c., and to account for the whole he should recover of the improvements within twelve months after such recovery, &c. Dated 10 Jan. 1705.

Also a letter of M^r Henry Shales, auditor, to the above surveyor on the same subject, and the petition. 13 pages.

Jan. 10. 22. Report of M^r Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer, respecting 1,000 oak and 100 beech trees required at Portsmouth by the Com^rs of the Navy out of the New Forest. The falling of so many at that time would be much to her Majesty's disadvantage, as they would afford a great quantity of lops, tops, &c., and the country had been lately glutted with windfalls. The underwoods had been directed to be sold to raise money for walling Hyde Park. Sir William Gifford, Com^r of the Navy at Portsmouth, by the surveyor's advice, had agreed to receive one half that number. Dated 10 Jan. 1705.

On the petition of D^r Woodroffe, who had for the last six years been at the whole charge of their maintenance (excepting 400*l.* of royal bounty), her Majesty had expressed her inclination that the Doctor should be relieved of a debt of 600*l.* and upwards owing by him to the Crown. Prays, in consideration of his charges (between 2,000*l.* and 3,000*l.*), and for the good work itself, that the process for the debt might be stopped till the grant should take effect.

There had been formerly a clock and bell in the New Palace Yard, Westminster, which was very necessary, not only to the Parliament, courts in Westminster Hall, officers in the Exchequer, and to all who had business there, but this structure being demolished, a good large sundial would be a great convenience, set up near the said place, and such a dial they understood was already delineated and prepared for that purpose, if his L^p would encourage so useful and necessary an instrument.

[About Feb. 1.] 49. Memorial of James Worsley and five other esquires in behalf of themselves and . . . . hundreds others, gentlemen and freeholders, bordering on the New Forest, to the Lord High Treasurer. Being seized of lands on the borders of the New Forest, in the county of Southampton, they claimed in right of the same, estovers out of the woods of the forest, which they and their ancestors had enjoyed time out of mind. Their claims had been allowed at all times by the Lords Justices in Eyre at their several courts. They conceived they had as undoubted a title to the same as any of her Majesty's subjects could have to any estovers they enjoyed; and as the destruction of the woods tended to the great damage of them and their heirs, they represent that the woods of the forest had been exceedingly diminished of late years by warrants under the privy seal, and they had in a great measure lost the benefit of their right to fuel wood. They could not but complain that warrants had lately issued for the fall of the decayed wood to raise money for the repair of the lodges, and to pay salaries to the officers of the forest, and other woods also several times assigned to be cut down for estovers, when there were very great quantities of the stubs and decayed wood lying in the forest, which were blown down by the great storm in 1703, more than sufficient for the purpose, and also for supplying the fuellers' demands for several years. A sale of underwood was at that time ordered for raising 4,300*l.* for building a wall to Hyde Park. If by these means the woods were so far destroyed that those who had a right to estovers were in danger of being utterly deprived of it, they hoped his L^p^ would order that no more be cut down on any account, other than on assignments of fuel wood to [those who] have a legal right. And as to the decayed wood which was blown down, that it might be assigned to such of the fr . . . as had a right to fuel and then wanted it; they paying for cutting the same.

Referred to the Surveyor General of Woods, Trent South, 1 Feb. 1705. 1 page, the right-hand side gnawed by vermin.

Feb. 1. 50. Letter of Henry Shales, auditor, to the L^d^ High Treasurer, laying before him a state of the account of Robert Lucey, Esq., late Receiver of the Temporalties of the Bishopric of S^t^ Davids, and certifying that the whole amount due to the crown was 2,038*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.* The auditor was a stranger to M^r^ Lucey's pretences for compensation out of the temporalties of the bishopric during the vacancy, otherwise than what was contained in his petition, case, and affidavits annexed. Dated 1 Feb. 1705.

Four documents annexed. 7 pages or parts of pages.

Feb. 1. 51. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland to the Duke of Ormond. They had considered the vast advantage that had lately arisen to that kingdom by the advancement of the linen manufacture in the north, which was of no manner of consequence seven years before, but by the endeavours of M^r^ Lewis Cromelin was brought to great perfection. Before he was engaged, what linen cloth was made in the kingdom was wrought in the north, where 1705–6. the inhabitants were most inclined to that manufacture; yet it could never have been advanced as it then was but by the endeavours of Mr Crommelin, or some such skilful undertaker, because the inhabitants in the north were entirely ignorant of the art of managing and working flax, spinning the yarn, and whitening the cloth, and were absolute strangers to the looms and other utensils necessary for that work; yet he had made them perfectly masters of the whole art and mystery, insomuch that from cloth of 12 and 15 pence a yard, which was generally the finest made in the country, he had brought them to make linen to that fineness to be worth 8*s.* and 9*s.* the English yard. As this was only done in the north, and the knowledge of this art and mystery was communicated to a people generally Scotch and of that extraction, they would most certainly engross that manufacture to themselves, and never suffer it to come out of that country. They (the Lords Justices) offer it to his Grace's consideration, whether it would not be of the greatest good and consequence to that kingdom if Mr Crommelin could be prevailed on to remove himself and family to the centre of the kingdom, and by settling a colony and erecting this manufacture, it would not soon equally diffuse itself into the other three parts of the kingdom, which was then generally inhabited by English and those of that extraction. Mr Crommelin was willing to remove upon fitting encouragement, and doubted not to bring this manufacture to greater perfection in the south than in the north. Kilkenny (near the centre of the three provinces) he said was a most proper place, as well for the goodness of the air as the water and soil. To settle at Kilkenny he demanded 2,500*l.* in hand, to remove himself, family, looms, and utensils, and to build a bleaching yard there, and an addition of four years to his patent, which had six years to come. As the revenue was not in condition to advance such a sum, he had offered to undertake it if the patent were enlarged to 12 years without any ready money. They hoped the proposal might be agreed to. They had no doubt it would be of so considerable advantage as to answer vastly more than the expense to her Majesty, by the addition of the years desired, besides the great benefit England would receive by it, in taking off many of the hands then employed in the woolen manufacture [in Ireland], which by that means would be so discouraged as to oblige that kingdom to import so much more of the woolen cloths. If his Grace approved, they had enclosed a draft for her Majesty's signature, that the work might be immediately set about. Dated Dublin Castle, 1 Feb. 1705.

The draft referred to is not now with it. 4 pages.

Feb. 2. 52. Reply of Mr T. Foley addressed to the Ld High Treasurer to the answer Mr Wilcox had given to his memorial as to the 10,000 cords of wood contracted for by his (Mr Foley's) father. Mrs Bovey had but one or two forges at most, but he was concerned within or adjacent to the Forest of Dean in seven furnaces, besides forges. He did not oppose Mrs Bovey's contracting in proportion to her works. It was plain Mr Wilcox, if he could help it, would not admit him to any of the overplus. He thought it no crime to apply directly to his Lordship instead of to him, and hoped he should not suffer for it. He knew not what he meant by his pretending promises to others, unless he designed they should overbalance his Lps promise to him (Mr Foley). Lady Winter's works were formerly supplied by her own woods, which were the most of any private person in that country. She never dealt before for any woods of her Majesty. And considering that lady's circumstances relating to the preseut government, he thought her name would not openly have been made use of. If 7*s.* a cord did not answer Mr White's profit, it would his revenge; he having had an old quarrel with his (Mr Foley's) father. There was not more wood than for the works already there, and the consequence of setting more up would be the destruction of those in being. It was false to insinuate that he designed to engross all the works. He desired that his estate should not be torn from him. Mr Wilcox had not named who the gentlemen were who would be disobliged by his having his former share of the forest wood. He prayed that he might contract according to his memorial. Dated 2 Feb. 1705.

Minuted:—" 7 Feb. 1705. Ordr Mr Wilcox to attend at my Lord Trer ho on Fryday morns."

In the Minute Book, vol. 13, p. 199, 27 Feb. 1705, is:—" Mr Foly & Mr Wilcox cald in. Feb. 13. 65. Petition of John Parker, Agent for the Prizes at the port of Falmouth, Penzance, S^{t} Ives, &c., to the Lord High Treasurer. No embezzlements had been made of her Majesty's goods, but his enemies had represented him as guilty of a crime in letting some of the worthy gentlemen in Cornwall have each a hogshead of claret, first paying the customs, and being ready to pay the price the rest of the wine sold for, which was done before the wines were lotted or tasted for sale. Describes his services, and prays to be appointed a sub-commissioner of the port of Plymouth, and he would do the business of that port, the port of Falmouth, and the rest of the ports in Cornwall.

Feb. 15. 69. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer as to considerable frauds committed at the port of Liverpool by Edward Scarborough, late collector, John Colquit, late surveyor, and Marmaduke Deane, the controller. Dated 15 Feb. 1705–6.

Feb. 6 and 16. 70. Report of M^{r} S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the L^{d} High Treasurer. The manor and bailiwick of Westminster were granted by the Crown, in trust for John Hall, Esq., for 80 years, from Christmas 1676. Edward Progers, Esq., became entitled to the Great Gate House leading from King Street into the New Palace Yard, and divers messuages, &c., parcel of that manor and bailiwick, &c. The whole remaining interest in the Gate House which was granted to the trustees had become vested in Thomas Lamb, merchant, with the reserved rent of 38*l.* per ann. The Gate House, which the justices of the peace for Westminster in their petition desired might be pulled down, to enlarge the passage to the New Palace Yard, was formerly leased by the Crown under the old rent of 6*s.* 8*d.* a year, and 17*l.* of increase, to the house keeper of Whitehall. It had, however, become so old and decayed that little could be made of it but by pulling down and new building, &c. Dated 6 Feb. 1705–6.

Another report from him pursuant to his L^ps^ commands. He had caused an estimate to be made of the value of the Gate House leading into New Palace Yard, with respect to the Crown, as well as to M^r^ Progers, who had an interest in the same for near 51 years. The estimate was omitted in the above report. The Gate House, with two little rooms built at the south-east corner, he conceived must be taken down to enlarge the passage to 25 feet, the same wideness with the street. Considering the decay and nature of the building, which had been used for a prison, and was then left, and that when the street was carried through to Palace Yard, what would remain of the Gate House ground would be valuable for frontage to M^r^ Progers's house on one side, and some back ground belonging to the Dog tavern on the other, he could not estimate the damage at more than 300*l.* The reversion belonging to the Crown he valued at two years' purchase (60*l.*), the materials at 200*l.* The stone having lain very long pressed might not prove so well as expected when removed, &c. Dated 16 Feb. 1705–6.

The petition referred to.

There is also the copy of the letter which directed the last report to be made, and a copy of the report, with this note :—"This agrees with the entry in the Surv^r^ Gen^lls^ office."

Feb. 18. 71. Letter of M^r^ Anth^y^ Hammond to [? M^r^ Lowndes], introducing M^r^ Chambers, who attended on behalf of M^r^ Wells, of whom he (M^r^ Hammond) spoke in the lobby of the House of Commons. M^r^ Wells' case merited consideration and compassion, he having expended a very great sum under an order of the L^d^ Treasurer, which would ruin him and his family unless relieved by the L^d^ High Treasurer. The L^d^ Keeper was well acquainted with his case. Dated 18 Feb. 1705–6.

Accompanied by "the case," from which it appears M^r^ Wells obtained from the L^d^ Keeper a grant of the living of Aldgate, the right to which living the L^d^ Treasurer had ordered to be tried. M^r^ Wells applied himself to M^r^ Borrett, and proceeded to try her Majesty's right, and instead of M^r^ Borrett furnishing the money, amounting to 553*l.*, M^r^ Wells had supplied it himself. 2½ pages.

Feb. 22. 77. Letter from Mr Popple, by desire of the Comrs of Trade and Plantations, to Wm Lowndes, Esq., as to a letter from Mr Caleb Heathcote to the Ld High Treasurer, containing his proposal for providing naval stores at New York. The transmission to him of English goods to the value of 450*l.* for building each ship, according to his proposal, would compel the employment of an officer here to purchase the goods, &c., and he (Mr. Heathcote) was not particular enough as to the iron work necessary for the ships. His proposal to make sail cloth at New York ought not to be encouraged; it would be more advantageous to have it manufactured in England, &c. Dated 22 Feb. 1705–6.

Feb. 23. 79. Report of Sir Edward Northey to the Lord High Treasurer on an inquisition taken in Lincolnshire relating to some derelict lands there which James Graham, Esq. had petitioned to have leased to him for 30 years, and on the report of the Surveyor General thereon. Being required by his Lp to give an opinion whether her Majesty had a probable title thereto and might legally lease the same, he certified that it was found by inquisition that the lands therein mentioned were overflowed by the sea flowing into the rivers Trent and Humber. They had become dry land, being left by the sea, and thereby, primâ facie, her Majesty had a good title; notwithstanding which, the soil between high and low water marks, where the sea flowed, might be parcel of the adjoining manor, if there were sufficient evidence to prove the manor extended so far. He found by the annexed report that the tenants of the adjoining manor of Aulkbrough pretended that the derelict lands were part of the manor, and they claimed as such, common in them; and although the lord of the manor waived his pretence to the lands, yet that would not prejudice the tenants (who claimed common therein) from proving them to be part of the wastes of that manor; and the observation in the plan of the ground that there were lands therein mentioned formerly left by those rivers (which had been ever since enjoyed by the commoners as part of the manor, and which were not comprised in the inquisition) made the pretence of the commoners probable, so that he was doubtful if it were worth [the petitioner's while to take the lease desired, if her Majesty would grant the same, &c. Dated 23 Feb. 1705–6.

With this are (1) a previous joint report of the same Attorney General and the Solicitor General, dated 22 Apr. 1703, on the same subject, (2) the petition referred to, (3 and 4) two affidavits, (5) the report of the Surveyor General, dated 6 Dec. 1704, on the same lands, (6) the report made to him by his clerk, M[r] Tailer, who had made an actual survey and valuation of the premises, and (7) a carefully prepared plan (somewhat imperfect). 10 pages, 2 halves.

The Com[rs] of the Navy would not pay the charge. They must have either hired such a place or taken one by force, or the stores must have lain in the streets. Feb. 25. 84. Report of the Postmasters General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Dame Frances Killigrew, widow of Sir Peter Killigrew. Mr Rogers had not been appointed agent to the packet boats at Falmouth in place of the late agent in regard to the private interest of Mr Trefusis. The late agent was removed for indiscreet conduct. The packets constantly cleaned on the Flushing side of the water, the beach being softer and finer than the Falmouth side. The former had lately been much improved by a large key built by Mr Trefusis, to the side of which the packets could come and be cleaned with expedition, and, by the help of cranes, could land and ship their guns, &c. They saw no reason why their agent should be enjoined not to remove from Falmouth. If the passengers preferred Falmouth, it was equally easy for them to go on board there as from Flushing, and for the despatch of the mails to and from Portugal. Flushing was two miles nearer than Falmouth. Dated 25 Feb. 1705–6.

[? About Feb. 25.] 85. Papers relating to a claim made by Mrs Alice Cæsar, afterwards the wife of Mr Higgons, to certain of the land on which Chatham dockyard is built.

Nos 1 to 6 consist of one set of copies of papers, viz.:—

(1.) A petition of John Higgons, gen., in right of Alice his wife, formerly Alice Cæsar.

(2.) Report of the Surveyor General. Dated 18 June 1700. It appears from this that the matter of this title had been in litigation in 1692. The claim was for recompense for three acres of land whereon the docks and buildings were placed. In 1695 witnesses were examined thereon. In 1696 a second examination of witnesses. In 1699 an order in council referred it to the Attorney General, who reported on the case. The report of the surveyor goes deeply into the case and states that the buildings were erected in the time of James I., and the evidence as to title goes back to the year 1627, when Sir Richard Leveson, Knt of the Bath, sold to John Duling of Rochester, gen., in consideration of 1060*l.*, the manor of Westcourt, with the site and very many parcels of land in Gillingham, and three acres of salt and fresh marsh in Chatham, at or near the King's new docks there, late in the occupation of Peter Buck, Esq.

(3.) Order in council, dated 22 Feb. 1699, referring the petition and Attorney General's report to the Comrs of the Treasury.

(4.) The Attorney General's report, dated 3 Feb. 1699. He says it did not appear to him that the inheritance of the three acres claimed was ever conveyed to his Majesty's predecessors.

(5.) Another petition of Alice Cæsar, alias Higgins, for the deposition to be heard by the Admiralty and to report their opinion.

1705–6. VOL. XCVII.

(6.) Report of Sir Ed. Northey, Attorney Gen[l], dated 7 Aug. 1703, on the previous reports and evidence, and the deeds and depositions. In addition he had caused M[r] Lechmore to survey the docks and land there. His (the Attorney General's) opinion was, that the petitioner appeared to have a title to the three acres of marsh land in Chatham, and it was probable that those three acres were in Chatham docks. The suit if carried on would be doubtful, and as the title to the docks was of great consequence, and it would be a charity to the petitioners to put an end to this intricate question, it would be for her Majesty's service to give the petitioners reasonable satisfaction.

(7.) Copy of M[r] Lechmore's letter to the Com[rs] of the Navy sending copy of his report. Dated 15 Jan. 1701–2.

(8.) The copy of his report. He considered the claims groundless, and that his Majesty had an undoubted title to the premises and every part thereof. Dated Jan. 15, 1701–2.

(9.) Letter from Jo. Higgins to M[r] Lowndes. He and his wife were willing to convey to her Majesty the land for principal and interest of 2,500*l.* to be computed from A.D. 1656, with reasonable charges, they having spent 1,000*l.* and upwards in prosecuting the suit. Dated 25 July 1704.

(10.) Letter from the same to the same. If the claim were not settled they must sell to a private hand, who would endeavour to exact the utmost improved value. Dated 31 July 1704.

(11.) The petition of John Higgons, gent., Alice his wife, and four daughters, referring the whole matter to his Lordship. Read "ult. Julij 1704."

(12.) M[r] Higgons's case. It might modestly be presumed that above 100,000*l.* had been laid out on the land, the full advantage whereof belonged to the owner of the soil. After spending 1,000*l.* and several years in prosecuting his right he submitted his case to his Lordship. There are two minutes on the back, the last of which is:—"25 Feb. 1705. The Com[rs] say a state of this case has been made by M[r] Lechmore w[ch] shows the pet[r] has no colour of title. The Com[rs] are to send a copy of that case." 33 pages.

[About Feb. 26.] 86. Petition of Lieut. Gen[l] Lumly to the Lord High Treasurer, as to payment for clothing the kettle-drummer and trumpeters of his regiment, formerly Sir John Laniers.

Minuted:—"26 Feb. 1705/6. Granted."

Five other papers on the same matter. 6 pages or parts of pages.

Feb. 26. 87. Report of the Duke of Ormonde to M[r] Secretary Hedges, on the petition of John Travers, Esq., as to the surrender of the letters patent for the office of customer of the city of Cork, and the grant of the same to Philip Crofts, gent. Dated 26 Feb. 1705–6.

March 4. 91. Copy of a letter of M^r Jemmett, who was dismissed from some office at the port of Lydd to [? the Com^rs of Customs] bringing various charges against Captain Baker, his man M^r Wombwell, &c. Also as to embezzlements by M^r King. Captain Batson was afraid to complain of M^r King. The great skill of Captain Baker was to bring in to their honours a bill of two or three hundred pounds in a term [with] "allowed by me Henry Baker." He was fair to the owlers, for after he had cast them, he let them owl and smuggle for seven or eight years. It had been a custom formerly if any man spoke against the great Captain Baker, to arrest him with a sham action, as he did Captain Ellesden not long ago. There would be more owlers when Captain Baker had done than when he began. Dated 4 March 1705-6. 3 pages.

March 4. 92. Report of M^r W^m Borrett to the L^d High Treasurer, on the petition of Peter Fabre, a refugee from France, praying a grant of the estate (value 250*l.*) of one Bourdet, a subject of that kingdom, who died intestate, not having any relation. Her Majesty might grant administration to him, or such other as she pleased. Dated 4 March 1705-6.
The petition.

[About March 5.] 93. Memorial of M^r William Palmes to the Lord High Treasurer. The many misfortunes he had undergone on account of his son's office, occasioned by the change of the money in 1696, were not unknown to his L^p. The last decree of the L^d Keeper Wright, affirmed against him by the House of Lords, had given the finishing stroke to his small estate, unless his L^p would favour him. He had prepared a schedule of fee farm rents, &c., as an equivalent for Cookham and Bray.

The schedule referred to.

Minuted:—"Read 5th March 1705–6. My Lord thinkes these fee farm rents are such as are come to the crown by the death of ye Q. Dowager, and it is too soon to make any application of this kind, because the said Qs execrs have not yet deliverd over the books, papers, & surveys, relating to her said Maty[s] jointure." 3 pages.

March 11. 97. Report of the Controllers of the Army Accounts to the Lord High Treasurer, on the memorial of Charles Noden in behalf of Robert Henley, lieutenant to the independent company at Bermudas, who was found guilty of threatening the Lieutt Governor of Bermudas, fined 500*l.* and imprisoned. The fine and imprisonment had been remitted. As to the taking off his respit they saw no cause, unless her Majesty extended her compassion still further. Dated 11 March 1705–6.

Minuted:—"Read 22th Apr. 1706. My Lord agrees wth this report." 1 page.

March 12. 98. Letter of George, Bishop of Bath and Wells, to the Lord [High Treasurer]. A great indisposition, for which he was directed to go immediately into the country, had kept him from coming abroad some weeks. This had deprived him of the ordinary opportunity of waiting upon his Lp, and of presenting Bishop Kenn's humble thanks for the bounty received through his Lp. He enclosed Bishop Kenn's letter, and wished to know if his Lordship thought fit to order any part of that royal charity for Bishop Kenn to be paid into his (the writer's) hands before he left town, or whether anyone should be deputed to receive the whole at Lady-day. Dated 12 March 1705–6.

Bishop Kenn's letter. He says he had no title to the continuance of the royal bounty but his Lordship's unmerited goodness to him, which he besought God plentifully to reward, and if his Lordship should forbear to continue it, the discontinuance would not obliterate his (the Bishop's) grateful sense of past favour.

March 14. 100. Report of the Controllers of the Army Accounts to the Ld High Treasurer, on the memorial of Charles, Earl of Arran, asking that respits might be taken off Major la Bastide, "guydon" of the third troop of horse guards, towards defraying the charges his Lp had been at for the loss of horses in that troop, which was under his command; they found no precedent for the same. Dated 14 March 1705–6.

Minuted:—"22 Apr. 1706. It does not seem reasonable, nor can it be done by law." 1½ pages.

March 14. 101. Report of the Attorney General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of William Rider, and the report thereon made by the Solicitor General as to stay of proceedings on a bond, wherein the petitioner became bound for a debt of Edward Lord Griffin. Petitioner's case was very hard and deserved compassion. It relates to claims on the Lord Griffin's estate, the moiety of the manor of Braybrook having belonged to him. Dated 14 March 1705–6.

Copy of the above, with this addition:—

"Read the 10th of June.

"My Lord is willing, upon consideration of these several reports, to move her Majesty that, after some provision made for Lady Essex Griffin out of the within mencõned estate, her Maty will please to lett the other part thereof be applyed to the satisfaccõn of the creditors, according to their titles with respect to priority of time."

[? About March 18.] 104. Petition of Charlotte Rycaut to the Queen. Her husband, Peter Rycaut, Esq., was a lieut[t] in my Lord Donnegall's regiment at Gibraltar during the siege, where for his merits his L[p] promoted him to be captain-lieutenant. Being eldest lieut[t] at Barcelona "the Prince of Hesse, out of a just esteem for his bravery, distinguished him for the attack of Mount Joyce, where he was killed along with that noble prince." Prays relief for herself and five fatherless children.

At the foot is a certificate of the Earl of Sunderland that she had nothing in the world to live on.

[About March 19.] 107. Petition of John Egerton, Esq., to the L[d] High Treasurer, for the grant of a new lease of a pool or lake called Hatchess more [or Hatchew mere], in the Forest of Mara, and Mondrem or Delamere in the county of Chester, with the fishing. Also the lake or pool called the Fishpool in that forest, a lease of which had been granted by King Charles II. to his father, Sir Philip Egerton, Kn[t], deceased.

Referred 19 March 1705–6 to the Surveyor General.

Minuted:—"Read 6[th] June 1707. My Lord thinkes it reason[ble] to renew the lease to M[r] Egerton, because it would be a hardship to him to grant one to any other person of y[e] premises."

With this is another paper entitled:—

over to the registrar of the same court; "by him to be sold in ten days for payment of the purchase money, the Lord Chief Baron himself being the principal purchaser." If by his Lp's (the Lord Treasurer's) intercession he did not get what was due to him from her Majesty to pay off these people, he and his family would be utterly ruined by an usage without precedent to any loyal subject of the crown. He had disbursed against the French in America upwards of 10,000*l.* The interest at 6 per cent. was still due from A.D. 1688. The accounts had been audited three times. A pension of 500*l.* per ann. settled on him by King Charles II. was due since 1688, which would make upwards of 23,000*l.* or 24,000*l.* There was a petition of his before his Lp, for a piece of land in America called Penmaquid. If his Lp would get him a grant of the third or fourth part of the money, with the land, he would quit claim and title to the rest.

He adds this postscript:—"Really, my Lord, it would be better for a man of my opinion to live in Turkey than here." Dated March 20, 1705. 2 pages, quarto.

March 21. 109. Petition of Anthony Count Brandé of Bosnia and Hungary, "reformer," to the Ld High Treasurer. Being subject to the Emperor (though of the reformed religion) he had suffered much from the cruelty of the rebels in Hungary, and was deprived of friends and estate. He had been about four months in London. Asks assistance, being almost starving. He desired to go to Catalonia, to venture his unfortunate life under Charles the Third.

[Before 25] March. 110. Letter from the Ld Lieut. of Ireland to the Ld High Treasurer, advising the superseding of Lieut.-Col. March 25. 111. Order in Council on reading the report of the Archbishop of York on the state of the French church at Wapping. The report states that this church was set up four years ago by Mons. de la Prade, a French minister, licenced by the Bp of London, at the desire and and for the use of the Jersey and Guernsey people who inhabited at Wapping. They were unacquainted with the English language, and living at a great distance from any French church, could not resort to the public worship of God. Mr de la Prade hired the house where they assembled, for which the people were to pay 10*l.* per ann., and at his own charge hp set up a pulpit and built pews to fit it for a chapel or meeting place. For the last four years he had performed the office of minister, preached twice every Lord's day, and hoped at least for a subsistence from the people; but they being very poor, their contributions would hardly defray the house-rent, and the minister, so far from getting anything, was 50*l.* out of purse. But for the intercession of M^r^ Russell, the English minister, the pews and pulpit would have been seized for rent. The congregation consisted of about 50 families (M^r^ de la Prade says 84, viz., 80 families of Jersey and Guernsey people, and four families of other French). The persons who commonly attended were about 100, and when the seamen were at home about 140. At the first their worship was after the way of the French Protestants abroad, but for the last 12 months they had used the English Liturgy translated into French. The Archbishop was of opinion the church should be kept up, and asks for the royal bounty. The order refers it to the L^d^ High Treasurer. Dated 25 March 1706.

Minuted:—"2 May 1706. To be laid before ye Q." 3 pages.

John Richards, and Adjutant General Lundie, who served as general officers in the King of Portugal's army, the deduction of which the King would not allow out of what was to be paid to the 13,000 Portuguese troops. Dated 26 March 1706.

March 30. 117. Report of M^r^ Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the minister, churchwardens, and other inhabitants of the parish of Porchester, in the county of Southampton, representing that in the Dutch war their parish church was made use of by King Charles II., together with Porchester Castle, for securing prisoners of war, and it was by them set on fire and the greatest part ruined. With hard shift divine worship had been celebrated in part of it until lately, but it had become so ruinous that it could no longer be used until new built or repaired at an expense of 400*l.*, which the poor parishioners were unable to raise. About 50 loads of timber would be required, worth about 125*l.*, which might be cut in the forest of "Bier;" but the timber was fit for the navy, and he advised that money should be given instead of timber. The money might be raised in Windsor Forest by sale of old dotard and decayed trees fit for nothing but fuel, and which the neighbouring people were daily cutting down. Dated 30 March 1706.

At the next meeting of the council a motion should be made in favour of M[r] Hullin. What his grace desired as to a licence for Captain Cornwall, who held a patent office in that kingdom, to continue in England for four or five years, was not usual. Sir Richard Vernon's and Major Butler's commissions should be disposed of as his grace directed. In the enclosed his Grace would see a particular account of the drafts given to the three regiments lately embarked at Kinsale for Catalonia, &c. Dated Dublin Castle, 12 April 1706.

(2nd.) Address of the House of Lords to her Majesty, recommending the purchase of the same, their Lps being desirous that so 1706. great a treasure of books and MSS., so generously given for the public service, should not remain any longer useless, and in danger of perishing for want of due care. The last proposal of Sir John Cotton was higher than the surveyors judged reasonable, but the whole advantage would come to the family, who had given this great treasure of books to the use of the public. In the early part of this address it is stated that a committee to consider of keeping records, had reported that nothing had been done to make the library useful to the public; there was no passage to it set out, so that no persons could resort to it; there was no library keeper appointed to inspect and take care of the MSS., nor any orders or rules appointed for the reading or using the same. The place wherein the library was contained was a narrow little room, damp, and improper for preserving the books and papers. There was only one window at each end, and the arch over one of them in a ruinous condition and ready to fall, as was also the arch upon which the room was built.

(3rd.) Representation of Sir John Cotton, Bart. He was willing that the house and gardens should be leased to her Majesty at such yearly rent as should be agreed upon.

(4th.) Report of S. Travers and Sir Chr. Wren. They thought 200*l.* a year might be a reasonable rate. It would be better to purchase at 4,000*l.*, but this must be by Act of Parliament, as the estate was entailed.

(5th.) Estimate by Sir John Cotton of the value of the same. Proposes that 400*l.* per annum should be paid. The ground was capable of great improvements by its near situation to the two Houses of Parliament, where convenience might be made for the accommodation of members of Parliament, by building a square, which might contain 24 houses. The gentlemen of the House of Commons might go directly out of Parliament house into their lodgings.

(6th.) Further representation of John Cotton, Bart., offering to sell the property for 5,000*l.*

Minuted:—"15th May 1706. Shew this to the proprietors. Communicaced to 'em 16th d° They insist on 5,000^{li}, and will not sell under y^{t} sum." 8 pages and 2 halves.

May 17. 58. Report of the Surveyor General to the L[d] High Treasurer, on the annexed case of the Duke of Grafton. The forest of Whittlewood (Northamptonshire) passed 17 Car. II. to Denzill, Lord Holles, &c. for 99 years, in trust for the late Queen Dowager during her life, and afterwards in trust for the crown. King Charles II. in his 19[th] year granted her the power of naming, removing, &c. all officers in the forest. The same king in his 32[nd] year granted the office of Master Forester of Whittlewood to Henry, Earl of Arlington, for life, the remainder to Henry, Duke of Grafton, and his heirs male. The Queen in the 33[rd] year granted the office to Lewis, Earl of Feversham, for life. The Attorney General had been consulted as to these grants, &c. The value of the office desired by the Duke of Grafton, M[r] Wilcox thought, would not exceed 250*l*. per ann. clear of all charges of inferior officers. The place of Master Keeper he heard had been sometimes sold. As to the coppices in the forest (3,526 acres), he advises that care might be taken to prevent the like damage to the crown, as happened by the grantee in fee of the coppices in Rockingham Forest, where the crown's title was in danger of being lost. M[r] Attorney seemed to take both the Lord Feversham's and the Duke of Grafton's title to be invalid, and he (the surveyor) was of opinion the grant of the office was a matter of favour in her Majesty. Dated 17 May 1706.

The case referred, to and the reply of the Duke of Grafton to the above report, signed by him.

The duties of salt delivered at Seaton Delaval for some years past had amounted to 5,000*l.* a year, but the duties on salt in general were not advanced by the number of salt pans at Seaton, for the vessels that loaded salt there might as well be supplied from other places on the coasts of Durham and Northumberland, where the salt works were very numerous. It was not a sufficient ground for any allowance to be made towards the building or repairing the pier, in respect of advantage to the salt duties. Dated 22 May 1706.

[? About June 1.] 75. An account of the state of Dover Harbour, prepared by Richard Breton. Seven years before the harbour was useless by the quantities of beach cast in by the sea, and upon surveys being made by Sir Henry Sheers and Mr Dummer, the only expedient found was to build a wall across the harbour, with sluices and a pair of large gates to let ships in and out, which cross wall might be a pent for the water at high tide, and by letting it out at low water the force thereof would scour and discharge the beach from the mouth of the harbour. An Act of Parliament was obtained for levying dues upon shipping for this purpose. The cross wall had well answered its design. The Comrs had been unable to repair the breaches made by the great storm in the heads of the harbour, being the old works made in Queen Elizabeth's time, and unless speedy steps were taken the harbour must be destroyed.

Accompanied by (1) the names of the Comrs of Dover Harbour.

(2.) Works propounded to be done this summer for repair of the damages of the pier heads and harbour at Dover, with estimates and instructions. June the 1st 1706.

June 4. 78. Report of the Duke of Ormonde to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Elizabeth, Countess Dowager of Thanet. The grant to her of the penny post office in and about Dublin had been a disappointment. She seeks for a grant of the pensions fallen in, in Ireland, by the deaths of the Earl of Longford, Lady Stephens, and Col. William Legg, amounting to 400*l.* per ann.; the petitioner's circumstances were so unfortunate as to deserve her Majesty's favour. Dated 4 June 1706.

June 6. 83. Memorial of the Duke of Somerset to the Lord High Treasurer, in reply to the answer of Sir Christopher Wren, which was defective and evasive, as to a shed built outside the Duke's garden. The damage done to his trees, wall, garden, &c., was already very visible. This unfair dealing and most egregious trifling would make any man but Sir Christopher Wren blush. If his stating things to his Lp upon all occasions be done with the like sincerity, his Grace well knew what censure it deserved, and could he be persuaded to believe that Sir Chr had not lost his understanding, he should then think his shuffling replies were contrived to lose the true state of the matter of fact. It might be collected that truth was not a suitable object for Sir Christopher's understanding. Dated 6 June 1706.

Minuted:—" Sr Xr Wren will pull down the shed to ye heighth it was before." 2 pages.

[About June 14.] 100. Memorial of D^{r} Charles Morley. About four years since being in full practice among many noble families, his grace the Duke of Ormonde moved him to go as physician general to the land forces in the expedition to Cadiz. His grace obtained for him the commission for sick and wounded seamen. In the expedition to Cadiz and Vigo he (D^{r} Morley) was physician general to the land forces and to the general's person, and to most of the admirals and captains of the navy. On his return, being long confined by a dangerous fever, he applied too late for a reward. He had regulated and controlled the surgeons' chests of the navy, and brought them all to be fairly furnished with good medicines by the Apothecaries' Company, and so had prevented abuses heretofore committed, by stuffing the chests with unwholesome and improper medicines, to the loss of many seamen's lives, and he had detected the ignorance of the surgeons and obliged them all to keep regular journals. The sick were put in good hospitals, and at less expense, and many hundred lives had been saved. And yet without charge, complaint, or hearing he was put out of his employment. Prays to be appointed a com^{r} of the navy.

Minuted:—"14th June 1706. My Lord Treãr doth not appoint either com^{rs} of the navy or sick & wounded." 1½ pages, quarto.

June 17. 102. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor General, and Sir Chr. Wren on a reconsideration of their late report concerning the purchase of Cotton House and gardens. Sir John Cotton derived his title to the messuage called Our Lady's Pew, and two gardens, by conveyances under a grant made by King James I., in his eleventh year, to Robert Bowyer, Esq., and to a piece of waste ground lying beside the same, next the Thames, by similar conveyances, under a grant of the inheritance of the soil, houses, and gardens of the old palace of Westminster, in the same eleventh year; but they took the whole to be subject to the Act of 12 William III. for settling and preserving the Cottonian Library. Their valuation was made on a view of the whole premises, and on consideration of what improvements might be made, &c. Dated 17 June 1706. 2½ pages.

June 18. 103. Letter from Col. Handasyde to the L^d^ High Treasurer, relating to remittances for the regiment in Jamaica, which had been put to great hardships. Unless the col. had borrowed money the men must have starved. He was informed some gentlemen were recommended to be agents for prize there, which office M^r^ Arnold Brown served. His behaviour had been so zealous for her Majesty that the gentlemen who had brought in prizes had been so incensed against him, that they would spare no pains to ruin him. Who was designed to succeed M^r^ Brown he knew not, but he had made a general observation, that in those parts those who were faithful servants in their offices were always pushed at and supplanted by some who had friends of their own to put in their places. They had been expecting the enemy would make an attempt upon them, &c. Dated Jamaica, June 18, 1706. 2 pages.

June 20. 108. Report of the officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the gravers of the Mint (John Croker, Samuel Bull, and Gabriel Leclerc). The officers were of opinion that good graving was the best security of the coin, and was best acquired by graving medals, and without exercise in such graving the gravers might in time lose the skill which they had acquired. It was the master and workers' duty to coin the money well. The gravers should have leave to make and sell such medals of fine gold and silver as did not relate to state affairs, and such medals as were made to reward persons by her Majesty for good services, also such as had historical designs and inscriptions for great actions. July 29. 29. Report of the Postmasters General to the Lord High Treasurer, on Mr Dummer's memorial, complaining that he was a loser by his contract with the Post Office for supplying three packet boats for the Lisbon service. They had not understood that he proposed to gain anything by the wages or victuals of the sailors, but that all his advantage should arise solely for the "ware and tare" of the vessels, as was customary in other contracts. The vessels were to sail once a fortnight, but by the exigencies of state, upon the King of Spain going to Portugal, they were ordered to go every week, &c. If in consideration of Mr Dummer being a loser by the contract her Majesty would give a sign manual to release him, and direct that he be paid by the treasurer of the Post Office the prime valuation of the two packets, her Majesty having them as her property, Mr Dummer could have no cause to complain, and the service would be better carried on. He should look upon it as the greatest unhappiness that could befall him if any wrong interpretations he should make of his L[ps] orders, should create the least dissatisfaction imaginable to his L[p] or his administration. They represented that Bernard Granville, Esq., was in his lifetime indebted to John Sheffeild, clerk, father of the petitioner Elizabeth, in 1,000*l.*, secured by judgment, which judgment was assigned by Sheffeild towards her advancement. Execution was sued out thereon, and a moiety of the manor of Clewer and Moat Park in the county of Berks was extended for satisfying that judgment, and by ejectments brought, the petitioners obtained a verdict and judgment for the moiety extended. It did not appear to him that there was a rent of 150*l.* payable by her Majesty for Moat Park (which was part of Windsor Park), as represented. The petitioners allege that her Majesty enjoyed the two lodges and 300 acres with them, as tenant by agreement with Bernard Granville. Moat Park was heretofore the inheritance of the Duke of Albemarle, and Bernard Granville after his decease claimed the same. Aug. 9. 55. Report of Sir Christopher Wren to the Lord High Treasurer. An address to the Queen from the House of Peers represented the ill state of the Paper Office at Whitehall, and prayed her Majesty would direct suitable repairs and alterations; also that there was a want of room, so that the papers could not be conveniently deposited. He had, with Mr Tucker, the keeper of the office, viewed the place, and found it full and crowded, and it could not be enlarged but by addition of the rooms under the tower and contiguous to it, in the occupation of Mons. Van Huls, or the gallery leading to the park might be fitted up for that purpose, which would prove very convenient; or the office might be removed over the Treasury chambers in the Cockpit, lately fitted for the Comrs of the Union, and would be convenient, being near the secretary's office, which in a manner was necessary, the Paper Office being a place to which the Secretaries of State had frequent occasions for recourse. When his Lordship determined upon either of these three ways he would give an estimate. Dated 9 Aug. 1706.

1706. to Mr Chiffinch for 99 years was truly recited. Her Ladyship had lately purchased her dwelling house in Duke Street, Westminster, under Chiffinch's grant, for the remainder of the term (53 years). He had heard that King Charles II. had given some grant or licence to his spaniel keeper, George Holder, to erect a house on or near the ground (of which this lady desired a grant) according to the plan at the back of the memorial. On enquiry he (the surveyor) found that King Charles gave a verbal direction to Mr Fitch, the builder, to erect a house on a spot of ground agreed on by his Majesty, for the use of Holder and his family and the keeping of spaniels. This house was enjoyed by him till the Revolution, when it and the dog keeper's place were given to one Beaubissons, &c. The timber house and dog kennel were not only very offensive to this lady's dwelling, but by the filth and nastiness about them as then kept, were not fit to be seen in the park. The premises might be granted for a term not exceeding 50 years, &c. Dated 31 Aug. 1706.

Sept. 2. 82. Copy of the Treasury Minute of 2 Sept. 1706 relating to the repair of Dover Harbour. Mr Breton was called in and represented that if the south head of the harbour were not speedily repaired, the harbour would be destroyed. 1,500*l.* was wanted on loan without interest, to be repaid after a loan of 3,000*l.* made by Lord Weymouth, and a further sum of 1,500*l.* due to workmen.

Minuted:—" 9th Apr. 1707. Send this and ye act of parlt. to Mr Attorny Genll to prepare the prop security to be given for the repaymt of this 1,500*l.* without int."

(1.) Letter of Sir Henry Shore.

(2.) Memorial of Matthew Aylmer, Esq., representing the danger of the harbour being entirely lost. There were several officers established with good salaries who had begun a wall of timber across the harbour, which was never likely to be finished, and would never answer its purpose; submitting the reasonableness of committing the care of the harbour to the Comrs of the Navy.

(3.) "A short account of the state of Dover Harbour," by Mr Breton. Certified by the Mayor of Dover and others.

Minuted:—" Read 3d Sept. 1706."

(4.) Works propounded to be done this summer for repair of the damages of the pier heads and harbour at Dover, with estimates and instructions. Dated 1 June 1706.

(5.) Letter from Mr E. Dummer to the Ld High Treasurer on the same subject. He says a stone wall was proposed to be built for 7,000*l.* The work as carried out was abortive. Dated 10 May 1706.

ment of the linen manufacture in those parts, and as to their opinion whether, if Ireland should fall into the making fine linen, as suggested in the representation, it would affect the trade of England; and if so, what restrictions might be necessary in any new grant for encouraging the linen manufacture in Ireland. Trade and navigation seemed to be concerned in this manufacture of Irish linen. The merchants considered the improvement of the linen manufacture in Ireland would prejudice the trade of England. On the whole they (the Com^rs) concurred therein. Irish linen was exempted from duties on importation here, and on exportation to the plantations. It would in a great measure prevent the importation of broad Germany linens, damask, diaper, &c., from Hamburg, and of low priced linen from Flanders and Holland, to the diminution of the customs, and the exportation of woollen manufactures of this kingdom, which were taken abroad in exchange for these sorts of linens. And (not to say anything of diverting the course of trade, by sending linens directly from Germany to Portugal, and taking returns from thence in sugar, which were heretofore supplied through this kingdom) they were of opinion that any further encouragement or improvement of the manufacture of Irish linen] would bear no proportion of advantage there, either to the loss of the customs or decay of the woollen manufacture of this kingdom. Dated 4 Sept. 1706.

Sept 23. 97. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer, on the proposals of M^{r} Holt and M^{r} Williams to raise the price of tin. They had reported on the former proposals made by the same gentlemen, having conferred with some of the principal merchants who traded to the East Indies, and whose opinion was against raising the price, as it would encourage the importation from thence. Since the second reference to them of M^{r} Holt's proposal, a Dutch merchant from Siam (where the tin mines were) had assured them that these mines could not yield more than 50 or 60 tons per ann., that the Indians had occasion for more tin than the mines supplied, and the price there was 60 guilders per cwt., which was dearer than here, and was not imported by the Dutch except as ballast; and it was scarce used in Europe for anything but for glazing earthenware, being bought up chiefly by the workmen of Liege for that purpose. They enquired of M^{r} Drummond in Holland upon these matters, and found the Dutch merchant was not to be relied on. They were advised by M^{r} Drummond that the best East India tin was finer than the English, and would beat into a finer leaf without cracking, and draw into threads like silver and gold. The mines in India were larger than ours, and if the English tin were raised above 45 guilders per cwt. (which used for many years to be under 38), the Dutch would soon supply themselves and other places from India. They imported 80 tons last year, and had imported formerly above 300 tons in one year, and a high price would encourage the Germans to work their mines faster. This account agreed with the opinion of the merchants here, and the opinion of the officers of the Mint was, that the price of tin could not be raised with advantage. Dated Mint Office, 23 Sept. 1706.

Sir John Gifford, late of the parish of S[t] Martin's in the fields, in the co. of Middlesex, Bart., was outlawed, for holding correspondence with King James and remitting money to him. By the annexed affidavit it appeared very probable that Sir John was seized of an estate of the value of 500*l. per ann.* in the parishes of Burstall, Frisby, and Hoby, in the county of Leicester, which was forfeited; advises that a commission should issue to enquire thereof. the Consul were entirely satisfied with the method and clearness of the accounts carried on with the late Ambassador for his Catholic Majesty's service. The writer was engaged in the same service. Lord Galway and the Ambassador seemed at first very desirous to bring even the prisoners of Alcantara to the party of King Charles III., but afterwards they were not so forward; reckoning them not of much use, since the work went on so well without them. They might be necessary, and it would not be difficult to pick up 1,500 or 2,000 of them. He had sent Mr Waite orders for accoutrements for 1,000 soldiers, which he afterwards suspended. To show what rooms there were for the reception of her Majesty's library at S^t James', and for the library of Gresham College (if it should be removed), he had annexed the plans of both buildings. The library at S^t James was a lofty room, and shelved as full as it could well be, and yet a great number of books remained in heaps for want of room. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the L^d High Treasurer on the representation of the Com^rs for Trade and Plantations "concerning the importation of naval stores from the plantations, and how the words 'good and merchantable,' in the Act relating thereto, are to be understood," approving of the preparation and introduction of naval stores from the plantations. The judgment of what stores were good and merchantable might properly belong to the Com^rs of the Navy. Enclosing an abstract, received from D^r Davenant's office, of the importations. Dated 7 Jan. 1706.

Also the "representation," and another paper.

The Com^rs of Trade state that the Com^rs of the Navy were obliged to purchase the commodities wherever they found them cheapest, and they commonly preferred the pitch and tar of Sweden to that of America. If the premium were not interrupted, naval stores of all sorts would be imported from New England, Carolina, and other plantations in sufficient quantity for the whole navigation of England, and they would equal the best imported from Sweden and Norway. They recommend an increase of salary to M^r Bridger. They understood that since the inhabitants of New England had applied themselves to the produce of naval stores, the woollen manufacture was greatly interrupted, and it would in all probability be wholly left off.

Minuted:—"Read 10 Jan^ry 1706. Com^rs Navy to give their opinion whether these stores are fit for the uses of the navy, and how much the prœmium for y^e stores already imported have & will amount unto." 6 pages.

Jan. 9. 4. Report of Sir Christopher Wren to the Lord High Treasurer as to the questions "whether the ground floor of the secretary's office in the Cockpit might be translated to the rooms above," and whether the rooms below were capacious enough for the Paper Office. The rooms above might well be fitted for the secretary's office, and the "pewes" for clerks below might be set above, and such other "conveniences done" as Lord Sunderland judged necessary. As to the Paper Office, the papers might be disposed in portable presses in the old office in the Tower. He annexed a design of the rooms below, used as the secretary's office, for comparison. The rooms were very capable of the Paper Office. Considering the rooms were situated amongst lodgings, chimneys, and timber buildings, it seemed reasonable that these books should be preserved in portable presses. Dated 9 Jan. 1706/7.

Minuted:—"Read 9^th Apr. 1707."

The design referred to. 2 pages.

Jan. 10. 5. Presentment of the Com^rs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, advising that a good convoy should constantly be ordered during the war for the protection of shipping ready to sail for Virginia or Maryland by the 1^st of September in every year, and of such as should be ready to return by the 1^st of April. During the winter Her Majesty's service would less need the seamen. The mariners would better avoid the sickness and the ships the worms usually pernicious to both during the summer in that country.

Three enclosures. 4 pages and 2 parts.

Jan. 16. 12. Letter from Thomas Morice to M^r^ Lowndes as to various matters of disbursement to officers and soldiers in Portugal. The officers and soldiers who had come over to King Charles had hitherto been expensive by the number of religious men and gentlemen. They could not be so many for the future, as they sent them up to the King as often as ships presented themselves, which was frequently now that the fleet wintered in those parts. "Sir Cloudsley" had carried away most of those paid to the end of the month. Most of those left would be paid in the new regiment, the command of which was given by Lord Rivers' desire to Major Gen[l] John Richards by the plenipotentiary. 300 Spaniards had listed. As they came in they should be clothed and sent up as Lord Galway directed, that they might be useful at the opening campaign. Asks for instructions as to further payments. He sent with the fleet a ship laden with coals for Gibraltar, the garrison being in so great want that they would be reduced to pull down the houses left there for firing. Dated Lisbon, 27 Jan. 1707 N.S. 5 pages, quarto.

Jan. 17. 13. Letter of Capt. Michael Studholm to the L[d] High Treasurer, asking him by the request of the Queen to give directions for the repair of a small bridge or two on the north side of Hyde Park. It was a way Her Majesty made frequent use of. Dated 17 Jan. 1706. 1 page.

Minuted:—"21 Jan[ry] 1706. My Lord has already paid all that he can of these demands." 1 page.

Jan. 21. 18. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland to the Duke of Ormonde. They were of the same opinion as the trustees for the linen manufacture (as set forth in the representation enclosed) that the promotion of the linen manufacture under the present great decay of trade, would in all probability be the only means to recover that poor sinking country from its miserable poverty, and they entreated his grace to lay the matter before Her Majesty, who delighted in doing all the good she could to all her subjects. Dated Dublin Castle, 21 Jan. 1706.

The representation referred to, of the trustees for the management of the linen manufacture of Ireland, to the Lords Justices, &c.

1706–7. VOL. CI.

of Ireland. They had some time since represented to their Excellencies the necessity of removing Mr Lewis Cromelin from Lisburn in Ulster to Kilkenny, that the linen manufacture might be equally extended through the other three provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, but had received no answer. They now lay before their Excellencies their reasons for their application, that the Lord Lieutt might bring them before Her Majesty.

The English Parliament conceiving that the woollen manufacture in Ireland (which was entirely managed by the English inhabitants) might become prejudicial to the same manufacture in England, in effect prohibited that manufacture in Ireland; but determined that the linen manufacture would be beneficial to both kingdoms. In obedience to a letter of King William III., and confiding in the promises of both Houses of Parliament of England, the inhabitants of Ireland left off the woollen and betook themselves to the linen manufacture, not in the least suspecting that they should meet with any interruption or discouragement from England in that trade. Mr Cromelin, whom they sent for from Holland, had brought the manufacture to great perfection in the north of Ireland. They thought that the English in the other three provinces, who were the only persons that lost the woollen manufacture (and who were reduced to a miserable condition), should then share in the linen trade, and further that Mr Cromellin with part of his colony of workmen should be removed to Kilkenny, and that six years should be added to his patent as a compensation to him. Dated 15 Jan. 1706. 4 pages.

Jan. 22. 19. Representation by Thomas Rudge, receiver of Her Majesty's land revenue in the counties of Southampton, Wilts, Gloucester, Somerset, and Dorset, as to certain fee farm rents in the county of Kent, which he believed had escheated to the crown for want of an heir. On the nomination of M[r] Neal they appointed M[r] Andrew Hamilton, who settled the posts through the provinces of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the colonies of Long Island, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Plymouth, and Massachusets, through New Hampshire, King's County, Piscataway, 70 miles beyond Boston in New England, in all about 500 miles. M[r] Neal assigned his interest in his patent to M[r] Hamilton and M[r] West to secure the payment of their debt for establishing the post. Copy of a letter from Capt[n] Townsend, Commiss[r] of Her Majesty's yard at Portsmouth, dated the 10[th] Feb[ry] 1706, pressing for the felling of the trees, as the spring came on apace, so that if they had not the benefit of them before the sap rose, although their use might serve a turn, yet they would never answer the end of the service; it being a general observation that all timber to be converted for shipping, cut when the sap is in the tree, not only decayed itself, but that which was next to it. 2 pages.

several breaches and damages done to Dover Haven by the late great storms, which were such as seldom happen in the memory of man. The works having been long in a state of decay demanded a thorough and effective repair, in order to the preservation of that important haven, become much more valuable than it ever was, by having been rendered much more useful to the public by the late new works, whereby ships could lie in a basin "water borne," whereas it was before, a dry port; and by means also of the said works the backwater was made so to scour and cleanse the haven and mouth thereof, that whereas often the packet boats had not water to come in, ships now of 500 tons had, since the works were perfected, been received and kept afloat. 100 sail of ships and vessels had already taken sanctuary, and had been preserved from storms and the enemy, which ships would not have found a port between that and the Isle of Wight. The new works had cost above 9,000*l.* Dated 18 Feb. 1706.

The estimate referred to. The amount was 3,370*l.*

Also a plan of the haven. 3 pages, besides the plan.

Report of the Com^rs of Excise to the Lord High Treasurer, laying before him the frauds discovered with some of their officers in the counties of Cambridge and Essex in combination with the maltsters. It was also contrived to enlarge this mischief into the Exchequer, &c. They detail the measures they had taken thereon. They also observe that in parts of the counties of Essex, Cambridge, and Hertford, where the maltsters were not under such combination, they yet by the method of working defrauded the Queen of above 1/3 of the duty, &c. March 22. 65. Report of Lord Halifax to the Lord High Treasurer as to the standards of weights and measures to be sent to the several burghs in Scotland from the standards kept in the receipt of the Exchequer in England. It was necessary that what was contained in a proposal annexed of the deputy chamberlains of the Exchequer should be put in execution with all imaginable expedition. Dated 22 March 1706/7.

The proposal referred to. After describing what the standard weights and measures were, it says:—"The method which hath been used for ages past, when any city or borough hath had occasion for any standards, hath been as follows; first, they have made application to the deputy chamberlains of the said Exchequer, who have recommended them a founder, of whom they have bespoke the several standards wanted, sized as nigh to the standard, before they are brought to the Exchequer, as they can conveniently be, and then they are to be tryed & sized by the said deputy chamberlains, or one of them; they having been most usually two days in despatching one set of standards, after they were adjudged true, either in measure or weight, to a nicety, the said deputy chamberlains give an indenture on stampt vellum made between them, the said deputy chamberlains, on behalf of your Lordship and the chamberlains of the Exchequer of the one part, & the mayor, aldermen, & bailiffs, &c. or other chief magistrate of the said city & burgh, &c. for the time being, witnessing that the said mayor, &c. hath such a day and year had and received of your Lordship, &c. such and such standard weights or measures, to which they sett the seal of the said court of the receipt, for which a very ancient fee hath been constantly paid," &c., viz., 1*l*. 11*s*. 4*d*. divided amongst seven persons, &c.

March 24. 68. Report of the Officers of the Mint in England to the Lord High Treasurer as to what was necessary for the continuance of the mint in Scotland, recommending that whereas by the Act of Parliament the coin was to be of the same standard and value throughout the United Kingdom, and by the indenture of Her Majesty's mint in England, the warden, with the consent of the "general of Her Majesty's mint in Scotland," was commanded to cause to be made two piles of English weights, one for each mint, to be examined and marked in the presence of the officers of Her Majesty's mint in the Tower (which clause they conceived to have been inserted upon an ancient treaty between the two nations), they were of opinion that two new piles of troy weights should be made with the utmost exactness, and examined and marked, and one of them delivered for the use of the mint in Scotland, according to the directions of the indenture.

And whereas by the same indenture there were to be six indented trial pieces of gold and six of silver, viz., four for England and two for Scotland, they were of opinion that new "indented" trial pieces should be made and delivered for the uses specified in the indenture, and that one trial piece of each metal should be delivered to the proper officer, who should covenant with Her Majesty to make the moneys in Scotland, and one of each should be kept either in the treasury of Scotland, according to the indenture, or by an officer of that mint, who should be appointed to examine, check, and prove the making of the moneys there, in weight and fineness, before delivery, as was practised in the mint in England.

They were further of opinion that the money coined in both mints should be of the same sizes and stamp, with some letter or other mark set upon the Scotch money, to distinguish it from the money coined in England, as was lately practised in the country mints. So much of the indenture as contained the rules for coinage should be sent to the mint in Scotland. The officers of the mint in Scotland might send "any of their mint" to learn the practice of the mint in the Tower, and if they desired it, an officer of the English mint might be sent into Scotland to see the rules fully put into execution, and if they should want any engines or other things necessary for coinage they might be provided from the Tower. March 24. 69. Report of M[r] Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer on a letter of the Earl of Ranelagh, representing the irreparable loss which was falling on Cranbourne, that the mischief was already begun, 20 of the old but beautiful trees being cut down, and the persons concerned resolved to despatch the rest without loss of time; that it was true the trees were old, but still growing and making a noble show and shade every summer, their number great, and no young trees could pretend to match them in 50 years; that they would yield a very inconsiderable sum, and that a hundred times that sum could not supply the want of them in that age; that Cranbourne would look like Bagshot Heath, and the neighbours were sensibly afflicted with the loss of their greatest delight, and praying his lordship's pity for old trees ["and for his devoted servant old Ranelagh"]. Mr Wilcox was of opinion that the words in which the grievance was represented seemed to deserve some pity, but if the noble lord had himself taken a view of the several places where the trees were set out, the grievance would not have been great, or the complaint made. Cranbourne would still look like itself, there being not one tree marked within near a mile of it. Mr Wilcox, before setting out the trees, had gone to Cranbourne Lodge to acquaint his lordship, but had not the honor to speak with him (tho' at home) and by the assistance of the keeper of the walks and another of his lordship's keepers, and others, who pitched upon such trees as might very well be spared, he marked them. If the money designed for the poor inhabitants of Porchester were not raised in Cranbourne, he knew not where it could be raised by wood sales. Dated 24 Mar. 1706.

March 25. 70. Report of the Duke of Ormonde to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Judges of the Court of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, Barons of the Exchequer, and other law officers in Ireland, wherein they set forth that they did not suppose they were intended to be within Her Majesty's letter for keeping back the payments six months, and that being obliged to reside in Dublin and live suitably to their stations, they were subject to constant expense, and that others had been exempted from the restriction. The Duke would be glad if the revenue would allow the taking off entirely the restriction. The army was 15 months in arrear and the civil list nine months. There might be sufficient in the treasury to discharge immediately a quarter to each. Leaving it to Her Majesty to gratify the petitioners. Dated, Whitehall, 25 March 1707.

which contained very moving instances for encouraging the same, and for continuing Mr. Crumelin's patent by an addition of six years, whereby he would be enabled to remove to the south of Ireland to instruct them in that manufacture. It was what the people on that side were very intent upon. The [English] Com^rs of Customs appeared only to have consulted the merchants concerned in the Hamborough trade, and to be against all manner of encouragement of the linen manufacture in Ireland, but he hoped it would have no effect to oppose a national interest and concern, wherein both Houses of Parliament on this side had so heartily concurred, and which had been made an equivalent for the very great loss that kingdom had sustained by taking away the woollen manufacture. Dated Whitehall, 25 March 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 26^th Mar. 1707. March 25. 73. Report of M^r William Blathwayt to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Col. Thomas Whetham in behalf of Mary Johnson, widow and relict of Major John Johnson, late governor of Nevis, and for some time commander-in-chief of all the Leeward Islands, praying payment of his salary. The report shows what was due to him as lieut.-governor of Nevis, as well as for the chief governorship of the Leeward Islands, the latter being from 4 Dec. 1704, being the day of the death of Sir William Matthew, to the 14^th of July 1706, the day of the arrival of Col. Parks the succeeding governor. If Her Majesty did not think fit to allow him the salary in his double capacity, there would be an abatement of 321*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.*; but this was the first case of this nature that had happened since the appointment of salaries to the lieutenant-governors. As a motive to obtain those allowances in so favourable a manner, the petitioner alleged the barbarous murder of Major Johnson in the execution of his duty, while those islands were invaded by the French. By his unfortunate death his affairs were left in the utmost distraction. Dated 25 March 1707.

March 26. 77. Letter from Lord Cornbury to the Lord High Treasurer. In obedience to his Lordship's letter he had restored Mr Byerley. Relates other proceedings upon his restoration. In suspending Mr Byerley he (Ld Cornbury) had not the least thought of encroaching upon his Lordship's authority, or of doing anything to displease him. He thought he was only acting in accordance with the 34th clause of Her Majesty's instructions. He should for the future observe the method prescribed by the Lord High Treasurer, only he begged for directions as to what method he should take with the collector, if he would not pay the warrants directed to him by his Lordship (Lord Cornbury) in council; and this favour he begged because when the collector was there before, he would pay nobody but whom he pleased. March 27. 78. Report of the Comrs of Excise to the Lord High Treasurer, on the management of the revenue of the excise in Scotland. As that revenue had hitherto been let to farm, and collected throughout that kingdom by composition, without guaging to ascertain the quantities of excisable liquors, it would be too great a work to put the whole kingdom under the same management as that of England; and if they sent the requisite number of officers from England (if they could be found) it might create some uneasiness. They thought at first it might be advisable to put the city of Edinburgh, and some other of the most populous and trading towns in Scotland, under the methods practised in England, and that they might collect the remainder by composition. This method was practised in England where victuallers lived too remote from any officers, and the expense would exceed the duty. When matters were more settled the method of surveying and gauging might be enlarged. They proposed that a commission should be established in Scotland to constitute officers for the duties of excise, also certain officers should be sent from England to instruct persons of the Scotch nation, and that books of the laws of excise and instructions should be sent. The salaries in Scotland might be less than those in England, as provisions were cheaper, the same being the case in Ireland. The judicial part of the revenue would be in the justices of the peace, and, not knowing whether there were any justices of the peace in Scotland, they were of opinion that justices of the peace ought to be appointed throughout that kingdom, if not already appointed. Dated 27 March 1707.

March 28. 79. Report of Mr Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer on the letters of Mr Norton, warden of "Bier" Forest, &c., as to the right of the Earl of Scarborough to three brace of bucks yearly out of the forest. The grant "does in some measure eclipse the power and command of the warden, which seems to be grievous to him." Also as to felling 300 trees for the navy. They would be worth at least 2,500*l.* Dated 28 March 1707.

Two letters of Mr Richard Norton, and a memorial which answers Mr Wilcox's report of 5 Feb. 1706–7, clause by clause, as to the de-afforesting the Forest of Bere. March 31. 83. Report of Mr James Mountague to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the directors of Greenwich Hospital, touching a demand of 12*d.* per ton by the islanders of Portland, and 6*d.* per ton by the Comrs for building St Paul's church, for all stone shipped from thence for the use of the hospital; also upon Sir Christopher Wren's memorial touching a liberty taken by the quarrymen of Portland to open new quarries and dig and carry off stone at pleasure, which he represents to be to the prejudice of the quarries, and in opposition to the rights of the crown. The whole island, he (Mr Mountague) was informed, was one entire manor, belonging to the Queen in right of the crown.

The whole island was looked upon as one continued quarry of stone which could not be wrought out in many ages. Time out of mind a duty of 12*d.* per ton had been paid for stone dug and exported out of the commons in the said isle; one moiety had usually been paid to the King or Queen, as lord of the manor; the other to the profit of the inhabitants. He did not find any alteration of this ancient usage until 1665, when King Charles II. granted to the inhabitants of the island for every ton dug within the common of the island (except such as should be taken for the use of the crown) 12*d.* per ton, 3*d.* of which should go to the crown and 9*d.* to the inhabitants. This grant was registered on the Court Rolls, and though he could not say it was binding in law, yet the directions therein had been constantly complied with ever since. And though Sir Christopher Wren, the Surveyor of Works, had sent directions for digging great quantities of stone within the commons, for building the cathedral of St. Paul's, Chelsey College, and several churches in London, yet in regard it was not expressed that the stone was ordered to be dug for the immediate service of the crown, the inhabitants had all along received the 9*d.* per ton to their own benefit, and answered the other 3*d.* to the receiver of Dorsetshire for the use of the crown. And in his (Mr Mountague's) opinion there was reason for Her Majesty to continue the like payment for the stone which should be dug out of the common, for the inhabitants had an ancient usage to countenance their presensions to a moiety of the 12*d.*, which had time out of mind been paid for every ton of stone that had been dug there, and the other 3*d.* was said to have been granted to them in consideration of the great damage done to the herbage on the common, where the inhabitants had a right to feed their cattle, and that damage, in all probability, would continue as long as stone was suffered to be dug on those commons. He did not conceive Sir Chr. Wren could order the stone that was used in buildings not appertaining to the crown to be dug and exported duty free. The 6*d.* per ton required by the Comrs of St Paul's was not demanded, unless the exporters made use of the piers and cranes which belonged to the Comrs. The inhabitants were willing to pay this. If the stone were dug in a manner prejudicial to the inheritance of the crown, it must be determined by a trial, but if the representation of the inhabitants were correct, it might be more for Her Majesty's service to permit them to dig the stone as usual and receive the 9*d.* a ton. April 9. 90. Report of the Duke of Ormonde to the Lord High Treasurer, upon a letter of the archbishops and bishops of Ireland, enclosing a memorial to Her Majesty, wherein they desired that the first fruits, which, according to the report of the Com^rs^ of the Revenue, did not exceed 450*l.* per ann., might be applied to the purchase of impropriations and glebes for the augmentation of small livings. They further desired that the tax of the twentieth part, amounting to 563*l.* per ann., might be wholly remitted to the clergy. The crown received out of ecclesiastical livings by crown rents, quit rents, and port-corn, near 2,000*l.* per ann. more than was desired to be remitted. The matter had been first moved upon occasion of exempting flax land from tithes in an Act passed the last session in the Irish parliament. He was of opinion the favour would be well bestowed. VOL. CII. 1707. MAY—SEPTEMBER.

May 1. 1. Letter of the Earl of Glasgow, without address, commencing "My dear Lord," making various propositions for carrying out the new regulations for the collection of the customs and excise the same in Scotland as in England. It would be a great task, and a work of time, to put the brewing under guaging and survey. It would take at least a month to guage the brewing vessels, &c. in Edinborough. The same method should be pursued in Glasgow, Dundee, and other places. There would be an absolute necessity for more guagers, and for compositions to be made for mountainous, wide, and hilly bounds, where brewing houses were not frequent. The life of the management of the customs was to have knowing, faithful, and diligent waite rs, and to allow them salaries whereon to do their duty, and they had a parcel of very insufficient waiters in that part of Britain. If it would not offend his country he feared they must be obliged to the southern part of Britain in the beginning to send a good number of waiters for the customs and guagers for the excise. Mr Norman, Mr Arthur, and Mr Broughtoun were truly intelligent in the business of the customs, and Mr Guy was a very fit person to give directions as to the excise. They had ordered Mr Norman to attend at Leith, Mr Arthur at Kirkaldy, Mr Broughtoun at Barrowstounness, and Mr Sewell at Port Glasgow. Mr Norman was a very well qualified gentleman to be Controller General of the Customs. Dated Edinborough, 1 May 1707. 3¼ pages, quarto.

There were also the two clauses sent over from England. Dated Dublin Castle, 13 May 1707. 2 pages, quarto.

May 23. 29. Letter from Mr J. Dawson to Mr Southwell in answer to objections to several clauses in the draft of the Queen's letter lately transmitted from Ireland for removing the linen manufacture to Kilkenny. (1). The 500*l*. to Mr Cromelin for his removal was because some of the trustees desired this manufacture should rather be set up at Cootehill, and were not very easy at its going to Kilkenny, and it would put difficulties in Cromelin's way. (2.) The 500*l*. per annum to him was for his salary of 200*l*., two assistants at 40*l*. each, for erecting 40 looms, and increasing them to 60, &c. (3.) Nobody could object to the Bishop of Ossory being inserted in the patent. (4.) The 200*l*. a year reserved for the colony settled at Lisburn must be continued to them during the five years of the present patent; and tho' the town were burnt the people remained, and many intended to settle again in or near Lisburn, and for the remaining seven years it would be subject to the direction of the trustees. (5.) Both patents provided for three assistants. Two were in the west, and there was a necessity for one in the north. (6.) The choice of a minister was left by King William wholly to the election of Mr Cromelin and partners, but it might be altered: "tho' as these Protestants are kind of Presbyterians, it would please them most to choose their own teacher." (7.) The money had hitherto been paid to Mr Cromelin to pay the demands of this manufacture, which he had performed to the satisfaction of all parties, but the trustees had power to overhaul and give orders. The writer hoped these answers would be satisfactory to the several objections, that what was designed for their good might be despatched. Dated Dublin Castle, 23 May 1707.

May 28. 35. Report of Sir Chr. Wren to the Lord [High Treasurer] as to the enlargement of the House of Commons. He had consulted with the Speaker, and he was of opinion that if the side galleries were made broader to contain two rows of seats instead of one, it would suffice. This might be done by the end of July for 270*l.* Dated 28 May 1707.

[? About May 29.] 36. Petition of Anne Grosvenor, widow and relict of Lieut. John Grosvenor, to the Lord High Treasurer, praying for Her Majesty's bounty. Her husband was slain at the siege of Barcelona, her three brothers and her father-in-law were killed in the service.

June 2. 39. Letter of Robert Liv[ingstone] to Mr Lowndes. He[ights] of have given Mr Lowndes an account of affairs when he ar[ri]ved to New York, but was seized with a pain in his side, a [fever] which had been very mortal there. Most people were ——— uneasy, under "this gentleman's administration." His act[ions] 50. They unaccountable that they were not possible to be bel[ieved]

1707. VOL. CII.

Assembly, who had hitherto been at variance with him, were allowed by an order from home to have their own treasurer, and had passed some Acts for levying money, for fortifying the city of New York, and the charge of the Indians at Albany. It was alleged there was no account received of the money formerly given. The province was much in debt, nobody paid, the revenue swallowed up. When the revenue expired next May, twelvemonths, the Assembly would not revive it. 'Twas said he was wholly addicted to pleasure, and enriching himself with strange and unheard of methods, having some few creatures about him whose counsel he pursued, to the great grief of the principal inhabitants. His dressing himself in women's clothes was so unaccountable that if hundred[s] of spectators did not daily see him it would be incredible. After dinner till 12 at night was spent at the bottle. The debts of the province were so much augmented that 10 years' revenue, if settled, would not clear them, and his personal debts were computed at 6,400*l.* Certain warrants "launched out for the frontiers at Albany" had been returned upon the writer, &c. The Assembly of the Jerseys and he (the governor) were quite to pieces, they having given in a remonstrance of their grievances which he had answered. He (the writer) would send both as soon as printed. Many wished he (the governor) were not so nearly related to our gracious Sovereign, but they hoped God would send a deliverance. Her Majesty had confirmed his (the writer's) office of town clerk and secretary for Indian affairs, with a salary of 100*l.* per ann., which commission he presented to his L^p^ in council, who detained it from him, and except he should get an order from Her Majesty or the L^d^ Treasurer for his salary out of the quit rents he never expected to see a farthing. The secretary of the province told the writer that he had 22 warrants by him then, and could not get a penny. He (the writer) had put in his son as deputy in his absence. The Indians were in a declining condition. The nation called Skachkook Indians, which lay 24 miles above Albany, were quite gone, and that part of the country left bare, exposed to the insults of the enemy. But the French Indians and our Indians desired they might live peaceably together, notwithstanding any rupture in Europe, and this had hitherto been the case, and "'twere to be wished y^t^ New England and y^e^ . . . . . Indians had the same agreement."

Colonel Dudley had sent a party of 1,400 men to take Port Royall from the French. They longed to hear what success he had in the expedition. As for the five nations of Indians, westward, the French had got ground within this three or four years, and had priests in some of their castles, and he saw no means used to get
h. them removed, the consequence whereof would be very disadvantageous to this government. In fine our trade decayed, house rents fell, our vessels were taken, and everything went behind hand, and a visible judgment appeared since "this gent" came amongst them.
May 1. They had a poor dispirited people, a mixture of English, Dutch, and French, that lived in the province, and if never so much oppressed dared not complain, because they were not unanimous, and did not stick to one another. So that if a governor were not a man of honour and probity, he could oppress the people when he pleased. He had but to strike in with one party, and they assisted him to destroy the other. Many deserted the province and went to the neighbouring colonies, but he understood the price of land of the Jerseys, where many removed to, was considerably fallen since this gentleman became their governor.

He asks that the L^d Treasurer might be put in mind of his three and a half years arrears of salary as secretary of the Indian affairs.

He came there last week to see his eldest son, who married the governor's daughter of that colony, and took the opportunity to write viâ Boston, since it was alleged letters were intercepted at New York. He [the governor] regarded no orders from court. One Captain Budge had his ship and lading condemned, and on appeal had an order from the Queen to have them restored, but he took no more notice of the order than if it had been waste paper, and sent the man back without a farthing. It was "admired" by everybody that he suffered M^r Bryerly to act as collector, nevertheless he could not get the books, which his minion Fauconier still kept. He (the writer) designed to go to his abode at Albany this week, and would send an account of the Governor's proceedings with the Assembly, who were to sit on last Friday. Dated New London, in Connecticut colony, in New England, 2 June 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 31 Oct. 1707 to L^d Treas^r." 3 pages.

June 2. 40. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer as to what was proper to be done for setting on foot with all convenient speed the coinage in the Mint at Edinburgh, and for trying the pix of that mint before Her Majesty's Council of Scotland. They recommend that there should be made by a jury of goldsmiths seven indented trial pieces of crown gold, and seven of standard silver; two of each metal to be kept in the two Treasuries, to try the pixes of the two mints; two of each of the wardens of the two mints to try the moneys before delivery, and to decide questions between the master and importer about the fineness of bullion; two of each for the masters of the two mints to make the moneys by, and one of each for the Wardens and Company of Goldsmiths, to try their plate and other manufactures of gold and silver. Also that a pile of standard troy weights be made by the Deputy Chamberlains of the Exchequer for the Treasury of Scotland; and two other piles* by the warden of this mint, in the presence of the other officers thereof, in such manner that the smaller weights be in proportion to the greater, as the indenture of the Mint directs; and that all these piles be printed like the weights sent to the corporations, and one of the two piles be delivered to his Lordship's order, for the Mint in Scotland.

* There is a warrant for these entered in the North Britain Book, vol. 1, p. 50. They were to be printed "with a rose crown'd and thistle crown'd."

They make various other recommendations; amongst which that the graver should have a warrant to make puncheons and dies for coining the money, of the very same form with the moneys coined in the Tower, and should use such master puncheons as should be sent him from the Tower for making the moneys of both mints perfectly alike, until the puncheons made by himself should be approved by the officers of that mint, and to set the letter E (the first letter of the name of the city of Edinburgh), under Her Majesty's effigies, that the moneys of the two mints might be distinguished. Dated 2 June 1707.

Minuted:—"Approved, & orders to be prepared accordingly." 2 pages.

[? About June 2.] 41. Memorial of the owners and freighters of the ship "Worcester," seized and condemned in Scotland. They prayed for a warrant on the Prize Office for 27,971*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*, or to be heard by counsel.

Minuted:—"2^{d} June 1707. Read, and the pet^{rs} to attend my Lord his next sitting for an answer. The owners being here are now called in. A privy seal authorizing my Lord, out of her Ma^{ts} share of prizes, to give satisfaction according to the address."

June 4. 42. Letter from M^{r} H. S^{t} John to M^{r} Lowndes, sending a warrant for counter signature by the L^{d} High Treasurer, appointing Lieut. Stapylton to be second major of Chelsea Hospital, in consideration of his long services in the army, and doing away with the office of steward there. Dated Whitehall, 4 June 1707. 2 pages, quarto.

[? About June 6.] 43. Copy of letter docquetted:—"Copy letter sent to the Earl of Glasgow concerning the coast coquet sent to his Lord^{p} the 6th June 1707." There was a great disposition in Her Majesty and in all her servants here to be favourable to the Scots merchants. As to what the Com^{rs} of the Customs here had written in their letter to Scotland, they acted beyond their sphere, &c.

P.S.—The commission of the equivalent was adjusted, and had passed the great seal of Britain. 1 page.

[? About June 6.] 44. Memorial of the R^{t} Hon. the Countess Dowager of Winchelsea to the Lord High Treasurer, as to her rights in a house forming part of Richmond Palace, which one M^{r} Alexander Cutting, who had bought the adjoining property, was contesting with her, having done great spoil upon it and rendered it useless; asking his L^{p} to grant satisfaction for her lease, or for other relief.

Minuted:—"Read y^{e} 6th of June 1707. My Lord leaves y^{e} matter between y^{e} Countess & M^{r} Cutting to be determined at law." 3 pages.

June 7. 45. Letter from Lord Halifax to M^{r} Lowndes, as to what was done about the new wine gallon and the weights and measures for Scotland. The deputy chamberlains, who had the chief care thereof, had long since bespoken the wine gallon of the founder, but he had not finished it. There were "sized & sealed":—

21 sets of standard ells and yards.
21 sets of standard troy weights.
21 sets of standard averdupois weights, cell fashion.
21 sets of standard flat weights, averdupois.
5 bushels, 5 gallons, 5 quarts, and 5 pint measures, which were all that were finished by the founder, who promised to complete next week the 21 sets then in the Exchequer. The deputy chamberlains could not fill up the indentures for each set until they had a list of the places, &c. in Scotland to which they were to be sent, although Mr Peter Le Neve, one of the deputy chamberlains, had applied himself to the Earl of Marr, one of the Secretaries of State for Scotland, and to Sir David Nairne for the same. Dated Exchequer, 7 June 1707. 1 page.

June 9. 46. Report of Mr Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer upon the petition of Edward Progers, Esq., as to his cravings for the taxes. They were such as had usually been allowed. Certain of the taxes were assessed on lands lying in Her Majesty's park [at Hampton Court], which according to the Attorney General's opinion were not liable to assessment, but the taxes were assessed on the petitioner as ranger. Dated 9 June 1707.

Minuted:—"Read ye 16th of June 1707. My Ld takes notice that he is charged for his office as ranger & not taxed for ye Queen's lands, & tho' his Lop is pleased to allow it for ye present, yet ye petr must appeal to ye comrs for ye future if he thinks he is overrated for his office."

June 12. 48. Memorial of Captain John Writtle to the Lord High Treasurer as to the ill practices used from Ireland in supplying France with victuals, wool, hides, and tallow, for the support of their army and shipping, carried on under the notion of going for Ostend, but really running into Dunkirk. As he had performed eminent services in the late reign, tending to the discovery of the assassination plot, and breaking the neck of the transportation of wool out of Rumney Marsh, he doubted not he should bring the offenders to justice from Ireland. Asking for encouragement. Dated 12 June 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 13 June 1707. My Lord will be ready to encourage him if he will prosecute the persons to conviction."

[? About June 16.] 50. Petition of Thomas, Earl of Stamford, William Earl of Yarmouth, John Down, Esq., and John Kemp, Assay Master to the Queen. They had discovered several valuable mines, minerals, and ores, and sought to have Her Majesty's grant to them as a body politic or corporate for 21 years of such mines and minerals or the preemption thereof as had not been already granted, reserving 1/12th of the profits to the Queen.

[About June 16.] 51. Petition of Matthew Butterwick to the Lord High Treasurer, as to his claim for saving certain chests of the Queen's money saved by him from a prize ship called the "George," brigantine, charging M^r Proudfoot, Agent for Prizes in the Mediterranean, with fraud.

June 19. 52. Report of Robert Rochford to the Lords Justices of Ireland on the petition of Lieut.-Col. Callaghan McCallaghan, who was page to Callaghan, late Earl of Clancarty. The latter on his death had settled 20*l.* a year by way of a rent charge on the petitioner and lands called Laghane, part of his estate, for three lives, and for the petitioner's life, worth 100*l.* a year to the petitioner, which he possessed until the late war, when they were seized by the attainder of the Earl of Clancarty, &c. The petitioner had a good right to receive 20*l.* a year during life out of the lands mentioned in the decree of the late trustees for forfeited estates, and during the time the estate of the Earl of Clancarty was in possession of Lord Woodstock the petitioner must claim from him, but from the time of the seizure he had no remedy but an application to Her Majesty. Dated 19 June 1707. 4 pages.

June 19. 53. Letter of the Officers of Ordnance to the Lord High Treasurer. The secretary to the East India Company had let them know that they expected the balance of their account and interest thereon, and until they were paid for the "petre" delivered, and for the 500 tons then demanded, the Company would not supply it, altho' it would be a great advantage to Her Majesty's service, as the powder makers were standing still and the powder was very low. June 19. 54. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer. They could not doubt but that many such frauds as were detailed in the examination taken before the committee of Parliament had been practised. They were of opinion that unless the discovery were duly prosecuted and strictly punished, it would have been better for the revenue that no examination had been taken, because it might serve to invite many others to the practice of like frauds by pointing out the method of executing them, rather than to deter anyone by the example. For preventing such fraudulent practices for the future they propose five stricter regulations. Dated 19 June 1707.

Also the depositions in the examination referred to.

Minuted:—"Read 20^th June 1707. June 21. 55. Letter from M^r Edward Southwell to M^r Lowndes. In March last the Duke of Ormonde laid a memorial before the L^d Treasurer for continuing M^r Cromelin's patent in Ireland for six years longer, to encourage the linen manufacture, and to bring it into the southern parts of that kingdom. The memorial was approved of. The writer had received a draft of a letter for that intention, which he desired might be laid before the Lord High Treasurer. He had drawn out a particular wherein it differed from the last letter, with the reasons as certified by Sir Richard Cox, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland. 500*l.* was promised to M^r Cromelin to defray his charges for removing his looms and families into the south. It was thought very moderate by the trustees, but some were desirous to draw away the manufacture to several particular places, whereas Kilkenny was the centre of the south parts and the fittest place in every respect. It had now become the more necessary since the town of Lisburn, where they chiefly settled, was burnt. That sum was to be given him out of the fund of 1,180*l.* per ann. Dated Spring Garden, 21 June 1707.

June 24. 57. Memorial of Sir Isaac Newton to the Lord High Treasurer, laying before his lordship the want of clerks for the mint in Scotland. Their "rating and standarding" and book-keeping differed from ours and must be set right. None of their chief officers had acquainted themselves with our practice. He had spoken with D^r Gregory, professor of astronomy at Oxford, and with one of the clerks of the mint in the Tower, about going to Edinburgh to instruct their officers and clerk, and assist them till Michaelmas. A suitable recompense should be appointed them. The dies and puncheons were also to be sent and the prices of these should be settled. Dated 24 June 1707. (Holograph.)

June 27. 61. Report of the Comrs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, on an extract of a letter from Mr Lionel Norman, one of the Comrs at Edinburgh. There was no law which appointed a registering of wool shorn on any part of the coast in North or South Britain, except in Kent and Sussex, and so there was no need for a proclamation. The landwaiters they had proposed might act as searchers, &c. If the collectors, &c. were established at certain salaries, without fee or reward from the merchants, it would highly tend to the interest of the revenue. Payment of fees had been found to create too dangerous an intimacy between them. It was to be apprehended that bribes might be frequently taken under colour of fees. Dated 27 June 1707.

July 9. 64. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Ld High Treasurer on the memorial of Mr William Drummond, Warden of the Mint in Scotland, relating to the speedy setting the mint there to work. They propose that Dr David Gregory be sent to oversee the mint there, and to direct all the officers according to the methods of the mint in England, with three months' allowance, "and in lieu of all charges, 250*l.*;" that Mr Richard Morgan, clerk to the Master and Worker here, be sent to instruct and assist the clerks there, in rating, standarding, and book-keeping, with an allowance of 60*l.* for the same time, and for all charges, and if engaged longer 5*l.* per month to be paid him. The moneyers had recommended three of their company to be sent, viz., Thomas Seabrook, Henry Haley, and Richard Collard, to draw the bars at the mill, neale and cut the pieces, flatten, size, blanch, and coin the money, and bear the charge of all the waste, with an allowance of 9*d.* per pound weight, and 16*l.* each for their journeys, and whenever 1,000 pounds weight was not coined in a week, they should be allowed 3*s.* a day each in addition, and the tools, &c. should be furnished them. On discoursing with the smith and graver, they found that the Mint in Scotland might be furnished from hence with dies and puncheons at the rates they therein specify. July 13. 70. Letter from Lord Roxburghe to the Lord [? High Treasurer], the object of which, in the absence of the enclosures which accompanied it, is not apparent. It had something to do with the interests of Scotch merchants. Dated London, 13 July 1707. 1 page, quarto.

July 15. 71. Report of the Com[rs] of Excise (Scotland) to the Lord High Treasurer, laying before him a state of the management of the revenue under their care. At their first sitting (9[th] of June), they found six supervisors and 21 officers, sent from England, who had not made such progress in gauging the utensils as might have been expected had they not met with some opposition, but they (the Com[rs]) had encouraged them, and the officers used more diligence in finishing the work and perfecting "inch'd-table books." The town and precincts were to be surveyed by 11 officers. They ordered gauges by way of comparison with the charges made by the old officers, but they thought it not proper to make charges until the most considerable towns were put under survey.

The ministry had ordered a battalion of foot to march to Glasgow to prevent any insult that might happen to the [excise] officers there.

The people, according to the custom of the country, were not bound by any law until published at the market cross. They had drawn up a scheme of duties and penalties for a proclamation, which, by order of the Privy Council, had been printed and published.

They had sent letters to the sub-farmers, collectors, &c. to encourage the people to continue brewing until they (the collectors), had further directions.

They formed and caused to be printed bonds, commissions, instructions, tables, and all other books necessary.

They settled their collectors, 15 in number, of that country, who they found would be most acceptable to the victuallers, and would be of more service to the revenue, being acquainted with the humours of the people and state of the country. These were instructed by a supervisor, who had been a collector in England. They had done the same by the gaugers.

The islands of Lewis, Zetland, and several others, lay so far off at sea, that the inland collectors could not undertake to collect them, there being no passage from the main to them in the winter. It would be best to depute one substantial inhabitant in each island, with reasonable poundage as a collector, to compound with the victuallers. Not having officers enough for the seaport towns, they laid a request before the Com^rs of Customs to direct their officers to observe such directions as they (the Com^rs of Excise) should give, as to foreign exciseable liquors, and they had promised compliance.

They (the Com^rs of Excise) could not get money enough for the necessary charges, and should find a difficulty in collecting until justices of the peace were appointed.

There was very little ale brewed that would be charged more than 2*s.* a barrel, and the small drink was of so mean a quality that it was sold by the brewers for less than the duty, and a great deal given away amongst the poor people, who, when once they were disappointed of that supply, ('twas feared) would be very tumultuous.

They had appointed one M^r Boyle, a near relation of the Earl of Glasgow, as cashier at 200*l.* per ann. for himself and clerks. A scale of other salaries proposed follows. Dated Excise Office, Edinburgh, 15 July 1707. 4 pages.

A warrant for the payment is entered in the "Irish Book," vol. 6, p. 2. 1 page.

July 20. 74. Copy of a letter from Sir J. Cope to M^r Ince. Writing for his party, he says:—

If their undertaking at Edinburgh were as smooth as the roads they might flatter themselves with success. [They were engaged in some financial undertaking at Edinburgh, which was supported by the Bank.] They thought it advisable that the officers who had accompanied them should go on to Edinburgh, for since it was necessary to double the guard to Berwick, it was much more so to continue their march to Edinburgh. They had dined with the Bishop. Major Wyvell was very hearty for the public service, but 1707. had received no orders for exchanging Exchequer bills, and seemed wholly a stranger to them, but would be ready with 20,000*l.* a fortnight after Michaelmas, at Newcastle, if he had the L[d] Treasurer's orders, &c. Dated York, July 20, 1707. 2 pages.

July 22. 75. Representation of the Com[rs] of Excise (Scotland) to the Lord [High Treasurer]. The troops had marched to Glasgow, and they had sent sufficient officers to put the town under survey. M[r] "Montgomire," one of their number, would meet them there, who by his interest they hoped would so influence the inhabitants as to make the new method appear more reasonable to them than they imagine.

They had sent officers to bring Dundee, Aberdeen, Sterling, and Dumfries under survey. They had sent circulars for the collections to begin on 1 August for the months of May, June, and July. Their own collectors were to attend the sub-tax men or collectors to become acquainted with the victuallers, &c. Their officers began the survey in this city yesterday. There were 92 distillers, most of them brewers, who set up stills for the distillation of their own wash and dregs only, which was generally so weak that it would answer very little more than half the charge which by law they were obliged to make. Dated Edinburgh 22 July 1707. 1½ pages.

July 22. 76. Representation of Sir Robert Dixon, one of the Com[rs] of Customs of North Britain, of the frauds practised at Glasgow, Greenock, and other places in running wines and brandies, &c., suggesting that Sir John Shaw should be ordered to cruize with his yacht on the river Clyde and the Highland coast. Dated Custom House, Edinb[r], 22 July 1707. 2 pages.

July 25. 77. Letter from Sir John Cope, similar to the one of the 20th, giving further details of their proceedings at Newcastle. They could not expect above 30,000*l.*, and they could not come at this without orders to exchange the same for Exchequer bills. For their further comfort, they were told that taking away such a sum would be a very great prejudice to the trade of the place, and very unwillingly parted with, for money was grown scarcer than ever it was known. Dated Newcastle, 25 July 1707. 1½ pages.

[About July 28.] 78. Petition of the clothiers of Her Majesty's forces in Flanders, and of those on the Portugal establishment, to the Lord High Treasurer, for payment to them of the off-reckonings. Signed.

Minuted:—"28 July 1707. M[r] Brydges to make a demand." 1 page.

July 28. 79. Report of the Auditors of Imprest to the Lord High Treasurer, of the states of the various accounts under their control. Signed, E. Harley and A. Maynwaring. Dated 28 July 1707. 8½ pages.

July 29. 80. Report from the Com[rs] of Excise (Scotland), to the L[d] [High Treasurer]. Their officers had made vouchers from the last week's survey, which answered as well as they could expect, considering the opposition of the people.

On Thursday last at Leith, one of their officers on his survey was pursued and assaulted by a great number of women and boys. A brewer, to whom he fled, demanded the cause of this rude treatment. They answered that he was an Englishman, and they would have his blood. A guard was sent for, and he was conducted safely to his lodgings, but two of the soldiers were rudely handled. They were obliged to keep firing most part of the way, but it being only blank shot, the mob continued stoning them until they retired to the main guard. The Lord Chancellor assured them that justice should be done. They (the Com^rs) had offered a reward of 40*s.* each for the two chief instruments of this rising and discord. Dated Edinburgh, 29 July 1707. 1½ pages.

August 1. 81. Letter from the Lord Lieu^t of Ireland to the L^d High Treasurer, as to overpayments on concordatum and military contingencies. Dated Dublin Castle, 1 August 1707. 1 page.

August 5. 82. Report of the Surveyor General (Travers) to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Richard Goodrick, Esq^re, for a lease of 50 years of a tenement at Richmond in Surrey, called "the Fryers," late in lease to John Lauze, gent., advising the grant of the same. Dated 5 August 1707.

On the back is his Lordship's warrant for the same.

Also the petition. 5 pages.

August 6. 83. Letter of the Lord Lieut. of Ireland to the L^d High Treasurer. M^r Lewis Crommelin had represented to him that the trustees of the linen manufacture had some time since proposed, in order to make that manufacture more general and extensive, to remove him and part of his colony from the north to Kilkenny, as the most convenient and central place to diffuse the same to the provinces of Munster, Leinster, and Connaught, and for the charge thereof, that his patent should be enlarged to twelve years as there was no money in the bank to defray the expense. He (the L^d Lieut.) was informed that the Duke of Ormonde had laid this representation before his L^p (the Lord High Treasurer), with a draft of a letter for Her Majesty's signature, but no further progress had been made, and M^r Crommelin had again applied to him (the L^d Lieut), and he was of opinion that if the request were complied with it would contribute very much to the enlargement of the manufacture, and be a general good to that kingdom; and there was a further reason for the grant, viz., that the whole town of Lisburn, where the French colony was settled, for carrying on the manufacture, was lately destroyed by an accidental fire, and they had not provided themselves with habitations, in expectation of Her Majesty's pleasure for their removal to Kilkenny. Dated Dublin Castle, 6 August 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 10^th Aug. 1707. Order'd." 2 pages.

August 7. 84. Representation of the Com^rs of Excise (Scotland) to the L^d High Treasurer. The persons concerned amongst the mob at Leith, on giving bail, were dismissed. Mr Montgomerie had returned from Glasgow, and left the town very well disposed to their officers. The magistrates would protect them. They had taken such care to recommend the officers they had sent to Aberdeen, Dundee, Stirling, and Dumfries, that hitherto they had gone on cheerfully, assisted by the magistrates. The business did not go on so smoothly at Edinburgh. A mob went round the town and extinguished the fires of the brewers at the time they had a meeting with the principal brewers to give an answer to their complaint. They enclosed both answer and complaint. They had the greatest difficulty to keep their dispirited officers in their business. Each had one of that country with him to prevent the abuses they daily met with. They make a proposition as to brewer's wash and "tilts," and low wines and spirits drawn therefrom, which they thought would entirely remove the great uneasiness. Dated Edinburgh, 7 August 1707.

The "complaint" (printed) and "answer" referred to. 4 pages.

August 8. 85. Letter from the Comrs of the Navy to William Lowndes, Esq., respecting the supply of tar, hemp, &c., from the plantations. The preservation of masts in New England (and especially great ones), from spoil and waste was very necessary, and the proper business of the surveyor of woods. They did not think it would be for the service of the navy to employ him in buying and sending over tar or other stores by commission. Dated 8 Aug. 1707.

Enclosed is a copy of a report they had sent to the Comrs of Trade and Plantations on this subject. 5 pages.

August 8. 86. "Copy of Sir John Cope's lr̃e to Mr Ince, secretary of ye bank, and of the Comrs [of the "Equivalent's"] lr̃e to Mr Maddock, cashier of the bank." 50,000*l.* in specie would be required to be sent with all expedition for facilitating the currency of the Exchequer bills, which were vigorously attacked from all sides, particularly from the malice of their enemies. Dated Edinburgh, 8 Aug. 1707. 3 pages.

August 9. 87. "Copy of Mr Castle's letter from Barcelona, relating to the stores of clothing, &c." He transported by Lord Galway's orders, from Tortosa to Valentia, the stores in the former place at the beginning of April, a few days after they received the news of being beaten at Almanza. Hearing that the Lord Galway was come to Alicera, five leagues from Valentia, he waited on his Lordship, who gave him a letter to the Viceroy of Valentia to assist with boats, &c., to transport stores to Tortosa. The Viceroy's answer was, "'twould be better the stores should be sacrificed than the people terrified." The enemy was suddenly expected at Valentia, and all things were in the utmost confusion, and he (the writer) posted to the seaside and hired four barques to transport the same, and procured waggons to transport them from Valentia to the seaside. He had an interview with Sir Geo. Byng about the same, the fleet then riding before Valentia. Relates other particulars of the stores, some of which were landed at Denia, "& the boats made use of for the service of that garrison during the siege, which the enemy lately raised with a very considerable loss." He had given Lord Galway and Major Gen[l] Stanhope an account of these matters, and had sent to Major Percival, an Englishman and governor of the castle of Denia, as to these stores. Sends an account to whom the "5,000 Spanish clothing" and accoutrements had been delivered, &c. Dated Barcelona, 9 Aug. 1707. 3 pages.

August 10. 88. Memoranda of two sums due to M[r] Cole, consul at Algiers, to the 10[th] of Aug. 1707.

Minuted:—"Order'd. Make a state of the arrears due to M[r] Alex[r] Stanhop, decēd." ½ page.

August. 12. 89. Letter from Lord Coningsby, unaddressed [but perhaps to M[r] Lowndes]. They had almost finished the sessions there, and he hoped to the satisfaction of all who wished them well on the other side the water. He hoped all that was desired in the enclosed papers would be thought reasonable, and that they would be despatched. Dated 12 Aug. 1707.

The papers alluded to are (1) A report of the L[d] Chief Baron and two other Barons of the Exchequer (Ireland). (2) A letter of the Lords Justices of Ireland; and (3) A petition of Joseph Nuttall for allowance of 1,078*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* stolen out of the Receipt Office. 4 pages, 2 halves.

August 12. 90. Report of the Com[rs] of Chelsea Hospital to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of M[r] Henry Powell, late steward of the hospital, for a pension on the abolition of his office. Dated Royal Hospital, 12 Aug. 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 9[th] Sep[r] 1707. The Com[rs] are to explain what allowance they would have made to the pet[r], and out of what the same should come."

The petition. 2 pages.

August 14. 91. Report of the Postmasters General to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of M[r] Dummer, which was much to the same effect as another on which they had reported on 2 April, as to the state of his West India contract. They then reported that it was about 5,000*l.* deficient, and if M[r] Dummer were rigourously tied up to perform his contract, it would very much tend to ruin him, &c. M[r] Dummer had been paid up to 25 April. He had made a fresh proposal to continue the service at a certain charge. He had taken no notice of the privilege of carrying five tons of goods out and bringing ten tons home. The postmasters then discuss his various proposals, among which are the payment of 12,000*l.* a year during war, and 8,000*l.* in time of peace. He should be allowed the freight of passengers. The income from the letters to be to the crown. The value of the letters had been 5,000*l.* per ann., and so the charge to Her Majesty would be 7,000*l.* per ann. They thought a formal contract should be entered into. If his L[p] thought M[r]

1707. VOL. CII.

Dummer should have the deficiency, amounting to 5,063*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.* for two years of his contract out of the 8,000*l.* a year, which he undertook the letters and passengers should bring in, they proposed that they should have a sign manual for paying it, and a warrant for annulling that contract. Dated 14 Aug. 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 18th Aug. 1707. My Lord takes notice that this proposal relates only to the islands, and not to the plantations on the continent, to wch, if it were extended, the advantage by lres from thence might make a very great increase to ye present produce. His Lordp therefore directs that this rept be sent to Mr Blathwayt to consider & offer his opinion as to ye carrying the correspondence to ye plantacons on ye continent as well as to ye islands."

An account of the produce of the letters.

The petition containing the proposals above referred to.

This is minuted (1), "18 July 1707. A wt to prolong ye time for 3 months longer from 25th instant." Wt signed. (2), "26th Sepr 1707. My Lord agrees to the rept, and the postmrs will prepare such a wt for dischargeing the old contract and Mr Dummer from the arrears due thereupon, and to authorize them to make a new one according to what is proposed by them in their report of the 14 August 1707." 6½ pages.

August 14. 92. Report of the Comrs of Excise (Scotland) to the Lord [High Treasurer]. Their business went on more smoothly, the brewers expecting much favour from the justices. Two proprietors of the sugar manufacture at Glasgow urged their private right by Acts of Parliament for exemption from duties on low wines and spirits, and in a similar manner Mr John Forbes of Culloden pretended to be exempted from duty on exciseable liquors, arising from his lands of Ferrintosh, otherwise than the yearly sum of 400 marks. These papers had been laid before the Lords of the Treasury, who had referred them to the Lord Advocate. Dated Excise Office, Edinburgh, 14 Aug. 1707. 1 page.

[About Aug. 16.] 93. Petition of Tilleman Robart to the Lord High Treasurer, for payment to him of arrears for keeping the gardens in order at Hampton Court, the greater part being of nine years standing. He also asks for employment.

August 16. 94. Report of Sir Christopher Wren to the Lord High Treasurer, on the memorial of Mr John Orlebar and Mr William Powell. He was present when the memorialists represented to the Earl of Sunderland, Lord Somers, and Lord Halifax, an experiment of ejecting an inflamable liquor out of a pipe. This engine forced a continual stream of fire, which in less than a minute burned an old door very furiously at some distance, and would soon have consumed it, but the engine was very small, and held but little of the material. The inventors required assistance to make a larger one, and he supposed

August 19. 96. Letter of John Crookshank to William Lowndes, Esq. The Comrs of Customs since their arrival at Edinburgh had with zeal studied to perform their duty, and, for preventing and punishing embezzlements, had cited several persons suspected of frauds to answer before the Lords of the Exchequer. A case had been strenuously debated whether the merchants should by Act of 1669 in Scotland be compelled to swear, or should be prosecuted according to the forms of the Exchequer in England. He (the writer) found the advocates were not fully apprized of the laws which regulated the customs in England, and he gave the Queen's Advocate the enclosed "observations" concerning embezzlements. He had also written a letter to Lord Glasgow, of which he enclosed a duplicate. [He makes some further observations on these prosecutions, and asks leave of absence to go to Ireland, where his uncle had died and left him something considerable, and that the permission might be put in a paragraph to the Comrs.] Dated Edinburgh, 19 Aug. 1707.

The "observations" and the letter referred to. 19 pages, 2 halves (small quarto).

August 19. 97. Letters of the Comrs of Customs (Scotland) to John Taylour, Esq., at the Treasury Chambers. They had been "taken up" amongst the advocates, and in despatching officers to their posts. They dated the commission on the 1st instant, but submitted to the Ld High Treasurer if they should not be paid from an earlier date. The administration had sent a troop of horse into Fife, and 18 dragoons to Preston Pans. They had waited on 31 Lords, &c., of the Exchequer, with the printed reasons for obtaining the oaths of merchants suspected to be guilty of frauds. Their Lps made an interlocutory order suspending their decision until the third Wednesday in November. The matter must be considered by the next Parliament. The late taxmen had promised to show their books. Dated Edinburgh, 19 Aug. 1707.

August 18. 99. Report of the Attorney and Solicitor General to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of divers merchants and others Her Majesty's subjects of Scotland, who had since the 1st of May imported or brought from that part of Great Britain into the port of London prohibited, uncustomable, and customable goods, which had been seized and forfeited. They had several times, in the presence of Sir David Nearne, heard Col. Grahame, M^r Coote, M^r Levingston, and M^r Steward on behalf of the persons concerned, and they agreed to a method of proceeding therein set forth for bringing the matter to a proper judicial determination. Dated 18 Aug. 1707.

August 21. 100. Representation of the Com^rs of Customs (Scotland) to the Lord High Treasurer. They had about 2,000*l.* in their cashier's hands. They were endeavouring to break a "scurvy custom" in which the brewers had been indulged during the farm, viz., paying one month's duty when three were due. Many were 12 months in arrear. The people of that country who were being instructed for officers were so unacquainted with figures that notwithstanding they (the Com^rs) had taken the utmost care in perfecting them, there was not one capable of undertaking business, but they hoped next week would furnish them with 8 or 10 gaugers. They had not yet the L^d Advocate's answer to the cases of the distillers of Glasgow. Dated Edinburgh, 21 Aug. 1707. 1 page.

August 21. 101. Report of the Com^rs of Customs to the L^d High Treasurer on the establishment of officers proposed by the Com^rs of Customs for Scotland, and also on two questions, (1) the bringing of horses from Ireland, and (2) the obliging merchants to give their oaths as to embezzlements as before the union. Approving the establishment. For the regulation of fees they refer to their report (copy enclosed) of 27 June. They also enclosed the opinions of the Attorney and Solicitor General on the two questions. Dated 21 Aug. 1707.

The two papers referred to are not now with the report, but there is a copy of the "establishment" and "reasons for the establishment of the ports, districts, officers, and salaries in the north parts of Great Britain." 6¼ pages.

The further requisites asked for by Dr Gregory, the master and workers there, were immediately ordered by the mint here. They would amount to 120*l.* sterling. Aug. 30. 112. Draft of a letter from the [Ld High Treasurer] to the Count of Fuen Calada, in answer to a letter received from him, concerning the application of the 150,000*l.* which the Queen had paid towards the support of his Catholic Majesty and his troops, to the end of that year. Finding the Count urged the remission of the like sum yearly for the future, he had to say, that the subsidies for carrying on the war were given by the subject from year to year only, and though he did not doubt but Her Majesty would recommend to her parliament to provide for the support of his Catholic Majesty, nevertheless 'twas impossible not to observe how little His Maty had inclined to the advice of Her Majesty's generals that had been sent to his assistance. Several occasions might prevent whatever might be granted from being remitted to His Majesty's own hands. Her Majesty had ordered her master of the ceremonies to wait on him with a present of 300*l.*, and the sooner he returned to inform His Majesty of the true state of these matters, the more it would conduce to his service. Dated 30 Aug. 1707.

The letter referred to, and a translation, in which the Count urges that if this supply was so very necessary when the King his master was in possession of the kingdoms of Arragon and Valencia, and consequently had the confiscated estates and the contributions of those kingdoms, which enabled him to maintain the nobility and many officers of all degrees, who retired from Castile and deserted the enemy's army; how necessary it was the money should be remitted to the King. He further says, that since that time a great number of nobility and all sorts of people had abandoned their houses and estates out of their zeal and affection for the King his master, besides which 2,500 horse and 5 regiments of foot that were in the garrison of Girona, another of foot, his Royal Guards in Barcelona, as also the foot which retired from Arragon and Valencia,

Aug. 30. 113. Letter from M^r John Ince to John Taylour, Esq., at the Cock Pit. The drivers of the 13 wagons had returned from Edinburgh, where the last single wagon sent down with the gold would arrive the next Friday. The deviation from their route occasioned their demand for 22*l.* a man more than he agreed for, being 50*l.* each. They were very rude and troublesome, M^r Maddocks and he had offered them 10*l.* a man advance, which was 60*l.* a man; this they refused and threatened to petition the Queen. The whole expense of sending the 150,000*l.*, without any reward to the soldiers, would amount to 1200*l.* which was 16*s.* per cent. They had offered no more than 10*l.* a piece advance. Dated Whitehall, 31 Aug. 1707.

He had also written to M^r S^t John relating to the sending home the officers in order to restore their regiments, which he should intimate to M^r Mead, who very much pressed for money, which was backed by M^r Stanhope to the L^d Ambassador Methuen. M^r Sloper would give the particulars. Dated Lisbon, 3 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 4. 118. Memorial of the Officers of Ordnance to the Lord High Treasurer. At the instance of Sir Cloudesley Shovel, M^r Consul Crowe at Livorne had supplied the fleet with powder and stores to the value of 7,000*l.* They had already paid for stores bought abroad by captains of the fleet 5,618*l.* 14*s.* 7½*d.* This increased the debt of the office, and the artificers were 18 months in arrear. They had but 1,000*l.* in the office, and hoped for a supply, &c. Col. Richards, from Barcelona, acquainted them with the charge the Portuguese were at for their train of artillery, and in case Her Majesty had a train in the field the charge would be proportionable; but the Duke of Marlborough told them their office would not be at the charge. The Dutch in Spain were at no such charge. Dated 4 Sept. 1707.

Minuted:—"Read 5th Sepr 1707. 10,000*l.* for land & 10,000 for sea services." 2 pages.

Sept. 4. 119. Letter of the Comrs of Excise (Scotland) to the Ld [High Treasurer] enclosing papers relating to the sugar manufactories at Glasgow, and the case of Mr John Forbes of Culloden returned to them with the Lord Advocate's opinion thereon. The Lords of the Treasury there thought the opinion of the Attorney General was necessary. They had 8 or 9 towns more under survey, and there was about 3,500*l.* in the cashier's hands. Dated 4 Sep. 1707.

The papers named are not now with the letter, but there is a printed copy of the commission and proclamation naming justices of the peace in Scotland.

Minuted:—"Read 15 [Sept.] Ref. the papers to the Attorney Genll as they desire; and let 'em know that they must take care not to dispose or apply any of the money but accordg to appropriacõns by Act of Parlt." 13 pages.

Sept. 6. 120. Report of Mr William Blathwayt to the Lord High Treasurer, on the proposal of Mr Dummer relating to the postage of packets and letters to and from the West Indies, more particularly as to extending the correspondence to the continent. The plantations in America were then the chief support of this kingdom, and were capable of great improvement by trade and other means, and the settling of a fixed correspondence and conveniency of passengers would much contribute thereto. Intelligence was the life of trade, and the greatest merchants endeavoured to be the best informed. It enabled them among other benefits to make insurances upon better terms, &c. Mr Dummer's undertaking had produced considerable benefit, &c. The establishment of a frequent and certain intercourse with the continent, which extended to more than 1,200 miles of coast, would be very desirable. Early intelligence would have saved many ships last year in reference to their setting out from Virginia and Maryland. This deserved consideration from Her Majesty, who was truly the greatest merchant in her dominions. The sailing of the packets from the islands ought to be every month, and from the continent eight times a year. Though the voyages were difficult in the winter, intelligence was most necessary, and provision should be made for it. The establishment of packet boats would be of little use, unless there was regularity and constancy, as well as swift sailers employed. They should not be detained more than a week upon the most pressing occasions, so as to prevent earlier notices by other ships. The rendezvous of the packet boats should be towards the middle of the continent. The price of the letters and packets should be rather less from the continent than the islands, the inhabitants of the former being more numerous and poorer, and by the number of the letters there would be more profit to the post office. Dated 6th Sept. 1707.

Enclosed is a report of the post masters general on a memorial of Mr Dummer, dated 2 April 1707, the memorial itself, and the reference thereof to Mr Blathwayt.

These papers relate a good deal to the contract of Mr Dummer, the loss of two packet boats, the deficiency of the receipts on the postage of letters, &c. 13 pages, 2 halves.

Sept. 6. 121. Letter of the Comrs of "the Equivalent," unaddressed. They return thanks for the sending the 50,000*l.* in gold, which came under a guard of 120 dragoons and was safely lodged in the castle. It had been but half the time the other was on the road, and was soon enough for their occasions. They (the Comrs) began to pay the African company on the 26th past, but had paid no more than 103,700*l.*, whereof the half was in Exchequer bills, which people had been induced to take before they came in course, for those who were in course took all in specie, and even some whom the Comrs knew had occasion for bills on London insisted on having specie, expecting to buy Exchequer bills under par, and they (the Comrs) were informed the bills were proffered at 1 per cent. under, and the discount would have been greater had not they (the Comrs) given their own bills on the bank, and so sunk above 33,000*l.* They were doubtful people would every day be more unwilling to take the Exchequer bills. Some they thought they could depend on required money. If they could pay 30 or 40,000*l.* more in bills to the African company they should then be able to discharge their whole demand, and have 20 or 30,000*l.* in cash to answer the deficiency in coin, and for all other demands upon the Equivalent. The Comrs had paid in specie above 2,800*l.*, in part of 3,000*l.*, to make good the loss on English money, and to encourage the bank to carry into the mint what they had of current coin, the Comrs had lodged with them 5,000*l.* in English money; so that the mint was at work, but they were not provided with all things necessary to make a thorough coinage, and their backwardness made it difficult to the government there to make proper resolutions on this important affair of calling in the coin. The Privy Council had issued an order as to passing Exchequer bills in the revenue of Scotland. The Lord [Chancellor] had been extremely ready to do everything that might advance their affair, and his presence seemed so necessary there that they hoped he would not be called away until they had overcome the greatest part of their work. Exchequer bills would not answer to pay the soldiers; some bills of 5*l.* and 10*l.* would have been very convenient. Since they had begun their payments the people appeared to be more easy, and they (the Comrs) hoped to convince them of their error "in being dissatisfied to be made happy (against their wills) by the union." If the receiver of the letter knew their constant attendance to business, their fatigue, and the difficulty they daily encountered, he would pity them. Dated Edinburgh, 6 Sept. 1707. 3 pages, quarto.

Sept. 8. 122. Certificate by the Deputy Clerk of the Pipe of the payment by the sheriffs of London of 40*l.* for apprehending John Lane, a highway robber, and that they had not money to satisfy the same from their shrievalty. Dated Pipe Office, 8 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 9. 123. Letter from M^r^ Thomas Everard to [? M^r^ Lowndes], giving him an account of matters connected with the revenue of Ireland. Several of the branches were capable of being considerably advanced, especially the excise, but several of the collectors spent much of their time in managing their own affairs; the gaugers were many of them meanly qualified, &c., and it was much the same with the customs. No commissioner had for some years visited a port. Some of their number had spent most of their time in England and others were so often absent from the board about their own affairs that he had not had ten days respit from the custom house since he came to that kingdom, except to bring his family from Chester. Whatever complaint had been made had always been laid on him, and some gentlemen equally concerned showed themselves willing it should be so. [He then describes the practices pursued to defraud the revenue on salt, &c.] Dated Custom House, Dublin, 9 Sept. 1707. 3 pages.

Sept. 10. 124. Copy of report of the Agents for Taxes to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of Thomas Austin, receiver general of two aids for the co. of Chester and North Wales, recommending the allowance of 3*d.* in the pound for carriage of 59,828*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* for his hazard and expenses of sending that sum up. Dated 10 Sept. 1707.
Minuted:—"14 Nov. 1707. To be read againe." 1 page.

Sept. 10. 125. Letter from Lord Cornbury to the L^d^ High Treasurer. He had had several complaints against M^r^ Byerly for refusing to pay warrants. Asks for his Lordship's directions as to what method he should take. It was impossible for him to know when M^r^ Byerly had money and when not. M^r^ Byerly said that if he swore to his accounts before his Lordship in council that was enough, and that if the deputy auditors allowed them, his L^p^ had nothing to do to examine them. If the L^d^ Treasurer's pleasure was that it should be so, he was well content, but in former governors' times, and in his own, the practice had been different. Dated New York, 10 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 10. 126. Report of the Agents for Taxes to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of Hugh Horton, Esq., receiver general of divers aids for the counties of Bucks, as to allowances to him for his extraordinary charges. Dated 10 Sept. 1707.
Minuted:—"A w^t^ for this."
Also the petition and an account. 3 pages.

Sept. 13. 127. Letter of the L^d^ Lieut. of Ireland to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of John Pratt, deputy receiver general, concerning disbursements for buying horses for Her Majesty's service in

The petition. 2 pages.

Sept. 15. 128. Representation of the officers appointed for the recovering and collecting the rights and perquisites of Admiralty, to the Lord High Treasurer. They had proposed Col. Robert Quarry for the recovery of the rights and perquisites of Admiralty for the continent of North America. They ask his L^ps directions to be able to make allowance to him out of the proceeds of the prizes, and enclose copy of a warrant from the L^d High Admiral to the Col. to recover the said rights. Dated 15 Sept. 1707.
Also the copy of warrant. 2 pages.

Sept. 16. 129. Memorial of the Officers of Ordnance to the Lord High Treasurer, for remission of the taxes on their salaries. Dated 16 Sept^r 1707.
Minuted:—"This to be done as usuall." 1 page.

[? About Sept. 17.] 130. Petition of Mary Boudet, widow, to the Queen, relating the services of her husband Lawrence Boudet, a French refugee, who was surgeon in the regiment of Sir George S^t George, and afterwards to that commanded by Lord Charlemont, and went to the West Indies and to Spain, where he died; praying for a pension.
Certificate of the Earl of Charlemont of his services. He was the only surgeon exposed to danger at the attacks of Fort Manjuick, where he dressed the Prince of Hesse's wound; being confined to his bed at the retreat of the regiment from Figueres, as he was unable to shift for himself he was left. By the help of a kind landlord he was conveyed away, but died of the surprise and fatigue. Dated 17 Sept. 1707. 2 pages.

Sept. 18. 131. Petition of Nicholas Smith, gent., to the Lord High Treasurer. He was in possession of a piece of ground in a close called Windmill Fields, at the upper end of Eyre S^t in S^t James's parish, Westminster, for the remainder of a term formerly granted to Sir W^m Pulteney; praying for the term to be made up to 50 years, in order to improve the property.
Referred to the Surveyor Gen^l, 18 Sept. 1707.

Sept. 18. 132. Representation of the Com^rs of Excise (Scotland) to the Lord [High Treasurer?] They had appointed M^r George Dalrymple as assistant to their solicitor. He would attend the justices upon the brewers' complaints. They proposed he should have 80*l.* a year. As soon as they could get good bills they would remit what money they had to the Com^rs of Excise in England. Dated Edinburgh, 18 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 20. 133. Letter of M^r Secretary Harley to the L^d High Treasurer, as to the great complaints made by the subjects of the States General 1707. of the United Provinces, of the high duties laid upon their linen and other goods of that nature; and more particularly that the linen coming from Germany paid less duty in England than that which was imported from the United Provinces. On which an address of the House of Commons was made to the Queen. Dated Whitehall, 20 Sept. 1707.

Copy of the address referred to, a letter from M^r Vryberge, the envoy from the States, and a memorandum on the same subject for the Duke of Marlborough. 7 pages, 2 quarters.

Sept. 20. 134. Letter from the Earl of Seafield to [? the L^d High Treasurer]. The enclosed memorial and other papers would inform his L^p of all that occurred to him (the Earl) at present. The pay of the army must be settled before they went from that part of the kingdom. Robert Murray was that evening brought in, and he (the Earl) had committed him prisoner to the castle, because it was more secure than the town prison, and would prevent the resort of the Jacobites to him. He was not yet examined, as some of the privy counsellors were in town, and the "Advocate" lay ill of the gout, so he could not be examined before Monday. He (the Earl) had written for my Lord Justice Clerk, and expected Lord Glasgow on Monday, and longed for further information, which might arrive by that time. He hoped in ten or twelve days all would be done that required his attendance, and if not commanded to stay should begin his journey, and so hoped for his L^ps commands. Dated Edinburgh, 20 Sept. 1707.

Accompanying are three other papers:—

I. Memorial as to subsistence money. The exchange between London and Scotland was at 2½ if not 3 per cent. The Lords of the Privy Council had emitted a proclamation declaring all the foreign species of money current in that kingdom to be bullion only, and not to pass in any payments after the 6^th of Oct. except to the Bank, which was to receive it until the 15^th, and to that time the Bank was obliged to receive it, and pay the proprietors current money or notes at the option of the demander. The proprietors of the Bank were to have ½ per cent., to be paid out of the funds of the "Equivalent." They had great difficulty to persuade the Bank to undertake the trouble, as they alleged that it would be above 1½ years before the mint could coin all the foreign and Scots coin, so that a considerable sum would be as bullion in their hands, &c.

II. "Double" [of] memorial "by the Com^rs of Equivalent to the Lords of Privy Council" in respect to payments to the African Company and the re-coinage.

III. Memorial of what was doing in the Privy Council and Exchequer as to the appointment of justices of the peace; as to the return of the writs concerning the 16 peers and 45 commoners elected to represent Scotland in the first Parliament of Great Britain; as to French privateers on the coast, asking that cruisers might be speedily appointed; as to entry of goods coming from the West Indies; as to measures taken in consequence of a tumult arising from a seizure of brandy at Preston Pans; as to the merchants being required to give their oaths in regard to embezzled goods; as to the rectifying the coin; as to payments to the African Company, and other matters about the coinage. 16½ pages.

Sept. 22. 135. Report of the Com^rs of Chelsea Hospital to the L^d High Treasurer, recommending 30*l.* a year to be allowed to Henry Powell, late steward there. Dated 22 Sept. 1707.

Minuted:—"8 Xber 1707. Agreed." 1 page.

Sept. 24. 136. Memorial of the Officers of Works for the payment of what was due to their office for the last quarter. Dated Office of Works, Sept. 24, 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 25. 137. Representation of the Com^rs of Excise (Scotland) to the L^d [High Treasurer?] as to objections raised by the brewers to payment of the duties before the justices. They now had every day certified officers coming in, whom they disposed in the best towns, and they had remitted 4,500*l.* to the Com^rs of Excise, London. Dated Edinburgh, 25 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 25. 138. Report of M^r W^m Borrett to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the several debts and demands on the forfeited estates of the Lord Griffin, and how they stood in priority of time. Dated 25 Sept. 1707.

Letter from James Griffin to the Lord High Treasurer, applying for what was due to him from his father's estate. 2 pages.

Sept. 26. 139. Presentment of the Com^rs of Customs to the Lord High Treasurer, as to the affronts their officers met with from the commanders, officers, and seamen of the Dutch men of war, and from the governor of Tilbury Fort, also as to the running of goods into Tilbury Fort; praying that a stop might be put thereto. A Dutch commodore had put some of their officers in irons. Dated 26 Sept. 1707.

Affidavit relating thereto. 3 pages.

Sept. 27. 140. Memorial of M^r Edward Wilcox to the Lord High Treasurer, as to certain trees in the Forest of Dean fit for the navy. The barks of 20 oaks were stripped three or four feet above ground, and others just within the ground, to kill them, that they might be taken as dead trees. To prevent this abuse he asks for a warrant to cut the trees down, and for any found so for the future. For it was to be hoped that when disappointed of the trees, they would not take the pains to do the mischief.

Minuted:—"Ordered," &c. Dated 27 Sept. 1707. 1 page.

Sept. 29. 141. Memoranda of moneys paid to persons by the Hon. Spencer Compton, Esq., for a quarter to Michaelmas 1707. ½ page.

[? Sept.] 147. Memorial in behalf of Captain James Jefferies, who by the Queen's order was to attend the army of the King of Sweden as a volunteer, to the L^d High Treasurer, praying his Lordship to grant a salary, he having received none as yet by reason of the uncertainty of the march of the army out of Saxony. D^r John Robinson, Her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary, had certified that the captain "had set forward from Leipsig" with the army on 26 Aug. 1707.
Certificate referred to. 1¼ pages.

VOL. CIII. 1707. OCTOBER TO DECEMBER.

Oct. 1. 1. An account of money remaining to be received for the years 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705, 1706, and 1707, short of the proportion of 19*s* a man a month for the service of the victualling. Dated 1 Oct. 1707. 1 page.

Oct. 1. 2. A state of the charge and debt of the sick and wounded office to the 1^st Oct. 1707. 2 pages.

Oct. 2. 3. Representation of the Com^rs of Excise (Scotland) to the L^d High Treasurer. The justices had adjudged that the brewers should have an allowance of 1/8^th on the gauge of all hot worts instead of 1/10^th, and that the barrels which contain 1/6^th more than the 34 gallons English, or 12 gallons present Scotts standard measure, should be the barrel by which they should be charged. They had represented to the justices the loss to the revenue, and that it was contrary to law. Would ask the Lord Advocate's advice how to quash the judgment. Could not get any money from the brewers for ale brewed since the 20^th of July. Had yesterday received their new commission from the Earl of Seafield. Dated 2 Oct. 1707. 2 pages.

VOL. CIII.

Oct. 4. 4. Letter from the Lords of the Treasury of Scotland to the Lord [High Treasurer?] in relation to the subsistence money for the forces and garrisons in Her Majesty's establishment in Scotland. The civil list could not answer any part of it, &c. The crown rents were exhausted by appropriations before the union. They make further suggestions as to this subsistence. It was of great consequence that it should be paid the first week of each month. Dated Edinburgh, Treasury Chamber, 4 Oct. 1707. 1½ pages.

Oct. 7. 5. Letter of J. Brydges, unaddressed, but probably to some one at the Treasury, apologizing for not making his acknowledgments sooner, for continued favours in the despatch of all business. As a small instance of his gratitude asking the acceptance of a "bill" enclosed. Dated 7 Oct. 1707. 1 page, quarto.

Oct. 9. 6. Representation from the Com^rs of Excise (Scotland) to the L^d [High Treasurer?]. They had ordered the payment of the first 2,000*l.* for the subsistence of the forces, &c. The Earl of Seafield and Lords of the Treasury had stopped the judgment designed to be given by the justices. The standard measures were to be tried in a day or two. Dated 9 Oct. 1707. 2 pages.

Oct. 9. 7 & 8. Report of Sir Christopher Wren to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the Directors of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich. There was a duty of 12*d.* per ton for stone shipped at Portland, except for royal palaces, and for such other public works as Her Majesty should give directions, and to levy the duty better, presentments were made of it at the Queen's Courts for her manor of Portland. The islanders had only 9*d.* of it for the poor, the other 3*d.* being paid to the receiver of the land revenue for Dorsetshire. He could not inform his Lordship what title the islanders had to the 9*d.*, or any part of it. All he could find was a pleaded custom for 6*d.* and a sign manual from King Charles II. for the other 3*d.* Being for the poor, it had been paid for the stone used at S^t Paul's and other works, except what was for the immediate service of the crown. It was paid for the stone used at Chelsea College; and how far Greenwich Hospital differed from that foundation he could not determine. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's were entitled to the 6*d.* per ton paid to them by a clause in the last grant of the quarries to them; and it went towards the great charges of the ways, pier and crane. He (Sir Chr.) had a warrant (as former surveyors had) empowering him to give licences to quarrymen to work in the quarries. If Her Majesty thought fit to gratify the petitioners in the remission of the duty, he proposed that the Attorney General should settle the right of the 12*d.* per ton, and the steward of the manor should respit all presentments about the duty. Dated 9 Oct. 1707.

The petition referred to. 3 pages.

Oct. 11. 9&10. Report of the Com^rs for duties on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper, to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of the sworn attorneys of the courts of law at Westminster who were threatened with pains and penalties, and many of them under prosecution in the Exchequer, for contravening the stamp duties. They (the Com^rs) were satisfied that it had been a very common practice to defraud the stamp duties throughout England, &c. [It is a very lengthy report]. Dated Stamp Office, Lincoln's Inn, 11 Oct. 1707.

Minuted:—"27^th Octob^r 1707. Send this to M^r Attorney & M^r Soll^r Gen^ll for their opinions.'

Also the petition. 4 pages.

Oct. 13. 11. Letter of George Trotter to M^r Lowndes, asking him to acquaint the L^d High Treasurer that M^r Sedgwick, the collector of Whitby, was dead, and asking to be appointed, and that he should not be put by as he was the last time. Dated Custom House, Scarborough, Oct. 13, 1707? 1 page.

Oct. 13. 12. Representation of the Com^rs for the Land Tax for the Palaces of Whitehall, &c. Parliament had charged Her Majesty's family with 30,754*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* to be raised by the 4*s.* aid in the year 1705. They had represented that it would be the entire ruin of the greatest part of the family, but they had paid 19,403*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.*, and they fell short 11,351*l.*; praying that their sad estate might be laid before their royal mistress, and for his Lordship's compassionate representation of their great distress. Dated Whitehall, 13 Oct. 1707. 1 page.

Oct. 14. 13. Memorial of the Com^rs of Ordnance to the Lord High Treasurer on Lord Galway's and Col. Richards' proposal for augmenting the Spanish train. Lord Galway proposed that there should be a field train of 20 pieces of cannon, ammunition, &c., for the whole army (4,000 horse and foot), as he found the Portuguese had managed that service very ill, and it would be necessary to continue the officers, gunners, &c., at Alicant and Denia. Several sums had been laid out on the fortifications of Gibraltar. Previous to making their estimates they ask directions. Dated 14 Oct. 1707.

Minuted:—"To be considerd when the D. of Marlb^o comes over." 3 pages.

Oct. 14. 14. Memorial of the Com^rs for sick and wounded seamen to the L^d High Treasurer, asking for 4,252*l.* to enable them to pay bills of exchange. Dated 14 Oct. 1707. 1 page.

Oct. 15. 15. Letter from Lord Sunderland to the Lord High Treasurer, enclosing report of the Com^rs of Revenue, and a certificate (two others being wanting) in favor of Col. Francis Baldwin, formerly a colonel under Lewis XIV. of France. He had been possessed of considerable estate in France, but being a Protestant "had been forced to fly from thence," and settled at Waterford, where he became an eminent trader, but by losses at sea was reduced. Her Majesty desired he might have a pension in Ireland, or other relief. Dated 15 Oct. 1707. 3 pages.

Oct. 16. 16. Letter of James Steuart, Lord High Advocate (Scotland), unaddressed, in relation to the question between the excise and the brewers. The brewers would not yield, the judgment of the justices being in their favour, and the Com^rs could not comply. He heartily wished the Com^rs might have directions and be allowed "to pass this seventh part to the brewers," for there was a new question. The 12 gallons Scots measure were rated to 34 gallons English barrel. The English standards were come, and according to the English gallon the 12 gallons Scots made nearly 37 English gallons, and what made the difficulty greater was the English quart did not agree to the English gallon. He had done his best to induce the brewers to pay up their sixth parts, and retain the seventh till the measures were adjusted, but they refused and they had no court there to determine the matter at present. Dated "Ed^r" 16 Oct. 1707.

[This letter is entered in the North Britain Book, Vol. I. p. 161. In the same book, p. 158, also is a warrant directing that the duty should be collected according to the standard quart.] 3 pages.

Oct. 16. 17. Copy of the opinion of Sir Simon Harcourt, Attorney General, and Sir James Mountague, Solicitor General, about importing brandy, &c. in small casks. Dated Oct. 16 and June 20, 1707. 7 pages.

Oct. 16. 18. Various papers as to the claim by John Forbes, of Culloden, for exemption from duties for certain sugar manufactories at Glasgow, including the opinion of the Attorney General. Dated 16 Oct. 1707. 23 pages and 3 parts.

Oct. 16. 19. Report of M^r H. S^t John and M^r J. Brydges to the Lord High Treasurer, in favour of a proposal of M^r Charles Robinson for furnishing small clothing and accoutrements for the use of the forces employed in Spain and Portugal. The contract was less by 3,350*l*. than had been paid in ready money for the like species. Dated 16 Oct. 1707.

The contract was agreed to. See Minute Book, Vol. 14, p. 117. 3 pages.

Oct. 17. 20. Letter from Col. Daniel Parke to the L^d High Treasurer, "praying a commission as brigadier, and that it may be dated the same day Col. Crowther's was dated, and that he may have Lillingston's regiment, he not coming over to it; also transmitting accounts of imports and exports at Nevis and Antego." He says that the Duke of Marlborough had promised him the commission, and it was very hard he should be forgot because he was absent, and that he should have injustice done him because he was serving the Queen in the torrid zone. He had endured more fatigue than if he had been anywhere else, had had the plague, pestilence, and bloody flux, and had endured a hurricane which was as dreadful as possible for human nature to have an idea of. He further says: "I must beg leave to put your Lordship in mind of your promise to me (when I had the honour to make your heart glad by telling you the news of the glorious victory of Blenheim), the Dutchess and your Lordship bid me go home and take care of myself, and you would take care of my fortune. I had the honour to hear the same thing told me by the Queen at Windsor." Dated Nevis, 17 Oct. 1707.

The papers for Antigua only are with it. 5 pages (two very large).

Oct. 20. 21. Report of the Attorney General to the Lord High Treasurer giving his opinion that a ship was not seizable by law in Ireland for having imported French goods into any part of Great Britain. Dated 20 Oct. 1707.
Three other papers enclosed. 5 pages.

Oct. 28. 34. Letter of the Earl of Sunderland to the Envoy of Portugal. The Queen had read the Envoy's two memorials, and was persuaded that it was of the last importance to sustain the war in Portugal. Her Majesty had already sent four regiments beyond those sanctioned by Parliament, and there were three others ready. She had no doubt Parliament would quickly fulfil the conditions of the treaty for the coming year and furnish the means; but the court of Portugal had failed to execute the same treaty. In place of entertaining 13,000 men on the borders of Spain, and 15,000 in Portugal, there were not a third of them in the campaign. As for the misfortune to the horses embarked for Lisbon (which were then in Ireland), the Queen had sent instructions to the Earl of Pembroke such as he (the Envoy) wished, and she would give order to replace at her own charge the horses which should be bought in Ireland. Nov. 7. 57. Report of the Comrs of Customs to the Ld High Treasurer, on a letter of Mons. Vryberg, Envoy Extraordinary from the States General of the United Provinces, complaining of excessive duties laid upon linen thread and tapes of the manufacture of those provinces. They were of opinion that laying duties on linens so as to encourage the importation of the finer sorts from the Netherlands, was no prejudice to the subjects of those countries, who were already indulged in one particular fabric called "borelaps." As to what was alleged by Mr Taverner of 900,000 pounds worth of English corn and woollen manufacture imported in a year in one port of Holland, if half of it were corn they could not doubt that the advantages which the subjects of the States General received by the low price thereof on occasion of the bounty allowed here for exporting it, would be a greater advantage than the alteration of the linen duties, &c. They hoped the Envoy would procure an order from their High Mightinesses the States General to the commanders of the men-of-war coming to this kingdom, restraining them from bringing prohibited goods, as great disputes too frequently arose between them and the Custom House officers, occasioning such just complaints as might tend to interrupt that good correspondence which was so desirable to be continued between the subjects of this kingdom and those states. Dated 7 Nov. 1707. 3 pages.

Nov. 8. 58. Letter from Wm Churchill to the [Ld High Treasurer]. Nov. 10 & 11. 61. Letter of Col. J. Dudley, Governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire provinces in New England, to the Lord High Treasurer. M^r Jekyll the Collector and M^r Newton the Controller of Customs had arrived by the mast fleet. He had presumed to name M^r Jekyll, who was then employed in the other province as Treasurer of New Hampshire, but in time of peace the office was not worth more than 20*l.* or 30*l.* and in war not above 80*l.*, &c. The trade in pitch and tar was greatly advanced, and he had always covered the workmen with good guards; they being always pursued by the Indians in places far distant from our settlements. The accounts of revenue would be sent home by the Deptford, the convoy to the mast fleet. He had only this safe conveyance, and it was but once a year.

He prayed that the enclosed defence of his management in the government might be acceptable to his Lordship, and if it did not appear that the address offered to Her Majesty against him was very false and groundless, he would never offer one word more to support himself in Her Majesty's favour. If out of 10,000 freeholders in the province there were 100 that would not address Her Majesty for his continuance he would lose all he had. There were no men, civil or military, in office but the best in the country, and the administration was moderate and acceptable to the people. The assemblies of New Hampshire had addressed Her Majesty for his continuance. Everybody expressed their abhorrence at the allegations against him. He asked it on his knees that these false calumnies might not remove him from his Lordship's favour, and that he might be favourably represented to Her Majesty. His allowance was not more than 300*l.* sterl. per ann., which did not pay for his support, but he was content with that and his own estate if he might have the honor of serving Her Majesty. He prayed he might sustain the service there until his countrymen saw that he had something for his service in England all the last reign and five years in this province, and that he might be succeeded by a person of education and morals, which most men there thought Sir Charles Hobby, who had made all this pursuit against him, wanted.

P.S.—He acquainted his L^p in his last of the forces then abroad in the snow, who in their march, after the letters were gone, came upon a troop of 25 Indians, several of them considerable captains, and killed them every man, and in their return closely pursued another troop, so as to get their very clothes and provisions. He doubted not they were starved to death, having 200 miles to go home in the depth of the snow. Soon after their return, at the desire of the assemblies of both provinces, he sent eastward 1,000 men, who ravaged and burnt all the houses about Port Royal to the number of 150, and destroyed all their stock and corn, and returned with about 30 prisoners, but were not capable to "insult" the fort, it being a regular work of 40 pieces of cannon, and they could bring no cannon nor mortars to bear against it, as Col. Redknap, Her Majesty's engineer, who was then employed, and other officers, informed him. There were some few discontented that Port Royal fort was not taken, and would misrepresent him if possible. Dated Boston, 10 Nov. 1707.

The letter is accompanied by—

(1.) Colonel Dudley's defence and apology against the most unjust and false representation in an address offered to Her Majesty at Windsor on the 23rd of June last past. His father was one of the three first undertakers that purchased the province of Massachusetts, and after the settlement thereof was governor there until his death, and left his family there, and the colonel for many years during the charter was one of the council and their agent in England in the reign of King Charles II., and since the alteration of the government in the last year of that King was named president of the province, and served in that and other stations until the revolution, when he was made lieut^{t} governor of the Isle of Wight by King William, under the Lord Cutts, where he served nearly 10 years to the satisfaction of the King and his subjects. In 1701 he was appointed by the King, and soon after by Queen Anne, governor of the Massachusetts and New Hampshire provinces, in New England. He was never in any trade. He was never twice plaintiff or defendant in any court or cause. He was twice complained of, and on both occasions he was acquitted by His Majesty in council and sent away with honor. Had appointed the best men to offices; had not influenced any judgments in the courts, &c.; had contented himself on 500*l.* per ann., which was but 300*l.* sterling. In former wars with French and Indians the government had always purchased prisoners at 5*l.* a head or more, but he had forced the exchange of prisoners without ransom. The French and Indians, in troops like wolves, had made very hard impressions on an open frontier of 200 miles on poor and indefensible villages, but he had met and defeated them many times every summer, and beat them from all places of their planting, so that they could not live within 300 miles of the English settlements, nor had Her Majesty lost one village. Of all which things there were 10,000 freeholders who would give evidence. Several of the hands set to the petition [against him] were forged. To the first article in the petition he replies that the people were in a hurry, but on a full hearing before the King and council he (Col. Dudley) was justified, and employed in several commissions, and when the Massachusetts government was void it was given him.

1707. VOL. CIII.

To the second article he answers that the general assembly had voted the charges scandalous and false.

The third, fourth, and fifth articles accuse him of supporting the Indians in trading for their benefit and to the destruction of the English. He replies that he had fitted the frontiers with snow shoes, and had kept out in the winter 4 or 500 men to march hundreds of miles into the depth of the country and defeated all their inroads, and in the summer beaten them from their fishing and planting grounds, so that they had not one acre of corn at all their ancient planting places, thereby keeping them in a starving condition, and he had obtained of the assembly to set 100*l.* each on the rebels' heads, so that their commander "Escambuit," at Newfoundland, in his letter to Captain Moody, threatened to kill 60 English prisoners if he (Col. Dudley) were not recalled. M^r^ William Partridge in his evidence gave as a reason why Col. Dudley must needs correspond with the enemy because he knew where to meet them. He (the Col.) confesses that by faithful Indians at Albany, and by agents at Quebec, he had constant secret intelligence of the enemies, and often met them to a day, and always seasonably, so that they were for ever defeated and fled home naked and wounded, for which all the ministers in the country had given public thanks, &c.

The seizure of Captain Veitch and his partner's estate, and confiscation thereof to Her Majesty, and the fines of 3,000*l.* to Her Majesty (which was never done before in these provinces), would acquit him of any partnership with any of them. Col. Dudley then calls attention to the quality and circumstances of his accusers. He (the Col.) had done some unpopular acts, such as totally extirpating piracy, shipping off to Jamaica two companies of near 100 men each, by Her Majesty's commands, who either died there or never since had been permitted to return. He prevailed with the people to send two cargoes of provisions to S^t^ Christopher's, the people of which island were left by the French to starve. More pitch and tar had been sent home the last year than in many years before. He stood upon it to the last degree that he had for the last 30 years served the crown with all faithfulness, &c., and prayed that he might not lose Her Majesty's favor, nor have his enemies triumph over him.

(2.) Letter of the ministers of New England in answer to the charge that the government of Colonel Dudley was not acceptable to them, strongly asserting the contrary. They remark that "Hiram sometime said to Solomon, 'because the Lord loved Israel he had made him king,' they might in like manner say because God had a favour to them he had made him governor. Dated Northampton, N. England, Nov. 11, 1707. With seven signatures.

(3.) Memorial of the same Colonel. He had been five years employed in a war and troubles with the French and their dependent Indians, and was sensible of their settlements and strength.

Port Royal was the head of L'Acadie and Nova Scotia, consisting of a very regular work with 50 pieces of cannon at the mouth of a good harbour. It had in it six regular companies of near 300 men. Its dependants were the town of Port Royal, lately destroyed by the forces sent from New England, the towns of Menis and Secanecte, open villages, together making 500 men more, which was all the strength of that government, and lay not above 60 leagues from the coast of the province of Main, where the English garrisons were. Quebeck upon Canada river was a fortified town, where the French general resided, and had in it a regiment making about 800 regular forces. The forces of Montreal, Troy river, and other French settlements made in the whole about 3,000 men, but so distant and divided to 300 miles at least that they could be no assistance to each other, unless they left the whole country void.

These settlements had no shipping but a few fishing boats, and once a year in August, one frigate usually came from Placentia with two store ships for their year's supply. Notwithstanding their small number, by their priests and jesuits they had gotten the command of the inland Indians, and had debauched the Indians of the province of Main, and by their late trade and discovery of Missasippi river had made a circle round all the English colonies from New England to Virginia, and gave the government of New England great trouble. If they should debauch the five nations of the Maquas, which had for a long time been difficult to keep steady to the English interest, they would bring to the last distress Maryland and Virginia, (which were planted in no posture of defence,) to the loss of the best trade belonging to Her Majesty in all the West Indies.

At the issue of every war between the crown of England and the French King, they had always added to their strength and trade in their northern settlements in America, so that every seven years made a conquest of them more difficult, and they would at length, if not prevented, be able to ravage all Her Majesty's governments, and would put them beyond a capacity of carrying on the trade so necessary and beneficial to the kingdom of Great Britain, to whom they had hitherto been so advantageous.

If Her Majesty would send early in the year five or six frigates with 2,000 regular men, and two bomb ketches with stores, and let all the governments of New England, New York, Connecticut, and Rhode Island be commanded to prepare a just quota of men to assist, one summer would, with the favor of God, reduce all those parts to the English obedience and make room for very good settlements, and the soldiers sent would soon be induced on sight of so good a country to become planters.

This would for ever put these provinces in perfect repose and reduce the dependant Indians to a vassalage to the English Government, secure the whole trade of furs, naval stores, the fishery for Spain and elsewhere, entirely in English hands, to the unaccountable profit of the nation, as well as glory to Her Majesty's victorious arms, and the loss to the French would be in all things equal to

Nov. 11. 62. Memorial of Sir Christopher Wren to the Ld High Treasurer, relating to the stone quarries in the island of Portland. The quarries belonging to the crown and affording much larger and finer blocks of stone than any quarries in England, great care had been always taken to preserve them from waste, and the better to prevent abuses by irregular working, as well as to ascertain a duty payable on transporting stone, Sir Chr. Wren as Surveyor General of Works had Her Majesty's warrant (as former surveyors had) to licence and direct the raising and transport of stone from thence, which he had long practised with good success and much to the service of the crown; but some quarrymen of Portland disputed Her Majesty's right, and opened new quarries without leave, &c., and no warning having any effect, he laid the matter before his Lp that the Attorney General might take such course with the offenders as the law would allow. Dated 11 Nov. 1707. 1 page.

Nov. 12. 63. Report of the Comrs of Trade to the Ld High Treasurer, on Mr Sliford's proposal to be agent to that Board. They preferred to have the opinion of the most experienced merchants in the several trades to information collected by any single person, &c. They were of opinion that the constituting such an officer as was proposed would not be of any use. Dated Whitehall, Nov. 12, 1707.

Nov. 13. 64. Report of the Lord Lieut. of Ireland to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Brigadier William Villiers, praying a warrant for the pay of brigadier vacant by the death of Lord Cutts, &c. Dated Dublin Castle, 13 Nov. 1707. 1 page.

Nov. 14. 65. Representation by the Comrs of Excise to the Lord High Treasurer, concerning the duty on malt, which tends greatly to the "deceit" of Her Majesty's subjects, by vending to them an unwholesome and bad commodity, and to defraud the revenue; showing the practices resorted to by the maltsters in the counties of Hertford, Berks, Cambridge, and other places to defraud the excise officers by treading the corn in the steep, by mixing it in various stages of the steep, by throwing it out of the cisterns or couches in 5 10 15 or 20 hours instead of 50, to spread it on the floors; so that it was scarcely possible for the officers to know what had been gauged. They had prepared divers clauses to be offered to Parliament, and submit the same to his Lordship. Dated 14 Nov. 1707.

Nov. 17. 66. Letter of the Lord Lieut. of Ireland to the Lord High Treasurer, on the petition of Sir Lambert Blackwell to the Queen, sending a report on the same by the Solicitor General for Ireland. Dated Dublin Castle, 17 Nov. 1707.

1707. VOL. CIII.

The report named. The solicitor advises that there was a grant to John Blackwell, Esq., the petitioner's father, of lands in Ireland forfeited by the rebellion of 1641 remaining undisposed of to the yearly value of 1,000*l.*, and that lands in the counties of Dublin and Meath to the value of 319*l.* 14*s.* per ann. were found and returned at the expense of petitioner's father as sequestered by the rebellion of 1641; but it seemed to the solicitor that none of these estates were proper to be granted to the petitioner.

Minuted:—"Read 21th June 1708. Make an extract of so much of the Sollr Genlls report as concerns the lands formerly found by Mr Blackwell and send it to the Comrs of ye Revenue to certify if those lands now are in the crown, how the profits thereof are answer'd, and to what uses the same are applyd, and to return their rept to his Lordp as soon as conveniently they can." 5 pages.

Nov. 17. 67. Letter from the Post Masters General to Mr Taylour in relation to the detention of the privy seal for the discharge of the deficiency on account of Mr Dummer's West India contract, and for entering into a new contract with him for that service. Nov. 18. 68. Letter from Col. Daniel Parke to the Lord High Treasurer. Since the packet sailed he had sent a flag of truce to Martinique with some prisoners taken by a privateer (for he had no man-of-war attending his government). Before the gentleman he sent could get his despatch and the prisoners they were to send him (the Col.), Mons. Du Cass arrived, viz., on the 11th inst., with 10 men of war (eight of which were from 70 to 86 guns) and several large privateers, all very full of men. They had boats that rowed with 36 oars, and at Martinique they had fitted up several large flat-bottomed boats for landing men. The gentleman and those that belonged to his "flag of truce" had brought him the news. The gentleman told him he saw Mons. Du Cas, and was told there were 18 men of war more expected, and that they designed to attack Barbadoes. Mons. Collett, their intendant at Martinique, went on board a 40-gun ship, and sailed, as he believed, to Tobago, to give an account of the 18 men-of-war. Since he had this news our privateers took four more French prisoners that came out of Martinique before the arrival of Du Cas. They [the privateers ?] expected Du Cas, with 30 men-of-war and forces, to attack Barbadoes. He sent the news by the Greenwich to Barbadoes. He had sent to each island in his government to put themselves in the best posture they were able. This being the "windermost," best, and richest island was most likely to be attacked first. They were in ill condition to receive them (the French). The regiment sent wanted 200 men; the new raised men required arms, &c., but such as were sent for the inhabitants were distributed to them (the soldiers). Col. Lillingston and several of his officers were taking their pleasure in London. He had but one captain there who had seen service, and very few of the lieutenants and ensigns.

The recruits sent over were either old men or boys, fit for nothing, some so bad the officers were so ashamed of as to discharge. Being unfit for labour they were begging. He expected the greatest service from the planters, who were few but good men. He was "riteing up the walls at Monk's Hill thrown down by the hurricane." The good news of the Duke of Savoy being in France made the islanders believe they should hear no more of any French fleets in that part of the world. All his rhetoric could not persuade them to be at that charge until this alarm. He was fortifying a camp and running a line about their town. Though he could not work miracles, he hoped he should do his duty. He had nobody to assist him, and no engineer; all his hope was they would attack Barbadoes first, and lose so many men there that he might deal with them when they came. Nov. 24. 72. Letter of Lord Cornbury [governor of New York] to the Lord High Treasurer. He was informed that Mr Byerley was refusing to pay any one, and was getting in all the money he could, and that he certainly intended to go off. The Chief Justice complained that he could not get his salary from Mr Byerley, and believed he intended to leave. The writer had ordered the sheriff of New York to arrest him and take good security. It appeared very plainly the books of the revenue were not kept in the custom house nor in his lodgings. Mr Weaver [a previous collector] produced his books every Saturday, the Comrs did the same, and Mr Byerley also the first time he was there, but now refused. He had not produced his accounts to the deputy auditor, and told everybody over his cups that the [governor] and council had nothing to do with him. There were various other complaints of his refusing to pay salaries, and the governor himself could not get his salary. Complains of abusive language from him. Asks what method he is to take with him. Dated New York, 24 9br 1707. 2½ pages.

Dec. 6. 88. Report of the principal officers of the Mint to the Lord High Treasurer on the petitions of (1) William Cooper and David [? Daniel] Allen, merchants; (2) of Sir Talbot Clerk and partners; and (3) of Thomas Chambers, concerning the coinage of copper halfpence and farthings. The first petition asked to be allowed to coin in the Tower 700 tons of English copper in 10 years, under restrictions. It alleges that the petitioner could export copper money to make up in good measure the Cadiz trade, and that their returns would be in bullion and hides. They (the mint officers) had reported on 1 July 1703 that the coinage of copper halfpence and farthings ought to be of the intrinsic value, as well as that of gold and silver (the charges of coinage deducted), and that, whenever necessary, it should be in small quantities only, to supply the decrease and loss of those already coined, and they were confirmed in their opinion by complaints in Parliament of overstocking upon the coinage of 700 tons by the last patent. The nation was now fully stocked in some places. As to the Cadiz trade, they were told the petitioners would carry 17½ tons to the Spanish plantations. There was no objection to this, under restrictions. (2.) This petition prayed to be allowed to send two tons per week of blanks of malleable copper to be coined till 700 tons were disposed of, and to dispense the same when coined. The petitioners proposed to cut a pound weight into 21 pence, with a remedy of a halfpenny, and reckoned to be allowed for the copper 12*d.* per pound, for the hammering and cutting it into blanks 6*d.*, for the dispensing 1*d.*, and to pay for coinage 2*d.*

1707. VOL. CIII.

(3.) Mr Chambers prayed for leave to supply the mint with good English malleable copper at the rate of 12d per pound, and to be paid in halfpence and farthings by tale without any further consideration, which they considered the most advantageous proposal. On the whole the coinage of copper money should be of the intrinsic value and in small quantities. Contracts should be made for the same. He who made the blanks should have no advantage by making them too light or too heavy, and they should be made in the mint, the making of them being part of the coinage, &c. Dated Mint Office, 6 Dec. 1707.

The second minute on the back is:—"14th Apr. 1708. My Lord, upon considering of this report wth the officers of ye Mint, doth not thinke there is any occasion for coyning more farthings & halfe pence at present."

The three petitions referred to, "the case of Sr Talbot Clerke, Bart., and partners," and a draft of part of a similar report to that above described." 9 pages.

Dec. 11. 91. Letter from the Comrs of Excise in Scotland to the [Lord High Treasurer], signifying that they had paid the last 4,000*l.* paid into the Excise Office, London, on their account with the help of some Exchequer bills, which they promised to exchange as cash came to hand. Dec. 12. 92. Letter from D. Luis da Cunha to [ ] as to 24,000 sets of clothing to be provided by Arthur Stert, an English merchant residing at Lisbon, at a cost beyond 60,000*l.* His Excellency was aware of the low price put upon the exchange for Lisbon, so that the correspondents of Arthur Stert dare not undertake the business. The clothes would not be provided in time, and they must be had elsewhere. This would not suit his master or the English manufacturers, and a better market would be found. If his Excellency would accept letters of exchange at the ordinary rate it would much oblige his master and encourage exports from England. Dated December $\frac{12}{23}$ 1707. [French.]

Dec. 13. 93. Copy of letter from Mr Thomas Byerley to the Comrs of Trade and Plantations, stating the difficulties and hindrances he met with in the discharge of his duties as collector and receiver general of the province of New York. He had been suspended by the governor and restored by the Lord High Treasurer, but the books, papers, and recognizances were detained by Mr Fauconier, who acted as commissioner during his suspension, and who had not adjusted his accounts, and the balance must be the first item in his (Mr Byerley's) account. He had represented this to the governor without success. That gentleman being naval officer and chief manager of affairs, they were carried on by him and others contrary to Her Majesty's interest, and whatever was contrary to their own was spurned. He had been threatened to be murdered, to be pulled out of the custom house, &c., and this, though complained of, had gone unpunished. He had given 2,500*l.* security, yet the governor had by the sheriff arrested him, and he had to give 2,000*l.* security to appear before the governor and the council under pretence that he had embezzled the Queen's money, &c. Asking, if complaints were made against him by Lord Cornbury, for time to justify himself. Dated New York, 13 Dec. 1707. 2½ pages.

Dec. 13. 94. An account (signed by Dr David Gregory) of the new regulation of Her Majesty's mint at Edinburgh laid before the Lord High Treasurer. After comparison of the constitution of the mint in Scotland with that at the Tower, and with the Queen's instructions, the Doctor and the other officers added three new clerks during the re-coinage to the Queen's clerk, who was there before, to wit, one for the master, one for the warden, and one for the counter warden. All these four clerks were well instructed in the methods of rating and standarding, and the forms of book-keeping used in the mint of the Tower by the clerk sent by Her Majesty. The great difficulty was in the melting, it being made there with pit coal. In this Dr Gregory made several experiments according to directions from Sir Isaac Newton, and at last such rules of "allaying" were found out and agreed on as by experience were found to make the silver of standard fineness. Dr Gregory continued at Edinburgh until 21 Nov., when the methods of the mint at the Tower being well understood he left. Dated London, 13 Dec. 1707. 1 page.

Dec. 15. 95. Report of William Blathwayt [auditor general of H.M. Plantations in America, to the Lord High Treasurer], on the petition of John Salkeld, clerk, who had assisted in the reduction of the French part of the island of St Christopher's, and had obtained from Coll Codrington, then governor, a grant of part of those lands, but was a sufferer by the burning of his houses and sugar canes the last year by the French, and suffered greatly at Nevis, where he was taken prisoner; praying a confirmation of the grant; recommending that the grant should be confirmed during the present war with France, as intended by Col. Codrington. Dated 15 Dec. 1707.

Minuted:—"24 Xbr 1707. Grantd for 3 years if ye present war so long continues."

The petition and the copy of the grant by the colonel. 4 pages (one double).

Dec. 16. 96. Report of the Comrs of Customs, Edinburgh, to the Lord High Treasurer on the petition of Mr Wallace and others, of Glasgow, concerned in the ship Industry, of Leith, seized at an obscure place in the isle of Bute with French brandy, &c. Sir John Shaw, of Greenock, a gentleman of resolution and good interest, had accepted a commission for seizing vessels coming from France with design to run their goods, and through his endeavours the ship had been seized. Dated 16 Dec. 1707.

The petition referred to. 5½ pages.

[About Dec. 16.] 97. Petition of Peircy Kirke, Esq., housekeeper of Her Majesty's palace of Whitehall, to the Lord High Treasurer for the extension of a lease to 31 years, "according to the custom of the Exchequer," of a parcel of ground adjoining the bowling green in Whitehall, containing 46 feet in front and 18 in depth to the outside walls of the palace, on which he had erected a house, and that a little piece of ground and an old shed of which he had had the use might be included.

Referred 16 Dec. 1707 to the Surveyor General. 1 page.

Dec. 17. 98. Estimate of the quantity of wheat for 15,000 foot and of barley for 6,000 horse in Catalonia for three months or 90 days, together with the charge thereof. Dated 17 Dec. 1707.

There is a minute on the back that it was read on 24 Dec., and that wheat was to be provided as far as they could find shipping for it to be ready to sail with Sir John Leake, but not the barley, as it was as dear by the estimate as the wheat. 2 pages.

Dec. 19. 99. Letter of D. Luis da Cunha commencing "My Lord." His intention was by no means to ask for any part of the subsidies to pay for the clothing in question, not having any orders from the King his master to take that step, and still less to interfere with the contract. The Chevalier Fornes had all the merit imaginable for that business. The exchange was in a pitiable state, being 15 per cent. difference in the intrinsic value of money, which he wished in some manner to prevent, and for which he asked assistance of his Excellency, in case he would accept his letter for the money destined in payment for the clothing. He wished that the manufactures should be taken from England, where they had received so much help, and that the nation should profit therefrom, but it should not be to the manifest ruin of Portugal. [French.] Dated London, 19 Dec. 1707. 2 pages.

Dec. 20. 100. Letter from Lord Cornbury to the Lord High Treasurer, sending papers as to M^r^ Byerley's errors in his accounts. He could not prevail with M^r^ Byerley to state his accounts with the deputy auditor, though he had called upon him several times to do it. What his meaning was he could not tell; he would do nothing but what he pleased. He (Lord Cornbury) begged that M^r^ Byerley might be commanded to state his accounts every quarter, or it would be impossible to transmit them. Nothing less than the Lord Treasurer's commands would do with him. Dated New York, 20 10^ber^ 1707.

Dec. 22. 102. Letter from Comrs of Ordnance to the Lord High Treasurer, laying before him an account of all money sent to Spain, as well as what was paid on foreign bills drawn for the service there since the taking of Barcelona. Dated 22 Dec. 1707.

The account referred to. 2 pages.

Dec. 22. 103. Report of the Attorney General (Harcourt) to the Lord High Treasurer on the report of the Agents for Taxes relating to prosecutions against the collectors and inhabitants of several parishes in the county of Surrey by reason of supers set on them for the duties on houses, in the accounts of Nuthall and Child, late receivers general of the county. His opinion was that there was not sufficient evidence to prosecute the receivers for the receipts of Lucas, a surveyor of the duties, and that process should issue against the collectors and the several parishes, and the stop thereto should be taken off. Dated 22 Dec. 1707.

The report and eight other papers.

[About Dec. 22.] 104. "Mr Gregory King's [report] relating to ye funerall of Sir Cloudesley Shovell." The funerals of such great commanders at sea or land as had been buried publicly at the charge of the government since the Restoration (exclusive of several of the royal family) were only three, viz., (1) the Duke of Albemarle, buried in Westminster Abbey from Somerset House, ao 1670; (2) the Earl of Sandwich, Admiral of the Fleet, who perished at sea in the second Dutch war, ao 1672, brought from Greenwich to the painted chamber Somerset House (sic) by water, and buried from thence in Westminster Abbey; and (3) Sr Edw. Spragge, an Admiral of the Fleet, lost in the same second Dutch war, ao 1672, buried from the paynted chamber at Westmr in Westmr Abbey. The expense of the first estimated at 8,000*l.* or 10,000*l.*, the second 2,000*l.* or 2,500*l.* Of the third various expences in the great wardrobe are given. [Sir Cloudesley Shovel was buried 22 Dec. 1707.] 1¼ pages.

[About Dec. 23.] 105. Report of Mr S. Travers, Surveyor General, to the Lord High Treasurer, on the affidavit of Humphrey Roberts. The surveyor was informed that Lord Bulkeley had a salary of 40 marks per ann., as constable of the Castle of Beaumaris, and that he had taken much lead and timber from the castle, and used it for building on his own estate, and had carried away vast quantities of the best hewn stones for his own use, whereby the castle was impaired. The Lord Bulkeley hoped such an one as the deponent would not be believed against a person of honor, and said he would send affidavits &c., that would set the matter in a very different light, but he (the surveyor) had heard nothing from him since. Mr Owen Hughes, M.P. for Beaumaris, appeared very much alarmed at a report of his house being built of some of the materials, but averred that it was built 60 years ago by one Mr Dean, when a parliament garrison was in the castle, and offered to prove that not one stone of the castle had been used for the additions, and at the Restoration, when that garrison was withdrawn, Robert Lord Bulkeley was constable, who was succeeded by his son, Richard Lord Bulkeley, whom the present lord succeeded, and if any person made use of the materials it must have been by their order or privity in breach of the trust reposed in them, but the present constable had done the main damage. All the accounts agreed that great quantities of stone, lead, and timber had been taken away, and that a good part of them was visible to everybody in several buildings lately erected by his Lordship, and the truth of the affidavit could not be controverted. Dated 5 Dec. 1707.

The affidavit referred to.

A schedule of documents, together with the documents themselves, the first being the memorial of Richard Lord Viscount Bulkeley to the Lord High Treasurer, in reply to the above report, saying that the charges were false. The castle was begun to be built in the time of Edw. II., but never finished; the only apartment which within memory had been fit for use was finished at the expense of the Lord Bulkeley's great grandfather, who adhering to the crown in the civil wars was made a prisoner in the same apartment. If the castle had been a place of defence at all it would have been his interest to support it for his own safety. His ancestors for hundreds of years had been constables there with a fee of 40 marks per ann. The fee had always been considered honorary and not intended for the repair of the castle. Was informed that by an order in council after the Restoration all the castles in North Wales were ordered to be demolished. The castles of Flint, "Ruthland," Conway, Carnarvon, and all the others of North Wales, were more ruinous than this castle, and the materials had been frequently converted to private uses; admits that he had converted some part of the loose stones to finish a building. He had also removed the lead to the amount of several tons to prevent the castle falling down, but it was laid up in a cellar.

The last document of the set is a replication or answer to the above memorial. It would be proved that the castle was finished and made a place of defence, and that in the year 1660 it was in good repair, garrisoned with above 100 men, with a square within the inner wall sufficient to muster a regiment. The present Lord Bulkeley's grandfather in 1674 had built a ship, and had taken the guns from the castle to put on board thereof for his own use. The replication also controverts many assertions in the memorial referred to.
